No Pleasing Him.

"A woman who tries to look like a book is a fool," announced Mr. Jawback.

"I should say she is," said Mrs. J., looking him over carefully.

And even though she agreed with him he didn't like it, somehow.

FRIEND IN NEED REWARDED.

A big picnic wagon, loaded with a dozen men, numerous hampers and baskets of eatables and several kegs of beer, was moving south on Troost avenue just after midnight Sunday morning, says the Kansas City Times. It was raining in torrents. They were beyond the city limits when the sleepy horses drew the wagon to the side of the street into a rut and it toppled over. The hampers, baskets, kegs, and merry party were piled into a heap, without injury to anything except a few pies and sandwiches. The horses stopped and the merry party held a council to determine how to right the overturned vehicle.

Just then the good samaritan appeared. He lived across the street. The picnickers appealed to him for help. He harnessed his team, procured a long chain and after a long pull in the mud and rain succeeded in drawing the wagon from the ditch and righting it. He helped the once merry party load their impedimenta and then suggested compensation.

"What!" the party cried in chorus. "I think the time of myself and team is worth something here in the middle of a rainy night," the samaritan said.

"Go to grass," is a free translation of the picnickers' individual and collective replies as they clambered into their wagon and drove away.

The samaritan thought a great deal and said a few things. Then he saw a keg of beer lying in the ditch which had been overlooked by its owners.

"Virtue is its own reward," he quoted, and added, "But the keg of beer will help some."

He fastened a chain about the keg and hitching his team to it drove to his barn.

Man and His Ways.

Ask any hostess who is sensible-minded, and who wishes to entertain in a rational manner, what she thinks of the manners of the men who come to her dinner-dance parties, says a writer in the London World. She will tell you that they are absolutely cannibal, that they will often throw her over at the last moment if they get what they fancy is a better offer, that they think nothing of keeping a whole dinner party waiting for half an hour after the appointed time, that their demeanor and bearing seem to imply that they have done a great favor in coming at all, and that in many cases when they get to the dance, they ignore the daughters of the house at which they have dined altogether, unless they happen to be in their particular set. These, one may say, are the lighter accusations that are daily being brought against the spoiled young men of fashion. But there are others, and more unpleasant. Ask some really nice girl—and there are some in London, even in these days of bad influences—what the conversation of her dance partners is like. She will divide them into three classes—the idiotic, the really good fellows, and those whom you must pretend not to hear or not to understand when they talk to you. It is a most regrettable reflection that this third class has decidedly increased in the last few years.

It Didn't Work.

Three couple, husbands and wives of the highest respectability, at a New York city hotel a few evenings since and the host and his wife directed that the coffee be sent to their rooms. This was done, and the waiter, calling later for the cups, saucers and spoons, found that three of the spoons were missing. He reported the matter to the manager, who quickly made a demand for the return of the three spoons. The host and hostess were greatly embarrassed, and you may imagine the feelings of their guests, but the manager was obdurate. A diligent search disclosed the missing spoons beneath the table. The host and hostess on the following day protested in the strongest terms to the manager of the hotel, and got this reply:

"Sorry, indeed, very sorry you were embarrassed, but we stand by our statement. We don't dispute your word, but we would rather have you leave the hotel than criticise him. He knows the city and we are compelled to take off in front and lose fully $25. [illegible] hotel [illegible] Chicago Tribune article under the

I will mail you free, to prove merit, samples of my Dr Shoop's Restorative and my Book on either Dyspepsia, The Heart or the Kidneys. Troubles of the Stomach, Heart or Kidneys, are merely symptoms of a deeper ailment. Don't make the common error of treating symptoms only. Symptom treatment is treating the result of your ailment, and not the cause. Weak Stomach nerves—the inside nerves—mean Stomach weakness, always. And the Heart and Kidneys as well, have their controlling or inside nerves. Weaken these nerves, and you inevitably have weak vital organs. Here is where Dr. Shoop's Restorative has made its fame. No other remedy even claims to treat the "inside nerves." Also for bloating, biliousness, bad breath or complexion use Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Write me today for a sample and free book. Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. The Restorative is sold by Cotton Drug Co.

On Second Thought.

"Yes, I remember; how foolish I was!"

"Do you consider that it was foolish?"

MAKES OWN WHISKY

BILL WILLIAMS MOST NOTED SOUTHERN MOONSHINER.

Has Long Been the Despair of Georgia Revenue Officers—Destroy His Stills, but Cannot Capture Him.

Few distillery captures have been more highly prized than that made by United States Deputy Marshals Dave and Frank Riley near Oconee. Wild Bill Williams, a white man who had been a terror to the community because he was operating a very large business in open defiance to the leading citizens, was the man the officers sought, but this time, as on many other occasions, instead of fighting with his reputed steel jacket bullets, he dodged into the woods and left his still, warm from the fires of four months, to be demolished.

Wild Bill has never been captured but once. He has been a professional moonshiner for years. Frank Riley, one of the deputies who has been this long time in search of the man, managed once to locate him and he was brought into court. For some reason Wild Bill braved the circumstances and came to Macon. The deputy caught sight of him and they was a race for life.

The supposed outlaw had no weapon of defense upon him save a barlow knife, and trusted to his feet to save him. With half an hour spent in dodging corners and climbing over and under freight cars in railway yards, the deputy outran Williams and stopped him in a struggle which lasted long enough to exhaust both men. Judge Emory Speer placed him under $500 bond, and as soon as a bondsman was secured the still operator was out again stirring cane beer and sour mash in his native haunts.

A constant effort has been made by United States Marshal George White and his force of deputies to locate this man, but twice within the last six months have the officers destroyed large outfits without capturing the operator.

The next information coming from Wild Bill's retreat was that which led the officers into the woods near Oconee. With rifles and revolvers they crept through the spot where the outfit was in operation and were forced to smash it without having captured a single person. But since that time plans have been made which, it is believed, will result in bringing the man to answer. Reports to headquarters and recommendations following have put the officers to new zeal, but Williams is at present beyond their reach.

The man who is so badly wanted is unmarried. He has no regular habits other than the one determination to operate a distillery. He is a wanderer and shows up always in the spot where he is least expected. He looks to be a brave man, is a good example of the backwoods type and is friendly and polite as the most refined. His life is more adventurous than that of the officers who search for him in every way and woods with rifles in hand, for although it would be a prison life of severity were he captured he would not injure his fellow man. The striking characteristic is his firm, fearless in his profession as a harmless vocation.—Atlanta Constitution.

Would Exterminate All Rats.

"Prof." J. D. Smith of Cleveland wants to rid the United States of rats, mice, cockroaches and vermin. He says he can do it by the use of certain chemicals. In handling these chemicals he has at various times made himself very sick.

"Some day they will kill me," he says, "but I am not afraid. If I am able to carry out my plans I shall be satisfied."

As he talks he drags packages of chemicals from his pockets—blue vitriol and acids of various kinds. His hands are burned through the handling of them, but he fondles them affectionately and does not mind.

If the city of Cleveland would give the professor $10,000 a year, he says he would make a varmin and rodent free community. Smith not only slays these pests; he annihilates them. By playing on their appetites he lures them to an awful doom. To the professor, a dead rat is as dangerous as a live one. Each, he declares, spreads typhoid and like diseases.

Therefore he has prepared a chemical mixture which will slowly incinerate the rat. As soon as the rat partakes of the chemical an inextinguishable fire is lit in his interior. The fire burns as relentlessly as the theater villain pursues. There is no escape for the rat. He cannot leave enough of himself behind to make a decent funeral.

Phosphorus is the base of the mixture which the professor uses. After he has gathered remnants of food into a pail he adds a purple and white powder. Then some lemon. As soon as the rat partakes of this, he is on his way to a private fireworks display.

Quail That Were Quail.

On the big plantations no gun was ever fired at a quail. There was no setting until the master said the word. He knew exactly how "bob white" was ripe for dinner, and woe to the poacher! A load of shot (buckshot at that) was none too good for him. Five coveys of a dozen birds each were regarded as enough for one drive, making a capture of 60 fat, plump, round morsels for the table, which we of this day and generation may never know. The master would look through the coops and release a dozen of the finest cocks and hens for breeding. The remainder were smothered for dinner in the old-fashioned southern style before the animal heat was out of them. Or they went into a great Brunswick stew, with squirrels, squab-chickens, rabbits, slices of salt pork, rice and the usual vegetables used in the making of this, the foremost, of all southern dishes.—N. Y. Sun.

Farms of Sweet Peas.

Sweet peas have 88 divisions and some 300 subdivisions. In California, where almost all the flower seeds are grown, one farm of 500 acres is given up to the production of sweet peas alone. The total production yearly is about 350,000 pounds, and even when this amount is augmented by the yield from smaller farms it is almost impossible to meet the demand.

Sweet peas are the most popular flowers in America for home gardens, on account of their sweetness, and even these cannot always compete with the sweet peas.

Where country air and sunshine abound sweet peas hold unrivaled supremacy, and nasturtiums are to-day for window boxes and scant little city gardens, where a small back yard must do duty for a flower lover.—Los Angeles Times.

GoldCoinTonics
6 Feeds for One Cent
Your stock needs tonics. They aid digestion, also cure and prevent diseases. They will make you extra profits

Why is it that Gold Coin Stock Tonics are considered so much better than most foods? Why is it that Dairymen and Farmers who do not and will not use stock foods are making and feeding Stock Tonics? Why is it that College Professors, Farm Experimenters and State Officials endorse Gold Coin Tonics and not stock foods? Gold Coin Stock Tonics, Farm Stock only digests 25 per cent of what they eat. Gold Coin Tonics increase digestion, tone up the system, strengthen and build up the constitution, thereby making your farm animals worth more money.

The Truth About Digestion

Did it ever occur to you that the digestive apparatus of the four different classes of farm animals are entirely different and therefore naturally require different treatment and different feeding. For example, clam shells and grits are good for poultry but would be very bad for cows. Science has proven that different animals digest foods act differently on different animals. Therefore it stands to reason that medicines and tonics should be prepared to act on the digestive apparatus for which they are intended. That is just why Gold Coin Stock Tonics are prepared in four different forms. "Gold Coin Horse Tonic" "Gold Coin Cattle Tonic" "Gold Coin Hog Tonic" for hogs and, "Gold Coin Poultry Tonic" for poultry.

Judge D B Searle Says!

Gentlemen: Your animal tonics are all right. I highly endorse them. I believe a tonic like yours which imparts the appetite and makes the food rations go further is valuable. I will increase digestion, make the stock raisers more profit, and prevent disease. Gold Coin Stock Tonics while conditioning my show stock for the State Fair. You have my heartiest endorsement as your goods certainly are scientifically correct.
D B Searle, Judge of District Court,

Prof. Thomas Shaw Opinion

Gold Coin Stock Food Company, St. Paul Minn.
The ingredients used in the manufacture of Gold Coin Stock Tonics have been submitted to me and my opinion asked with reference to the influence they are likely to exert on animals. With reference thereto I may say that they are of a character which would be helpful to all animals out of tone. The difference is the combination used for the different classes of animals. I regard a wise distinction. Properly balanced rations are the basis of profitable feeding, and the use of tonics when preparing them for or during fattening periods is very necessary to secure good results and also to keep animals in good condition generally by excessive feeding.

Woman's Christian Temperance Union

Edited by E. E. Linn. Our Motto 'For God and Home and Every Land'

The opening of the eleventh International Congress against Alcoholism was preceded on Sunday July 28 by a great demonstration procession in which all Swedish temperance associations took part.

The weather was unfavorable, frequent showers occurring but a vast line of people marched steadily for hours through the broad streets of Stockholm, and up the height leading to the park. There were over thirty thousand people in the line of march while thousands watched them from the heights above and all along the way the streets were lined on both sides with curious observers. Over three hundred banners waving represented the different temperance societies. These bright bits of color with the gay uniforms and picturesque costumes made a sight long to be remembered. The Congress assembled on Monday in Emanuel church which was decorated with the Swedish colors while the flags of all nations hung at convenient distances all about the church.

Prince Gustaf Adolph welcomed the Congress saying this was one of the most important social questions before the civilized world today and he gladly accepted the honor of opening such an important gathering. He said, "It is now generally recognized that not only those who themselves are drunkards are ruined both physically and morally, but that their children too are from birth upwards less strong in body as well as mind predisposed to become criminals."

Statistics show that of all the crimes committed in this country during one year, a very large number are carried out under the influence of alcohol, and it is known for certain that a large number of criminals, if they do not themselves commit the crime under its influence, yet their being led to do so is for the greater part due to their having become degenerate through their parents misuse of alcoholic drinks. Through means drinking the home suffers from poverty and the wife drinks too then the children have only to be born, them up and with no bad an example always before them, they have no help to keep them straight in life.

The prince seemed very much interested in the temperance work of the United States and his wife, princess Margaret of England, is a white ribboner and the strength and influence of his family is on the side of temperance. All visitors agreed there was more dumbness in Stockholm than any other city they had ever visited but thought this might be partly accounted for by the fact that under the Gothenburg system no one is allowed to remain in the drinking places.

All who passed through the 1,000 acres of rooms filled with temperance literature and charts, literature in all languages of the world, must have been impressed with the fact that the whole world is now awake on the temperance question.

Judge William Jefferson Pollard of St. Louis, has received a great compliment from the British government. What is known as the Pollard plan of dealing with inebriates whose arrested has been adopted by the liberal administration. What some additions it has been incorporated in the government's probation or after-care bill. The cases of juvenile court of Judge Pollard here last summer. He came on a pleasure trip but the temperance folks got hold of him and kept him busy responding his method of dealing with drunks who came before his court. The English go further even than did Judge Pollard for their reformation Act. Requires the probationer in addition to total abstinence to keep away from "undesirable places and companions. Probation officers are appointed and paid to look after the probationers and must periodical reports. Frequent cases are re-arrested and tried for the original offense if they take even one drink.

The state prohibition ticket is as follows: For supreme judge, J. D. Graves of Richardson county; for regents, John Van Sloss of Gage, J. T. Roberts, Pawnee; for railroad commissioner, Samuel Lichty of Richardson. Mr. Roberts' name will not appear on the ticket owing to a mistake of the clerks in certifying the nomination in time, but his friends are requested to write in his name on the ticket, they vote.

Helen Lippincottarained a party of about fifteen young ladies at her home in this city last Saturday evening in honor of Harriet Shackleton of Beatrice and Fannie Phillips of Table Rock. The early part of the evening was spent on the lawn in social conversation, and later the party retired to the house and enjoyed a musical program. Light refreshments were served and everyone present experienced an enjoyable time.—Pawnee Chief.

Four young boys of the town were arrested Wednesday evening on a charge of thievery, and two of the number stand a good show of being sent to the reform school. It has been noticed on several occasions the past week that the cash drawer at the Boyd & Lyford store had been mysteriously robbed of its contents. On Thursday evening $11.05 was taken, the offense being repeated on Friday, and again on Sunday and Wednesday evening, $20.35 being stolen in all. A close watch was kept on the building, and on Wednesday evening one of the culprits, Olen Ghum, was caught in the act, he was immediately placed under arrest, and confessed his guilt and also stated that three of his young comrades, O A Cooper, and Ralph and Al Shaffer, were likewise connected in the affair, the Cooper lad also admitted his guilt, but it is not positively known that the Shaffer boys entered the store, but, nevertheless watched the proceedings from the outside. Admittance was gained to the store through a broken window pane in the rear of the building. Sheriff Fenton was called from Falls City and took the party of juveniles to the county seat the following morning.—H E Boyd went down on the same train and filed charges against the boys.—Humboldt Standard.

The Limit of Life

The most eliticent medical scientists are unanimous in the conclusion that the generally accepted limits of human life is many years below the attainment possible with the advanced knowledge of which the race is now possessed. The critical period that determines its duration, seems to be between 50 and 60; the proper care of the body during this decade cannot be too strongly urged; carelessness then being fatal to long life and a healthy old age. To this end nothing is so potent as Electric Bitters, the scientific tonic medicine that revitalizes every organ of the body. Guaranteed by Cotton Drug Co. 50c.

Humboldt, Neb., Aug. 22.—A somewhat romantic marriage was scheduled to take place at Smithfield, Neb., today, the contracting parties being Elliot J Perry and his divorced wife, whose maiden name was Miss Winona Philpot, and who was raised from childhood in this city. The latter was within the last year granted a divorce from her husband, suit being instituted in this county on the grounds of desertion and her maiden name was restored. Since her husband left her about two years ago she has been residing a portion of the time with her father, James W Philpot, of this city, later going to Omaha, where she remained for sometime. A short time ago Perry went to Omaha, the couple met and effected a reconciliation, and after the same and visited a couple of weeks with her folks here, late yesterday for Smithville where Perry has been engaged in the painting business since leaving here. Her intention was to meet her divorced husband at her destination, where they would to remunied in marriage, making their home at Smithfield. A peculiar feature is the fact that if this ceremony takes place as planned it will be the third time the couple has wed at the marriage altar. When they were originally married some eight or nine years ago an error was made and the minister performed the ceremony in this county while the license had been issued in Pawnee county. When this fact was discovered the minister was again called and the parties went over into Pawnee county and had the ceremony performed a second time. If there is anything in the proposition that the third time is the charm Mr. and Mrs. Perry should stke happy ever after."

The third marriage ceremony was performed at Holdrege on Wednesday by Rev. G O Wilson. The first ceremony was performed in Table Rock, but the license had been secured in Richardson county, hence it was illegal and the second ceremony was performed in Richardson county in order to legalize the marriage.

A D Gise, the Table Rock grain specialist, was in town during the closing hours of the Pioneer Picnic and after shaking hands with 913 old friends went down to the ball park to see Verdon annihilate Johnson.

After supper Mr. Gise, Col. Pemberton and the reporter gathered on the school house steps to "see the balloon go up." While the balloon was being inflated Mr. Gise grew reminiscent and related this: "You remember that I used to live in Beloit, Kas. Well, for several years I operated a general store there and like most of the other stores in Beloit I issued trade checks redeemable in goods at my store. The country fair was held in Beloit and one September the fair was attended by my old acquaintance of mine, an illiterate but rather sharp farmer who resided in the rural districts about forty miles away. His name was Joe Fry. Joe said he needed some things and so had brought along a crock containing forty pounds of first grade butter worth a quarter a pound. Well I took the butter at my store, and after considerable looking Joe took $7 worth of goods which left three dollars coming to him. This I handed him in trade checks. As they were a new idea then these were the first trade checks Joe had seen. As soon as he got them in his hands he immediately began to ask me what they were and what they were good for. Noting the troubled look on his face I explained their value and told him to bring them to my store and I would give him three dollars in trade for them. Joe, you know, is not exactly a shining light in the realms of intellect, but he is honest as the day is long and he accepted my explanation and left for home. Joe took the checks and went away and I forgot the matter entirely. Winter came on and the months rolled by. Yesterday Joe Fry came to my store and I noticed the following spring chickens in the window. The chicken market was strong so I rigged up a big chicken wagon and with a hired man drove over the surrounding country after spring fryers. During my trip in one direction I had occasion to stop at the home of my old friend Joe Fry. Joe had a flock of young chickens and I bought every one of them. They footed up thirty-six dollars and not having the change I tendered Joe two $20 bills in payment. Joe went into the house and returned with four hard biscuits which he gave me. As we had just had dinner and the biscuits were stale I asked him what they were; he said they were trade checks. The idea struck me as preposterous. Joe was very serious as he told me that his little biscuits were worth a dollar a piece, redeemable in spring chickens, at his farm the following spring or just as soon as the next crop were hatched. I tried to reason with him but he reminded me that he still had the trade checks I had given him the preceding fall. I waited and pulled out with those biscuits safely stowed away in a little box under the wagon seat.

NEBRASKA NEWS

SEVERAL TOWNS ARE VISITED BY THE FIRE FIEND.

EXETER THE LATEST VICTIM

Axtell Swept By Flames for Second Time, and Loses Many Business Houses—Gilead Also Has a Blaze.

Exeter is the latest Nebraska city to be visited by a destructive fire. One of the costliest conflagrations in the history of the town broke out early in the morning and was not checked till several hours of strenuous work by the fire department. The blaze originated in the rear part of A. Radford, in the rear of the Union block. It consumed the produce store and then attacked the larger block, the first floor of which was occupied by the hardware and furniture store of W. F. Dickinson. Part of the basement contained a pool hall owned by T. W. Glenn. Quite the top floor was used as an opera house and by the Odd Fellows and other lodges. The building and contents were entirely destroyed. Mr. Dickinson carried a stock valued at about $8,000 with $5,000 insurance.

After consuming the Union block the fire ate its way to the south. The damage was as follows: Ed Eaton's pool hall, except the tables; the postoffice, with part of the furniture and fixtures; Jake Beckert's saloon, except part of the stock; M. C. Eberstein's confectionery store, with part of the stock; A. Radford's grocery, H. T. Wilson shoe store, most of the stock saved.

The fire was checked at the shoe store, which was wrecked by the fighters. No wind prevailed, and the fire was confined to one side of the street. The Bell Telephone company lost about a block of cables and wires. Most of the burned buildings and stocks were insured. Exeter has at present no waterworks, but a system has been provided for and will be installed soon.

Second Fire at Axtell

Another disastrous fire, the second within two weeks, swept the business section of Axtell, on the north and west side of the main street is in ruins. On the morning of August 6, the east lower half of Reed street was destroyed by fire involving a loss of about $60,000 and this last fire will probably exceed this figure in loss of property.

Disastrous Fire at Gilead.

One-third of the village of Gilead, over the line in Thayer county, was destroyed by fire at an early hour. The fire was discovered in the rear of Mrs. Richa's millinery store at 3:30 and had gained considerable headway at that time. It spread rapidly to the adjoining building which was occupied by the Gilead State bank, the cashier, Frank Nelson, living in the rear. J. M. Meyer's restaurant was next fired and the meat market owned by the same man was consumed.

CAR KILLS A SMALL GIRL.

Six-year-old Child Run Over By an Omaha Motor.

Milina Kelser, six years old, 1724 South Thirteenth street, was instantly killed by a north bound Farnam car at Tenth and Lincoln avenue. She was the daughter of Abraham Kelser who conducts a second hand store at 1724 South Tenth street. With her sister, Anna, who was only two years older, she was sent on an errand about 3:30 and on returning they started out from the store, ran out to where their mother was waiting for them, and started across the street just as a car came by. The older girl mentioned her sister to try to pass in front of it, but she laughed and ran ahead. She was carried thirty feet after being struck and the body was frightfully mangled.

Last Homestead in Merrick.

What is believed to be the last homestead in Merrick county has been filed on by Lee E. Nichols of Palmer. It consists of seventy acres in a narrow strip of this county running up between Nance and Howard counties, north of the Loup river. This same piece of property was filed on once before, but it was abandoned before the holder had resided on it the necessary length of time.

Governor Turns It Down.

"I am not in sympathy with the movement," wrote Governor Sheldon in reply to a letter received from St. Louis asking him to appoint delegates to a convention which is to propose amendments to the federal constitution on the question of federal jurisdiction and states' rights. He does not believe the people of Nebraska are worrying about any conflict between the states and federal government at this time. He thinks the rights of states have been been pretty well defined. He also remembers the Colorado convention which was called evidently for the purpose of denouncing President Roosevelt's policy, but the result here relating to the disposition of public lands.

Death Sentence Suspended.

The death sentence of Harrison Clarke, the Omaha murderer, was suspended by Chief Justice Sedgwick until the next meeting of the court in September or until further orders of the court. Judge J. B. Strode of Lincoln appeared for the condemned man and showed the chief justice that the court must first give the state's hearing on a motion for a rehearing before the case is finally disposed of and the judgment executed. The attorney-general did not oppose the plea for a stay of execution but acquiesced in the statement of Judge Strode. The death sentence was to have been carried out August 30 according to the former order of the supreme court.

No Contract for Building.

The board of public lands and buildings has fully decided to buy material for the addition to the home of the friendless and for interior changes necessary to set off the orthopedic hospital from the home for the friendless, providing the state finds that dealers in material will sell to the state. If wholesalers sell to the state it is understood that a certain percentage of the profit will go to local dealers. Much old material on hand can be used in making the change. All lump sum bids were rejected as being too high and the work may be given to a contractor for a percentage of the total cost of labor and material.

Pleased With Nebraska.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Edwards arrived in Hastings from their home at Versailles, Ky., and will make an extended visit at the home of Mrs. Edward's sister, Mrs. T. J. Steele. This is Mr. Edward's first visit to this state and he expresses himself as very much pleased with Nebraska.

"Passing Tom" at Fremont.

Mrs. W. G. Evans and Mrs. W. A. Lowery at the home of the former in Fremont, were badly frightened when they saw the face of a man at the back window. The ladies screamed and then they called up the police by telephone. An officer who responded found nothing save a bunch of photographs. The photographs were those of a Hindoo performer who was here with a circus a few weeks ago. Evidently they had been left by the man at the window.

FOR 2-CENT RATE

KANSAS RAILROAD BOARD WILL BE ASKED TO ACT.

COMPLIANCE DEEMED LIKELY

Roads May Grant Concession Without a Struggle—Complaint Charges That Kansas People Are Discriminated Against.

A Topeka, Kas., August 26 dispatch says: It may not be necessary for the state board of railroad commissioners to take much time before ordering an emergency passenger rate of 2 cents per mile. George W. Kanavel, chairman of the board, said that he believed that it would not be necessary for the board to have a hearing at all. He thinks that all that will be necessary will be for the members to meet and decide on the advisability of declaring an emergency and putting the 2-cent rate into effect at once and ordering the railroads to charge not more than 2 cent per mile for hauling passengers. If this position is right Kansas may have a 2-cent rate within a few days. The board on Tuesday will have its first regular meeting since the governor gave out his letter threatening to call a special session of the legislature to have a 2-cent law enacted unless the board acted at once.

Should the railroads decide not to put the rate into effect, a legal fight might be precipitated. The state officials seem to believe that the railroads will not make a fight, as the public pressure is too strong, and they are too much afraid of possible drastic action which might be taken by the legislature should a special session be called.

Further developments tending to show that the low rate will become effective in Kansas at once appeared Sunday and it now seems to be generally believed that the roads will make the rate effective shortly after the order is issued by the board.

J. M. Connell, general passenger agent of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, had a long talk with E. C. Shiner, secretary of the board, and also with Mr. Grattan, M. A. Low, general attorney for the Rock Island, and A. Scott Loomis, general attorney for the Union Pacific, held a secret meeting yesterday and it is said that the whole matter was carefully considered. It is believed by many men in Topeka that the railroads will make a hard fight to prevent the board putting in the rate, but when the order is once issued the fight will be purely nominal and the rate will be effective.

PREPARING FOR LONG TRIP.

Torpedo Flotilla Will Also Go to the Pacific Coast.

The naval torpedo flotilla, which Secretary Metcalf has announced would go to the Pacific coast in December at the same time as Admiral Evans' battleship fleet, consists of eight vessels, the Hull, Truxton, Whipple, Hopkins, Worden, Stewart, Lawrence and MacDonough. Whether all these vessels will be in condition to make the long voyage then officials are not now prepared to say. The flotilla is commanded by Lieutenant Commander Anderson, but he gives way October 1 to Lieutenant H. L. Cone, who commanded the Dale, which accompanied the destroyers to China four years ago.

MAY BRING A COUNTER SUIT.

Federation of Labor to Go After Manufacturers.

Following a meeting of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor in Washington, D. C. President Gompers said that most probably the federation would bring a counter suit against the National Manufacturers' association, charging that body with conspiracy. He stated that the association recently met in New York with the object of devising means for the injury of organized labor and, that it has been made evident that there is to be concerted effort against that interest.

The executive council of the American Federation of Labor has pledged its members to use their utmost endeavors to bring about an agreement between the carpenters and the woodworkers, who have been in a dispute for some time over the question of jurisdiction. The woodworkers have rejected all overtures for amalgamation.

Mr. Barth was very sensitive to criticism. He was a widower and leaves three young sons.

"The Indian situation has improved a great deal in the recent past. In fact the condition of the Indians was never better. The Indians in Oklahoma are divided on the statehood question. Some of the Indians object to accepting the allotment of land, preferring to live in their old way, but the majority are satisfied with the action of the government."

BACK TO OLD FILTH

CUBA FAILS TO KEEP PROMISE TO REMAIN CLEAN.

MAGOON MAKES COMPLAINT

The war department has made public a long cable report from Governor Magoon of Cuba, which startled the medical officers, showing as it does, that in the short period since the withdrawal of the American government of intervention and their assumption of American government by the Cuban army of pacification there has been woeful neglect of sanitary precautions and an almost complete disregard of the treaty obligation under which the Palma government was placed to keep the island clean and healthful, so that it should no longer be a source of danger to the United States and other countries. The governor's report also discloses the fact that the fever in this last outbreak has not been confined to the hospitals corps men, but has extended to other soldiers.

He also indicates that the evil sanitary conditions cannot be cured this year, in spite of the most vigorous efforts on the part of the American authorities in which it appears they received little support from the native Cuban physicians.

SELLS OUT TO BEEF TRUST.

Independent Company in New York Goes Out of Business.

The company, it is stated, will be merged into the meat combination on October 1. The New York Butchers' Dressed Meat company was organized by retail butchers who declared after the United Dressed Beef company had been sold to the trust by the organizers, the wholesale butchers, angered at this desertion of the independent opposition to the big combination, a score of the most wealthy retailers started the new company to curb the power of the trust in greater New York.

NEED MONEY FOR THE CANAL.

Urgency Deficiency of Eight Million Dollars Asked.

Realizing the urgency of the request made by the Isthmian canal commission for permission to incur a deficiency of $8,000,000 in order to avoid a partial suspension of the canal construction, Acting Secretary Oliver has been in telegraphic correspondence with Secretary Taft and Solicitor General Rodgers of the commission. WILLIAM H. TAFT ON ISSUES.

Secretary of War in Line With The President.

A Columbus, O., Aug. 19 dispatch says W. H. Taft, secretary of war, made what he pleased to term his "political confession of faith," at memorial hall tonight.

Secretary Taft declares the railroad rate law to be one of the best enactments of the last congress, opening the way more fully to stop discriminations, rebates and other railroad evils. He answers some objections made to the bill by Mr. Bryan, and admits that amendments are necessary.

Mr. Taft says he is opposed to government ownership, and tells why.

He discusses the trust question and defines unlawful monopoly. He would not eradicate trusts, but would regulate unlawful combinations, and believes that imprisonment of one or two of the chief promoters would have a healthful effect.

State legislation is competent to deal with the question of swollen fortunes.

The secretary concurs absolutely in the policies of President Roosevelt, and denies that they tend toward socialism.

He pays considerable attention to W. J. Bryan's theories of government.

He favors change in tariff schedules, but says that any attempt to change the present system to a free trade basis will lead to disaster.

He gives the president credit for present day reforms.

TO ENJOIN LABOR LEADERS

A significant legal action was begun in the supreme court of the District of Columbia by James W. Van Cleave, president of the national association of manufacturers, to enjoin Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and other officers of the American federation of labor and several of its subsidiary organizations from using the boycott and so-called "unfair" list. Mr. Van Cleave institutes the suit in his individual capacity as the head of a large manufacturing company of St. Louis of which he is the president, whose products are alleged to have been declared "unfair" by the labor unions, but the significance of the action lies in its being a test case, wherein Mr. Van Cleave, as head of the manufacturers' association, seeks to permanently enjoin organized labor from using the "unfair" or "we don't patronize" lists in the federation's fight against firms and individuals.

The papers were filed in Washington in order that personal service might be immediately obtained against a large number of the labor leaders named in the complaint, who are in Washington in attendance upon a general conference.

At the close of the conference between the Attorney General and District Attorney Sims of Chicago and attorneys for the Chicago & Alton railroad relative to the question of immunity claimed in behalf of the railroad Attorney General Bonaparte said that this was to be the end of that matter and he could make in regard to the matter until after he had made a further communication to Judge Landis. He will communicate with the judge without delay.

DAVID WINS THE THRONE

STORY BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1907, by the Author, W. G. Eliott.)

Scripture Authority: — 2 Samuel 2:1-32.

SERMONETTE.

David's success brought with it no bitterness of regret over the means by which that success had been won.

His David purchased success at the compromise of principle, or the commission of crime, it would have cast a cloud upon his life which would have overshadowed him to the very grave itself.

Take success in the world today which is achieved by questionable means, how certainly do the misdeeds uncover themselves at last, and relentlessly and persistently follow the perpetrator.

Success won by any but fair means brings unrest of soul, and merits the contempt and scorn of the world.

What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world at the sacrifice of honor, or loyalty to God's law, or service to his brother man?

Faith that can wait brings success which is of real worth. The road of present expediency does not lead to the land of perfect realization.

It was a long time from the anointing at Bethlehem until the crowning at Hebron. But the God who promises at Bethlehem is the God who can keep through the vicissitudes of the years and can fulfill to the minutest detail his spoken word.

The man who is willing to take only the success which God gives is the man into whose hands God commits his most important trusts.

How often in the chapters before us does God echo the statement that David "did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord" as to the courses he should pursue. Even this man of affairs with the discipline of the years upon him, was not to depend upon his own wisdom. He must seek the Divine guidance, by which alone he could walk. In the straight path which would deliver him from the snares of the enemy and establish him in the kingdom which so long before had been promised him.

In all of his tribulations and adversities David was the cheerful, trusting child of God, and from above even while his feet walked the unbertain pathways of the world.

We may not all be called to kingdoms, but we may all have the privilege of the Divine guidance and the consciousness that God's presence is with us to be the place we fill ever so humble.

THE STORY.

AFTER the ocean tempest come the subdued winds and the subsiding waves; the heavens stretch blue and beautiful from horizon to horizon, and the golden sunshine fills all the balmy air. But along the rock-bound shore the wreckage lies in mad confusion and a reminder of the storm of the night before. There in mute protest to Nature's friendly mood are the torn and shattered timbers of the noble craft which has gone down into the merciless maw of the mighty waters. There strewn along the beach is the water-soaked cargo, and down beneath the confusion of piled wreckage appears the hand, the foot, the battered head of some hapless victim. Nature so peaceful and reassuring, and yet bringing to the bereaved no comfort in the hour which contemplates the ruin before it.

So was it in Israel. The storm of battle has passed; the clash of arms is stilled, the thunder of rushing war chariots and the mad cries of multitudes of men joined in death struggle have died away, and those who have not fallen in battle have scattered to their homes while the victorious army of the Philistines laden with plunder has returned to the land. The sky is blue as before, the sun cheery and warm, the breezes laden with perfume from the flowering fields, and the birds uncommonly full of the melody of war—of the King and his sons slain, and of the mourning in many a home in Israel whither the father, and the son, the sweetheart and brother would never more return—pouring out their little souls in glad melody, but in the hearts of the people a note of deep anguish and mute foreboding. Oh, the agony of those days, weeping for the lost and fearing for the living! With blanched cheeks and arm trembling lips the people talked together of the tragic end of King Saul and his sons, of the mutilation of their bodies, of their hanging from the walls of Beth-shan. A ghastly trophy of the fortunes of war, of the placing of the king's armor in the temple of Ashtaroth the Philistine god; of these and the thousand and one other bloody details of the terrible battle the people talked, and wondered what further misfortune awaited the nation.

With Saul and his three sons dead, who was there to lead the nation? Confusion and uncertainty prevailed. Even Abner the leader of the hosts of Israel was apparently unable to rally the forces and suggest some plan of action. The people were as sheep without a shepherd. So for days and weeks the disorder and confusion continued, even as far south as in the land of Judah. And there the stirring reports of the battle with its ill consequences to Israel were repeated over and over again, and the same questions stirred the hearts of the people as to who now would lead them as troubled the northern tribes. In the spirit of much depression the elders of Judah came together to consider the situation, meeting secretly in one of the little rooms over the gate of the city assembled at Hebron, their chief city, news of the meeting might reach the ears of the Philistines and stir them to immediate attack.

It was but natural that the first thought should be of David, and some were for his immediate sending of a messenger to him inviting his return to Judah, but just as they were about to do so a runner brought tidings to the effect that David had joined with those of Achish, the Philistine king, and had shared in the recent battle which had resulted so disastrously to the army of Israel.

"Yea," replied the messenger. "Thou knowest how he has been dwelling in the land of the Philistines for now these many months, and how that Achish gave him Ziklag in which to dwell. And Achish made league with him and trusted him as he might a brother, so that when he gathered all his armies to go against the armies of Israel he took David and his men along."

A long painful silence followed this disconcerting news. Whither, now, indeed, would Judah turn. David had failed them. Now that he had taken sides against his own countrymen there could never more be place for him in Judah. And with even greater depression than before the elders departed to their homes.

But the next day strange things had happened in Judah. The elders sent messengers to each other with the word:

"Hath David sent aught to thee? Behold, when I arrived home I found there awaiting me a body of soldiers of Judah David had sent me with loyal greetings. What thinkest thou concerning it?"

It can be imagined what surprise and astonishment such tidings brought to each of the elders and hastily they reassembled early on the following day to consider the matter. There in the midst of the full details of David's return to Ziklag, his pursuit of the enemy which had burned his city and carried off the women and children, and of his recovery of everything which had been taken, were made known.

Again he did not fight with the Philistines against Israel!" they exclaimed, one to the other, their depression giving place to the joy of a hope.

"Let us send greetings at once to David, and invite him to return," eagerly suggested one.

"Who is there who will dare go into the land of the Philistines to carry him word. Is the coming of such messengers reaches the ears of the Philistines, I fear it will go hard with David, and may bring the Philistine armies down upon us," spoke up another in cautionary.

Then followed an earnest discussion which was suddenly interrupted by the entrance of a breathless runner who had been sent for, and who was able to recover the power of speech:

"David! Hebron!"

"What's that you say?" fairly shouted the elders, startled more than they would think to hear.

"David has come to Hebron!"

The messenger nodded his head in assent, and added:

"Yea, and he hath brought all his men and all his substance, and his wives and all whatsoever he hath."

Then let us go up to Hebron and greet him as one of our own," cried Judah's leader, and the whole body of elders started for the city.

And so it was that the men of Judah came and there they anointed David king over the house of Judah.

Novelty in Entertainments.

A Paris paper says that on every Sunday Mrs. Mackay receives her friends in a secluded corner of the Latin quarter's most famous park in Paris. The refreshments at these entertainments are supplied by passing vendors, such as old women who sell tempting raisin cake and other like dainties. The paper adds to this account, which, whether or not authentic, is pleasant to believe, that these novel little affairs have been most successful and are a great relief after more formal entertainments.

Natural Soap Baths.

Natural soap baths are not an unmixed blessing. The curious soap spring that forms a wonder of a village in Timor, East Indian Islands, consists of a small elevated mud cone, from which bubbles up water heavily charged with alkali and radium, the discharge giving the appearance of a miniature volcano. A disadvantage of such a washing place is that vegetation is ruined for miles around.

Bobbin Boys' Wages.

John B. Lennon, treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, delivered recently an address on strikes.

Turning to the amusing features of the strike question, Mr. Lennon said:

"I remember a strike of bobbin boys, a just strike, and one that succeeded. These boys conducted their fight well, even brilliantly. Thus the day they turned out they posted in the spinning room of their employers' mills a great placard inscribed with the words:

Sheer white goods, in fact, any fine wash goods when new, owe much of their attractiveness to the way they are laundered, this being done in a manner to enhance their textile beauty. Home laundering would be equally satisfactory if proper attention was given to starching, the first essential being good Starch, which has sufficient strength to stiffen, without thickening the goods. Try Defiance Starch and you will be pleasantly surprised at the improved appearance of your work.

No Peace Conference.

"Are you going to strike, ma?" asked the little boy, as he tremblingly gazed upon the uplifted shingle.

"That's just what I'm going to do."

"Can't we arbitrate, ma, before you strike?"

"I am just going to arbitrate," she said, as the shingle descended and raised a cloud of dust from the seat of a pair of pantaloons—"I am just going to arbitrate, my son, and this shingle is the board of arbitration."

Places of Interest Neglected.

Two of the most attractive places for instruction in New York are the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the American Museum of Natural History, yet there are thousands of residents of New York who have never been in them, and more than half of their daily visitors are strangers in the city.

With a smooth iron and Defiance Starch, you can launder your shirt waist just as well at home as the steam laundry can; it will have the proper stiffness and finish, there will be less wear and tear of the goods, and we will be a positive pleasure to use a Starch that does not stick to the iron.

THIRST WAS FIRST THOUGHT.

Familiar Sound Cause of Young Man's Bad Break.

John C. Risley of Detroit, at the New York convention of the International Society of Hotel and Restaurant Employes—a convention notable for its condemnation of the tipping system—said to a reporter:

"The public thinks that we waiters get rich off our tips. The public is very ignorant in this matter. When I think of its dense ignorance I am reminded of a political meeting I attended last April. There was a chap at this meeting who knew nothing of parliamentary procedure, and, besides that, he was half full. Well, in the course of the meeting there was a lot of excitement and shouting. It grew worse and worse. The chairman, in the end, had to hammer on the table and yell:

"'Order! Order!'

"'Beer for me,' said the ignorant young man."

VERY BAD FORM OF ECZEMA.

Suffered Three Years—Physicians Did No Good—Perfectly Well After Using Cuticura Remedies.

"I take great pleasure in informing you that I was a sufferer of eczema in a very bad form for the past three years. I consulted and treated with a number of physicians in Chicago, but to no avail. I commenced using the Cuticura Remedies, consisting of Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, three cakes and one box, and to-day I am perfectly well, the disease having left me entirely. I cannot recommend the Cuticura Remedies too highly to anyone suffering with the disease that I have had. Mrs. Florence E. Atwood, 18 Crilly Place, Chicago, Ill., October 2, 1905. Witness: L. S. Berger."

Patron Saint of Lawyers.

This story is told at the expense of Francis Wharton, a well-known lawyer. The members of the Taunton, Mass., Bar association thought they ought to have a patron saint, but after much wrangling they could not hit upon any particular saint.

Finally, a committee, of which Mr. Maxwell was a member, was appointed to make a selection. They made a trip to New York, and there visited a gallery where most of the saints were carved in marble. It was decided to leave the selection to Mr. Maxwell, and after making the rounds he placed his hand on one in a group of two. "This one will do," he said. He had his hand on the devil, whom St. Michael was driving before him.

Impudence of Hal Pollol.

A noted English artist was standing at the edge of the road, waiting for his horse, and he was dressed in his professional costume, a velveteen-collared riding suit, vivid waistcoat and bright red tie. A man, who had evidently been reveling, happened to lurch round the corner of the street. He stared at the famous artist for a minute in silence, then he touched his cap and asked in a tone of deep commiseration, "Beg pardon, guv'nor, was you in mournin' for anybody?"

The Motor Face.

A few days ago a well-known personage was motoring in Derbyshire when an enormous hoop-net, relates the London Tattler.

"You'll have to take off that mask," said the officer, "It's frightening every one who sees it."

Golf Player Lightning's Victim.

During a thunderstorm near Glasgow a golf player named George Harper was struck and killed by lightning, which ripped off his clothing, including his boots, and extracted all his teeth. It made a hole three feet deep where he had been standing.

No impulse is too splendid for the simplest task; no task is too simple able to recover the power of speech: "David! Hebron!"

"What's that you say?" fairly shouted the elders, startled more than they would think to hear.

"David has come to Hebron!"

"Yea, and he hath brought all his men and all his substance, and his wives and all whatsoever he hath."

Then let us go up to Hebron and greet him as one of our own," cried Judah's leader, and the whole body of elders started for the city.

And so it was that the men of Judah came and there they anointed David king over the house of Judah.

A Different Loaf.

"Why," exclaimed little Johnny, when he heard his father telling about somebody who was looking after the leaves and fishes, "that's just what mamma says about Uncle Henry!"

"Says about Uncle Henry!" repeated his father, in astonishment. "What do you mean?"

"Why, pa, don't you know," said Johnny, "mamma says Uncle Henry only loafs and fishes."

FRANK SHANE.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for treasurer of Pawnee county, subject to the decision of the republican voters at the primary to be held on Tuesday September 3rd.

C A Schappel

The primaries for the nomination of candidates for the various offices to be elected at the November election, will be held on Tuesday, September 3.

Next Tuesday is the primary election—vote.

The polls for the primary election to be held next Tuesday will open at 12 o'clock M. and remain open until 9 o'clock p.m., giving all who desire ample time to vote.

Frank Evans is asking the nomination for county clerk on the ground that one faithful term in office deserves a second.

There will be ample ballots for the primary election but every ballot given out is expected to be voted or returned to the judges.

Maybe you don't like the new primary law, but it is now the law, and are you going to permit the nomination of a man you don't want to be nailed simply because you don't like the law and stay away from election.

The fight for the republican nomination for Supreme Judge is the paramount issue in the primary election to be held next Tuesday. Two names are before the party for the place, Judge Reese and Judge Sedgwick. Both are good men and able lawyers. Home has been the principles of the republican party and at no time have suffered defeat for those principles. Judge Sedgwick is the present incumbent and has served one term.

Mrs. J. D. Longwell, who has been very sick during the past two weeks with bilious neuralgia, is able to be up today.

C. F. Wemple is in Michigan and expected home within the next few days. He will be accompanied by his sister, Miss Wade Wemple, who is well known to many of our older residents.

There is much concern among our people over the provisions of the new road law, and the editor has been asked many questions concerning the same, and after some weeks he has secured a copy of the road laws, but in such form as to still have doubt in his mind upon some of the questions asked him. Upon many of the requirements of the work to be done, and manner of doing the new law does not differ from the old; there is but one overseer in the township, whose duty it will be to keep the road in good repair; he is elected by the people outside of incorporated villages [villages have control of the roads within its limits as under the old law]; said overseer shall procure the necessary tools at the cost of the district; in case of sudden damage to bridges, culverts or roads he may call out all able bodied men under fifty years of age to effect repairs but may not hold them more than two days without their consent, it shall be unlawful for any person to plow up or upon any public highway without the consent of the overseer; all road and and labor tax shall be paid in cash; one half of all moneys go to county road fund, the other half is to be expended under direction of the overseer for the benefit of the district, all grading shall be done between April 1 and November 1 of each year; the compensation of the overseer of each district shall be two dollars and fifty cents per day for all the time necessarily employed in the discharge of his duties as overseer, said compensation to be paid out of the district road fund. The law also provides for the use of the King road drag or similar implement. The road laws make a pamphlet of sixty pages and from them we have endeavored to answer the questions asked us during the past few weeks.

Owing to the dissatisfaction of some of the merchants against the Table Rock band, the band has decided to quit, and there will be no more concerts. Some of the business men were giving as high as 25c a week to maintain the band, and it seems some of the little two bit men were knocking hardest. This money collected weekly, amounting to something like $10 was used for new music, gasoline, bull rent, and the balance divided among the fifteen members, which usually amounted to a dollar every two weeks. Of course, gasoline is cheap—about 25c a gallon, and the new music cost the boys from 50c to $2 apiece; the hall rent was 75c a night, and some weeks the band practiced two nights a week. This band did not claim to be the best in the state, and they have been often asked to play here for more money than was ever offered to the Table Rock band, that were not playing a better grade of music, and were pronounced inferior by people who were not prejudiced. Tuesday night concerts always drew a bigger crowd to town than was seen any other night in the week. One man who keeps an amusement place said it didn't bring him any more trade, but his saloon always had a good time. Tired mothers took an hour off on Tuesday night to have a visit in the park with friends, and the band stand was always crowded with women and little children. Then the carnival question came up, the band considered the offer and made their price, a price that was reasonable for the time required, and they expected to be asked to donate. Because of this business a general dissatisfaction arose—even the fifteen-dollars-a-week "donation" was brought up and discussed over and over again, making the band thoroughly disgusted. The band had intended doing hard work this winter for playing next summer, but the town will be allowed to sleep on now before the band started its concerts.

Primary Pointers

Very little appears to be known about the operation of the new primary law, as the supply of pamphlets containing the law was limited, and but few were favored with them.

We are told that the opinion still prevails in some localities that there is to be a convention, and that the primary is therefore of no more importance than the precinct caucus which used to meet for the selection of delegates to the county convention.

This is entirely erroneous. There is to be no convention. The men who secure the most votes in their respective parties will be the candidates of the party.

The primary election will be held at the usual voting place in the several election precincts on the first Tuesday in September, which this year falls upon September 3rd.

At this primary will be tickets printed for each of the parties having candidates to be voted for. The republicans will be given republican tickets and the democrats will be given democratic tickets. Upon these tickets will be printed all of the names of the candidates who have filed their petitions with the county clerk for their respective parties.

The polls will open at 12, noon and remain open until 9 o'clock in the evening. However if there are qualified voters in the room or inline who have not been able to vote since their arrival at the voting place, the primaries shall be kept open long enough to permit such to vote, though no person who arrives later than 9 o'clock shall be permitted to vote.

The primary election shall be presided over by the same judges and clerks of election as now provided by law relating to general elections.

Any person presenting himself at a primary and offering to vote may be challenged, and must state what political party he affiliates with, and whether he intends to support the candidates of such party, or a majority of them at the next election. He may be required to swear in his vote. In that case the ballot will be marked "sworn" to designate it from others.

The canvass of the returns of the primaries shall be made the same as the canvass of the returns of the general election.

The person receiving the greatest number of votes at the primary as a candidate of the party for an office shall be the candidate of his party for such office and his name shall be placed upon the official ballots for November election.

This is a synopsis of the law and the rules governing the primary and it will be seen that the people propose to take any part in the selection of their candidates to be voted for at the November election they must attend the primaries and do their work.

Remember that there will be no convention and that if you do not participate in the primaries you will have no voice in the selection of the candidates of your party. Beatrice Democrat.

TRANSFER A CORRECT COSTUME.

Dean Stanley Once Entered Palermo Wearing a Nightshirt.

The voice of the church went forth full early against the proposal that La Mlle should ride through the streets of Coventry in raiment too closely copying the birthday attire in which the original Lady Godiva rode. But the church itself was once in danger of being scandalized by one of its illustrious members in what appeared much the same way. The culprit was none other than Dean Stanley, who was driving with a friend from Monreale to Palermo. Both men were reading. Stanley suddenly discovered that he was shivering with a cold. He mentioned the matter to his friend. "Well, hadn't you better put something on?" said the latter, pointing to the dean's bag, which was close at hand. Stanley thought it rather a good idea, and the friend went on reading. As they entered Palermo there were shouts of astonishment. Stanley was placidly reading. His friend found that the distinguished churchman had absent-mindedly drawn out a nightshirt from his bag, and put it on over his other clothing, and, thus arrayed, was riding triumphantly into the city.

WHERE ANIMALS BEAT MEN.

Many Species Are Incredibly Nice About Their Food.

"Nature taking aside," said the zoo keeper, "mice won't eat cheese. It is a fact. Lay a pat of oleo and a pat of butter side by side, and in the morning the butter will be gone, but the oleo will remain untouched. Oh, yes, some animals are incredibly nice about their food. The otter, when living wild, will only eat one piece, one mouthful, out of each fish he catches. He will land a beautiful trout, but only one bite of it, from the back, just behind the neck, is good enough for him. The rest he tosses aside. The spectre often kills a dozen fine big trout to make one meal. Chimpanzees have very delicate tastes. A banana or a pineapple that to you seems delicious, to a chimpanzee may be revolting. His taste is keener. Grapes grown in hot houses where sulphur fumes are used as an insecticide taste all right to a man, but a chimpanzee will have none of them. The ichneumon leves eggs. He can tell a fresh from a stale one simply by tapping the shell."

W. R. Ferguson, while on a trip up the Missouri river recently dug up in old Ree village one of the few pieces of unbroken pottery ware of the Ree. The piece is a bowl which will hold about a quart and is in a perfect state of preservation. Plenty of broken scraps of this pottery work of the residents of this part of the northwest before the coming of the Sioux are to be found at the location of their old towns along the Missouri river, but scraps are about all which the searcher can secure by digging and searching. The bowl in its present state is a rare find and will be presented by Mr. Ferguson to the state historical society, to be retained in the collection of that society.—Pierre Letter to the St. Paul Dispatch.

Ring Sickness.

The clown staggered from the ring; he threw himself, groaning on the grass in the dressing tent. A shout of laughter followed him. "Let them laugh," the poor fellow muttered. "They think, because I ran on with my hands clutching my stomach, that I am joking. Little do they know that my groans are not stitches that are now racking me. Pennyroyal tea will you? Ring sickness is like sea sickness. You see it from continually running round and round and round a circus ring. Riding masters get it more frequently than clowns, and I have even seen horses with a touch of it."

Buried Coffee Kept Hot.

During field operations of the British troops at Aldershot it was desired to serve hot coffee during the hours of darkness to the soldiers on the trenches, and it was found impossible to bring them anything hot during the night or early morning for fear of betraying the position to the enemy, the coffee was made in the evening and while still boiling was buried in camp kettles with close-fitting lids a few feet in the ground and tightly packed with earth. When the pits were opened in the early morning the coffee was found to be still hot and ready to serve.

New Guinean War Canoe.

At Matupi is preserved the last of the great New Guinean war canoes. This is an immense and wonderful structure, 70 feet in length, which besides several hundred natives could carry 20 tons of cargo upon the deck. Joining the canoe proper and the outrigger at either end is a quantity of carved wooden figureheid (or tail), covered with cassowary feathers, and the immense outrigger consists of a whole palm tree, hollowed out and sharpened fore and aft.—London Standard.

Easy When You Know How.

"I tell you what, Young," said the sharpest wife you ever saw to her husband, "why, the other day I gave the boys enough money to get them all they one dress, and they'll never ask me for some home with them." "Young," in a sharp tone, "how did you manage it?" "Why," she replied, "I bought one, and the other she had to get herself."

Willie stood a moment on one foot and then burst forth again, "I'm orful sorry Jimmy's sick."

FOR SELFISH ENDS.

The Efforts Being Made by the American Medical Association.

The Political activity of the American Medical Association has become so pronounced as to cause comment in political circles especially as the the avowed purpose of the Doctors of the "Regular" Allopathic school, of which the Association is chiefly composed, is to secure the passage of such laws as will not only prevent the sale of so-called "patent" medicines, but restrict the practice of Medicine and healing to the "schools" now recognized. This in many states would prevent the growing practice of Osteopathy and Chiropody, nearly every state would prevent the healers of the Christian Science and mental science belief from practicing those sciences in which the faith of so many intelligent people is so firmly rooted.

The American Medical Association has a "Committee on Legislation," and the committee has correspondents in practically every township—some 16,000 correspondents in all. This committee at the last session of the American Medical Association held in June of this year expressed a hope that a larger number of physicians than heretofore will offer themselves as candidates for Congress at the first opportunity. In its annual report this Committee said: "To meet the growing demands of the modern medical profession, particularly the work of active participation in State legislation is undertaken, a larger clerical force must be employed."

This is almost the first time in the history of the United States that any organized class has frankly avowed the purpose of capturing legislatures and dominating legislation in their own selfish interests.

The American Medical Association has about 66,000 members of whom 27,000 are "locally constituted members" and the rest are members because of their affiliation with state or local societies. The Association owns real estate in Chicago valued at $111,761.91 and its total assets are $291,567.89. Its liabilities, at the time of the annual report which was made at the Denver meeting, amounted to only $21,906. The excess of assets over liabilities is increasing at the rate of about $30,000 a year, and the purpose of the organization is to dominate the field of medicine, and by crushing all competitors by securing the passage of prohibitive legislation, compel all of the people of the United States to pay a doctor's fee every time the most simple remedy is needed.

Deaths from X-Rays.

The death of Dr. Weigel, a surgeon of Rochester, from a disease due to the constant use of the X-rays makes the fourth who has lost his life from this cause, says the Chistian Advocate.

The others were an assistant of Thomas Edison, a Boston physician and a worker of San Francisco named Fleischman. In the case of Dr. Weigel, since 1904, when his right hand and all but the thumb and a finger of the left hand were removed, there had been four operations in trying to save his life. The first removed a part of the right shoulder; then a part of the muscles covering the right breast.

Cancer completely envelops the cause of death, the disease being unknown to medical science, though it is believed to involve some great principle of life. Dr. Weigel was president of the Rochester Academy of Medicine and the American Orthopaedic society.

Puzzled.

The bard from the city had sold sufficient verses to spend a week in a rural boarding house. Waving off the swarms of June bugs and mosquitoes, the bard sat penning his lines by the yellow light of a kerosene lamp.

"Gracious!" he drawled. "Where is she?"

"Who?" asked the astonished bard

"Why, the gal yeou just said yeou loved."

Peculiar Medical Remedy.

HELPING THE TOWN

HINTS AS TO MAKING THE HOME MARKET BETTER.

HANDLING OF FARM PRODUCE

How Merchants and Farmers Can Co-Operate to Their Mutual Advantage in a Business Way.

Many agricultural towns could be vastly improved by affording farmers better markets for the produce that they have to dispose of. In the Fall of every country village there is sufficient butter and eggs and other products to be marketed, the handling of which would make a profitable business.

The custom that has prevailed for many years of storekeepers indiscriminately handling produce does not appear to be to the best interests of towns or it may be said, to the merchants or the farmers. In the first place the average storekeeper has no facilities for the proper handling of perishable products. He may not receive sufficient to enable him to dispose of the product to the greatest advantage. Therefore instead of making any profit upon what he handles, many times he is the loser and looks for his compensation in the trade that may be given him by the farmers who bring in the produce.

It is important to a town whether it is reputed to be a good produce market or otherwise. Where the farmer can receive a cent or two more for his butter and eggs he is likely to turn his attention. In some towns there are regular buyers of produce, but often these methods are such as to be unsatisfactory and will be a loss of trade to the place.

Merchants generally exchange goods for whatever produce may be brought to them. In many places they will not pay cash, and it has been known where cash has been paid that it immediately found its way to some other town where goods was purchased.

Each town that has any considerable patronage from the farming community surrounding it, should have a small cold storage plant. One plan that has been found practicable in many towns is the organization of a produce company in which merchants of the town as well as the farmers become stockholders. These concerns provide every facility for the proper packing and storage of eggs and butter and other perishable produce, and sometimes include a butter renovating plant. Where such companies are operated the merchants refuse to handle produce, referring all who have such to sell to the produce company. The company pays the highest market price for what it buys. Instead of paying cash, the bills are issued which are accepted the same as cash at all the stores in town. Each week the merchants who receive these due bills in exchange for goods have them cashed at the office of the produce company.

By paying from a cent to two cents a dozen more for eggs or per pound for butter these produce companies have been wonderful factors in bringing trade to a town. The plan alone of benefit the town by bringing additional patronage to the merchants, but the business can be highly profitable to the company itself. It requires but little capital to operate such an establishment. It is well when organization is taken up to limit the amount of stock that each shareholder receives to one or two shares of a par value of $50 or $100. An effort should be made to have as many shareholders as possible in the company. Also to secure as many shareholders among the farmers as can be had. It should be understood that instead of paying cash, farmers pay for their shares of stock in produce at prevailing market prices. With all the merchants in the town interested in the success of the company, and the farmers throughout the country also shareholders and participants in profits that may be made, it will be soon found that the produce company will be handling all the produce business that originates in the community.

In many localities where this plan has been put in operation the farmers have discovered that they could receive better prices for their butter and cream and eggs than under the old system. Being associated in a way with the business interests of the place they become more interested in all affairs of the town and are more inclined to work in harmony with the merchants towards anything that has the improvement of the home town in view. One of the desirable things about this plan is its tendency to lessen the practice of residents of rural communities trading with mail order houses and department stores in the large cities. Another admirable feature is the adding of an additional labor-saving industry to the town, and the keeping of the earnings of the people in circulation in the community.

Reliable Sign of Death.

A Frenchman has received a prize for discovering a reliable sign of death. The test consists of the subcutaneous injection of a solution of fluorescine, which, if the blood is still circulating, in the course of a few hours causes the skin to turn yellow.

Wise Parson.

"Parson, somebody dated us to get married, and we never take a date. How's we are?"

WHERE THE MERCHANT FAILS.

An Iowa Farmer Tells Him He Should Advertise, and How.

An Iowa farmer contributes to the Des Moines Capitol the following very pertinent suggestion as to why the mail order houses succeed in getting the business of the rural communities away from local merchants:

"If the mail order houses got $1,000 out of this county each month that belongs to the home merchants the fault is with the merchants themselves. The mail order houses advertise and give us prices on everything they offer for sale. They tell us what they have and what they want for it. Of course we get soaked once in awhile and if we do we can try some other house. Most of the home merchants who advertise at all don't quote prices. They neglect to tell us what we want to know—the price. Of course we can go to the store and ask the price of this article, and that, but you know how it is—one doesn't know so well exactly what he wants to buy when he gets in a store as when he is at home. And there is where the mail-order houses make their hit. They send us their advertising matter into homes and we read it when we haven't anything else to do and every member of the family who reads their stuff usually finds something that he or some other member of the family wants and many orders are made up and sent out just at such times.

"Right here is where the home merchant falls down. If he talked up his business to us in our homes the same as the mail order houses do the people would be in to see him in the store and ready to buy. Once and in many cases extra trips would be made to get the things at once that we didn't know we wanted until they were brought to our attention.

"The home merchant can save the expense of getting up a catalogue. We people read the home papers closely especially than we do the catalogue, and if the merchant wants to talk business with us let him put his talk in the home papers and put it in so that we know he means business. The home merchant likely, nine times out of ten, sells his goods as cheap as the mail order houses, and I believe on many things they are much cheaper, but how are we to know if he doesn't tell us about it.

"A merchant must not think that even his best customers know his goods so well that they can tell what he has without being shown.

"In the case of my self, how the home merchant runs his business, but I don't like to see these roasts in the papers all the time about us farmers. We get a little stuff shipped in once in awhile and never anything said on the other side. There are always two sides of a question, and I believe you mine, if it is worth anything to you you can take it."

BANKERS GETTING WISE.

They See Danger in the Mail-Order System of Business.

It is only lately that bankers of the west have come to a realization that the mail-order system of business has been a serious injury to them, killing off the business of their towns, taking out of circulation money that should help swell the local bank deposits and otherwise interfering with town progress.

The trouble has been with many bankers that they failed to appreciate the injury to one-way-from-home evil as anything of particular concern to them. When Farmer Smith would send a draft for $50 or $100 to Chicago to be credited to the mail-order house he considered it no more than a matter of course, and thought he was that much ahead, while the facts explained that by being sent from home that $50 of the farmer for the banker might make a dollar or two of profit. It was only lately that bankers generally started in to solicit deposits of the people of country towns and farming communities that the bankers took a tumble.

Then again some bankers have such an exalted idea of their position in the town that the goods to be had from the local merchants are not good enough for themselves and families, and set a bad example before the people by sending away themselves for what they desire in the way of staples and luxuries. Bankers are conservative; and are not forward in making suggestions to their patrons as to what they should do with their money. But in this matter it appears sufficiently important to justify the exercise of what influence the banker can command in behalf of home merchants. It is the business of the town and surrounding country that affords a profit to the bank. The greater this volume of business the more it will be to the benefit of the banker and every interest of the town, and the farmers and other laborers as well.

What, Indeed?

A duchess requiring a lady's maid had an interview with one, to whom, after having examined her appearance, she said: "Of course, you will be able to dress my hair for me?" "Oh, yes," replied the girl; "I never takes me more than half an hour to dress a lady's hair." "Half an hour, my child!" exclaimed the duchess, in dudgeon. "Which, if the blood is still circulating, in the course of a few hours causes the skin to turn yellow."

ALL LIKED THE TEA

SPECIAL BREW LIVENED UP TEMPERANCE MEETING.

But There Would Be an Awful Rumpus if the Ladies Knew Just What Made the Beverage So Good.

The half dozen or more elderly women who compose a select little temperance society met at the home of an East End member the other day for one of their semi-so-often discussions of ways and means and such like.

The hostess suggested that maybe a cup of tea would help some, and acting upon her own suggestion hustled out and came back with the teapot steaming.

There's certainly the best tea I ever tasted," she said. "I don't believe I'll lie down."

The others, too, agreed that the tea came pretty near being just the thing. It traced them up so that their meeting was the liveliest they had had for these many weeks.

Now, a couple before the temperance session, the head of the household at which the meeting was held, and who may be known as John H. Isnot, because in fact it had been advised by his physician to take a certain kind of bitters in whisky.

He was ordinarily a total abstainer from the drop of the cup that cheers, but a half pint of the whisky. After he had fixed up enough for a dose or two he wondered what to do with the bottle containing the rest of the stuff, for he knew how his wife stood on the temperance plank and that no physician's recommendation squared the rum thing with her. Then he noticed an old teapot that they seldom used.

A day or so after the meeting of the temperance society's husbands and daughters of its members came to Mr. Isnot's home one by one to learn how he came by such excellent tea. "My wife never has got through talking about that tea she got over here," said one man. "She felt better for two or three days."

"A friend of mine in the tea business gave me two or three pounds of that," said Isnot. "I doubt if I can get hold of any more of it."

"Mother'll give $3 a pound for it," said a young woman who had just arrived.

But Isnot is a conscientious man and has thus far refused to take any of their money.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Told of Eccentric Author.

There has been a revival of interest in Germany in all that pertains to Vischer, the eccentric author, due to the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of his birth. One of the stories told of him is of his adventure with an American girl. He was busy with his treatise on esthetics, which afterward became famous, when the girl secured the next room to his, and played on the piano for hours at a time. He begged for quiet, but was told that if he did not like his room he could leave. He had occupied his apartments for 14 years, and was loath to change, so one day he burst from his room, foaming and yelling like a madman, and so scared the pianist that she moved the next day. It was Vischer who, while in Italy, became angered at a waiter in a cafe, and, being short on Italian phrases, fished out the pocket dictionary which he had carried in his pocket for a century. Finding all the other hand he searched a pocket dictionary for the Italian word meaning scoundrel. As a centenary gift Vischer's letter from Italy has been printed by his son.

"Mrs. Blobbs!" bawled the "Boots" in an uninterested sort of voice, "the gent in No. 8 is satisfied with his room; but he wants the fleas changed."—Illustrated Bits.

SERIAL STORY

FRIDAY THE 13TH

A Novel by
THOMAS W. LAWSON

While every other man in the crowd was at a high tension of excitement, Barry Connant was as calm as though standing in the middle of a tea-secure daisy field cutting off the helpless flowers' heads with every swing of his arm. Switching stock gamblers into eternity had grown to be a pastime to Barry Connant. Here was Bob thundering with terrific emphasis "78, for 5,000," "77 for 5,000," "76 for 5,000," "75 for 5,000," "74 for 5,000," "73 for 5,000," "72 for 5,000," seemingly expecting through sheer power of voice to crush his opponent into silence, and there was Barry, one of a trip-hammer Barry Conant's right hand, raised in unhurried gesture, and his clear calm "Sold" met Bob's every retreating bid. It was a battle royal—a king on one side, a Richelieu on the other. Though there was frantic buying and selling all around these two generals, the trading was gauged by the trend of their battle. All knew that if Bob should be beaten down by this concentrated modern finance devil, a panic would ensue and Sugar would go none could say how low. But if Bob should play him to a standstill by exhausting his selling power, Sugar would quickly soar to even higher figures than before. It was known that Barry Conant's usual order for Sugar was "Buy 5,000 shares," orders, for such an occasion as the present was "Break the price at any cost." On the other hand, every one knew that Randolph & Randolph were usually behind Bob's big operations; this was evidently one of his biggest, and every man there knew that Randolph & Randolph were seldom backed down by any force.

As Bob made his bid "72 for 5,000," and got it, I saw a quick flash of pain shoot across Barry Conant's face that it probably meant he was nearing the end of my last order. I sized it up that there was devilry of more than usual significance behind the selling movement; that Barry Conant must have unlimited orders to sell, and in the form of a ban and ban chicken. Each child was allowed to select his chicken as it was served. Finally she came to the son of a prominent politician.

"Which chicky will you have, Bertie?" she asked.

"If you please, Mrs. H., I think I'll take the mamma hen," was the polite reply.—Lippincott's.

those of the hundreds and thousands of victims who have gone before. Jim, we must be three millions losers, and the men who have our money have so many, many millions that they can't live long enough even to thumb them over. Men who will sacrifice a million on the gambling table, at the race tracks, squander it on stage harlots, or in turning their wives and daughters, or their sisters and their daughters into worse than stage harlots. Men, Jim, who are not fit, measured by any standard of decency, to walk the same earth as you and I do, Sands. Men whose painted pets polute the very air that such as Beulah Sands must breathe. I learned my lesson to-day. I thought I knew the game of finance, but I'm suddenly awakened to a realization of the dense ignorance I wallowed in. Jim, now the loading of the dice, I should now have been taking Beulah Sands to her father with the money that the bellhop gave me instead of leaving it on the table. Last March, Jim, when I should have taken her to the altar, and after, who knows but that I should have had the happiest home and family in all the world. Jim, I'm afraid, Jim, I'm afraid mine have lived for generations, honest, God-fearing, law-abiding, neighbor-loving men and women, and then I should have come along and now, Jim, I see a black, awful picture. No, I'm not morbid, I'm going to make a heroic effort to put the picture out of sight; but I'm afraid, Jim, I'm afraid."

He stopped as we pulled up on the sidewalk in front of Randolph & Randolph's office. "Here it is on the bulletin. See what, did the trick, Jim. That's the Sugar meeting last night instead of waiting till to-morrow. Then they will know it, then they will know it. They will read it in the headlines of the papers—a few suicides, a few defaulters, a few new convicts, an unclaimed corpse or two at the morgue; a few innocent girls, whose fathers' fortunes have gone to swell Camemeyer's and Standard Oil's already uncountable gold, turned into street-walkers; a few new palaces on Fifth avenue, and a few new libraries given to communities that formerly took pride in building them from their honestly earned savings. A report or two of record-breaking diamond sales by Tiffany to the kings and czars of dollar royalty; then front-page news stories of clawing, pulling, and hair-pulling brawls among the stage harlots for the possession of these diamonds. They were not quite sure that the dividend cut alone would do the trick, and they were taking no chances, these mighty warriors of the 'System,' so their hireling senate committee held a session last night and unanimously reported to put sugar on the free list. The people will read that in the morning, and probably the day after they'll be told that the committee held another session to-night and unanimously reported to take it off the free list. By that time these honorable statesmen will have loaded up with the stock that you and I and Beulah Sands sold, and that other poor devils will slaughter to-morrow after reading their morning papers."

Bob's bitterness was terrible. My heart was torn as I listened. He stalked through the office and into that of Beulah Sands. I followed. She was at her desk, and when she looked up, her great eyes opened in wonderment as they took in Bob, his grim, set face, the defiant, sullen desperation of the big brown eyes, the disheveled hair and clothes. For an instant she stood as one who had seen an apparition.

"Look me over, Beulah Sands," he said, "look me over to your heart's content, for you may never again see the fool of fools in all the world, the fool who thought himself competent to engineer Sugar's passing him right who really knew how to play the game of dollars as it is played in this Christian ago. Don't ask me not to call you Beulah; that what I tried to do was for you is the one streak of light in all this black hell. Beulah, Beulah, we are ruined, you, your father, and I ruined, and I'm the fool who did it."

She rose from her desk with all the quiet, calm dignity that we had been admiring for almost months, and stood facing Bob. She did not seem to see me; she saw nothing but the man who had come to her with the promise, the verification of hope, who now stood before her the picture of black despair, and she must have thought, "It was all for me." Suddenly she took the lapels of his torn coat in either hand. She had to reach up to do it, this winsome little Virginia lady. With her big, brown eyes looking straight into his, she said:

"Bob."

That was all, but the word seemed to change the very atmosphere in the room. The look of desperation faded from Bob's face, and as though the words had sprung the hidden catch to the doors of the recess of pent-up misery, his eyes filled with hot, blinding tears. His great chest was convulsed with sobs. Again—clear, calm, sweet—came the word, but this time a syllable, "Bob." And at that Bob's self-control slipped the leash. With a hoarse cry, he threw his arms around her. And crushed her to his breast.

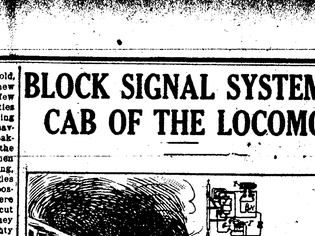
Wherein the "Brave" Excelled.

Bloodthirsty, vindictive, treacherous, cruelty, scornful of suffering, brave unto death when at bay, more cunning than the fox and of infinite patience on the trail, the Indian has proven more than a match for the white in the jungle. It is certain that more whites than savages have perished in forest fighting. But in set battle the redman is without steadfastness and perseverance. The least reverse disheartens him. After the first rush and the surprise is over, and the slightest check is met in dispirit—his capricious mind.—Outing Magazine.

BLOCK SIGNAL SYSTEM IN CAB OF THE LOCOMOTIVE



Although automatic railroad block-signal systems have been developed to the highest degree of efficiency, they cannot yet be relied upon entirely to prevent accident; for collisions continue to occur even on our most elaborately equipped railroads. Investigation in a number of accidents which have happened in recent years has shown that the signals were in perfect working order, but had either been obscured by steam or fog, or had been neglected owing to the carelessness of the engineer.

In the accompanying engraving we illustrate a cab signal system belonging to the Safety Signal company, of 407 Drexel Building, Philadelphia, Pa. This system differs from the English system in the fact that it is controlled directly by the regular automatic block signals repeating these line signals in the cab. The line drawing illustrates diagrammatically the method of transmitting the signals to the cab. Close to one of the rails are a pair of blocks, only one of which is shown in the diagram, as the two blocks and the mechanism connecting them with the line signal system are identical. The block A is mounted to slide vertically in a chamber secured to the ties. A coil spring bears against the under face of the block, tending to hold it up to the desired height. The object of fastening the chamber to the ties instead of burying it in the roadbed is to preserve the same relative position between the rail and the block regardless of any settling of the roadbed due to frost or other weather conditions. A rod connects the block with a lever B, which is hinged to a bracket C, depending from the cab roof. The opposite end of the lever carries a plunger, which is adapted to slide vertically in a cylinder C. A pipe connects this cylinder with the compressed air system of the electro-pneumatic block signal. One of the blocks is controlled by the "danger" signal, and the other by the "caution."

The system is especially adapted to be operated with line signals of the type which are normally set at danger, and show a clear track only when the train is about to enter the block. For this reason, the blocks A are normally held in position by the coil springs, this position being the one in which they will operate the cab signals, so that in case of any failure on the part of the line signals, the cab signals would show "danger," and bring the train to a stop. When the semaphore signals are set for "clear," the coil springs are overcome by the compressed air system of the line signals, raising the plungers therein, and lowering the blocks A. If, on the approach of a train, danger signal should drop, it would throw the valve, releasing the air from its corresponding cylinder C, and lowering the respective block A, thus bringing it to or fall with the semaphores.

Carried by the locomotive is a search wheel D, supported in a yoked bar E mounted to slide vertically. The search wheel is provided with two treads, one normally running on the rail, and the other, which is of a larger diameter, adapted to engage the blocks A. The rod E projects up into the cab of the locomotive, and at its upper end is provided with a pawl adapted to engage a ratchet wheel F. This wheel is geared to a disk mounted to turn in a casing G. The disk which carries a red signal and a green glass on the wrong to show these signals through an opening in the casing G. As the locomotive passes over the blocks A, if, for instance, the "caution" block is raised, the search wheel D striking the block will be lifted, and by means of the ratchet wheel F will shift the signal disk until the green signal shows through the opening in the casing G. On passing the first block A, if the "danger" block is raised, the search wheel will be lifted again, turning the disk to show red as well as the green signal. At each operation of the search wheel an electric circuit is closed, which operates to ring a bell H. The bell H will continue to ring until the engineer has broken the circuit and reset the the signal disk.

In addition to the signal mechanism, there is an electrically-controlled mechanism J, adapted to act directly upon the throttle and brake lever, so that even if a red signal be passed by the engineer, the train will be automatically brought to a stop. One of the great objection to mechanism to automatically stopping a train is that it conduces to carelessness on the part of the engineer, who is apt to put too much confidence in the automatic mechanism, and permit it to govern the engine at all times. Since no machinery may be trusted to work perfectly without failure, there is danger that at some time it may fail while the engineer's attention is drawn elsewhere, and a serious accident would result. To overcome this objection the present system employs an indicator I, which is driven by clockwork, and on which is recorded every automatic action that the signal apparatus. This indicator shows whether the engineer has operated the throttle himself, or whether he has depended upon the mechanism to do his work. These records may be examined at the end of each run, and in case they disclose any failure of the engineer to obey signals and operate the engine himself, he should be severely censured. It is believed that by thus keeping a check on the actions of the engineer the faults of both mechanical system are avoided and its benefits retained. The chances of a lapse upon the part of the engineer, and a failure of the mechanism operating at the same time, are exceedingly remote. Hence, the safety of a train equipped with this automatic cab signal and control system is doubly assured.

BUILT WITH SIDE DOORS.

Southern Pacific Passenger Coaches to Be So Equipped.

President Harriman of the Southern Pacific a short time ago gave orders to have a number of new passenger coaches built at the company's car shops at Sacramento with side doors instead of end doors.

Harriman believes that cars thus constructed will be much stronger and more durable than the style now used; and also that in case of wreck, there will be little danger of the coaches telescoping each other. These new cars will have a small passageway by which passengers may go from one coach to another, but this will be so arranged that it will not weaken the end walls of the cars.

Another feature of these coaches is the use of round instead of square windows. New, patent vestibules, now being used by the Union Pacific on its motor cars, will be placed on the new coaches, and the cars will present an appearance so little in common with the ordinary coach, that they will at first hardly be recognised as a passenger vehicle. Some of these cars will soon be completed and placed in commission on the Southern Pacific western roads.—Scientific American.

Have Varying Gauges.

The railroads of England and Ireland are of different gauge. Those of Ireland are five feet three) of England, four feet 8½ inches.

CARE OF SILK HANDKERCHIEFS.

Precautions Necessary During the Process of Washing.

In washing silk handkerchiefs care should be taken to prevent their turning yellow. A silk handkerchief should never be boiled, nor have any soap rubbed upon it.

Make a lather of finely shredded white soap and water, wash and and squeeze the handkerchief in it, press out all the moisture, and dry quickly in the sun; ironing them while they are still damp, but not wet.

White silk handkerchiefs used as neckties are sometimes cleaned very well with dried and powered starch in which a little powdered blue has been mixed.

The handkerchief is spread over a clean linen cloth, and with a pad of clean white linen the powder is rubbed over the silk, then dusted out, after which, with a moderately hot iron and two folds of slightly damped linen, laid over the silk on the right side, the handkerchief is ironed, which brightens it considerably.

SERVING UP COLD MUTTON.

Fashioned into Croquettes It Is an Appetizing Dish.

Take a pound of cold mutton, chop it very fine, and mix it well with rather more than tablespoonful of flour.

Chop an onion small and boil it in a teacupful of water and let it cool.

Beat the yolk of an egg into the meat and flour, flavoring with pepper, salt and nutmeg, boil for five minutes.

Pour the mixture on a plate and set it aside to cool, then divide it into small portions, making each in croquettes. Egg and crumb them twice over, and fry in hot lard which should be of sufficient depth to cover them.

Housework and Physical Culture.

There are plenty of women who scorn housework, but are devoted to gymnasiums. Now, the best of all around, indoor exercise is to be found in the manifold duties of housekeeping. Dusting, even cooking, bring more than one set of muscles into play, and none of them is more destructive to the beauty of the hands than gymnasium work and outdoor games. We are not advocating the performing of all of the household duties, with the assistance of a hired girl, but of parts of them. Of course, if you have a liking for the work, and the strength, do it all if you want to, but this is not advisable unless lack of money is the inducement. There are so many ways in which time can be profitably spent.—What-to-Eat.

When you have a small piece of cooked steak on hand, barely enough to serve alone, try this plan: Moisten with hot water and reheat in a hot oven. Cut in long, thin pieces, finger lengths first. Make as many pieces of toast as you have pieces of steak, cutting the bread in the same shape. Make a gravy as follows: Cream together in a saucepan a small piece of butter and a spoonful of flour. Add gradually soup stock or any gravy until the mixture is smooth. Add one small onion, and a chopped, a few capers, and shreds of celery if wished. Put the bits of steak on the toast and pour the gravy over all.

Jellied Chicken.

Cut up a four-pound fowl, put in a stew pan with all giblets, one onion, one or two boiling water and cook slowly until the meat falls from the bones. When half cooked add a tablespoonful of salt. Cook to the last to keep it from burning. Remove the bones, chop the meat fine, and mix it well with rather more than tablespoonful of flour.

Chop an onion small and boil it in a teacupful of water and let it cool.

Beat the yolk of an egg into the meat and flour, flavoring with pepper, salt and nutmeg, boil for five minutes.

Pour the mixture on a plate and set it aside to cool, then divide it into small portions, making each in croquettes. Egg and crumb them twice over, and fry in hot lard which should be of sufficient depth to cover them.

Chicken Curry.

Cut a three-pound chicken in pieces for serving. Put butter in a hot frying pan and cook the chicken ten minutes, then add the liver and giblets and cook ten minutes longer. Use one third of a cup of butter. Cut two onions in thin slices and add to the chicken with one tablespoonful of curry powder and two teaspoonfuls of salt. Add enough boiling water to cover and simmer until chicken is tender. Remove the chicken, strain and thicken the liquid with flour, pour gravy over the chicken and serve with a border of rice.

Imitation Buckwheat Cakes.

These are delicious to serve with maple sirup, and, best of all, perfectly hygienic. In the evening mix four cups whole wheat flour, one cup cornmeal, one cup wheat flour, and one-half yeast cake dissolved in a little lukewarm water. Add enough milk or water to make a thick batter and a half tablespoonful salt. Cover and let rise over night. In the morning add a half level teaspoonful soda dissolved in one tablespoonful milk; the batter of the right consistency. Bake on a well greased, hot griddle, and serve at once.

For two people use one pound of round steak cut for beef tea, in dice; add one pint of water, half teaspoon salt, and let it come to a boil slowly for about three-quarters of an hour, and one large onion cut in two, minced fine, one tablespoon of soy sauce, one tablespoon of corn starch mixed smooth with cold water, and cook ten minutes longer.

SPECIAL PIECE AN HEIRLOOM.

Suit against an eastern railroad was brought by a gray-haired, wrinkled spinster for the loss of a barrel of crockery from her home in Boston to a cottage in the country that she was fitting up for the summer.

The chief feature of the table furnishing and shelf decorations were being carried was derailed and the ceramics went the way of many of the other articles, that is, they were utterly destroyed. When the spinster learned the fate of her goods she instituted a suit for damages, setting forth in her complaint that each one of the articles lost was an heirloom by which she set great store.

A number of the pieces had been handed down from the Pilgrim fathers and were valued many times beyond their intrinsic worth. Her grief at the loss was unconsolable, and the court was asked to take the fact into consideration in fixing the sum of the damages. But the court did nothing of the kind and allowed compensation based upon a fair marketable value of the lost property.

Mrs. Digge—Yes, she is suing her husband for divorce on the grounds of failure to provide.

Mrs. Briggs—Doesn't she get enough to eat?

Mrs. Digge—Oh, yes; but he failed to provide her with the diamond necklace she wanted.

MARKET LETTER

Written by J. BUCKLEY, Live Stock Correspondent

Kansas City, Mo., August 26, 1907

Cattle receipts showed a decline last week as compared with the previous week, but a gain over same week a year ago. The market opened the week strong and active on beef steers and heifers 10 to 15 higher, and about the same on stockers and feeders; calves a quarter higher. After Tuesday the market had a downward tendency and all classes except beef steers lost the gain of Monday. Top steers sold at $7.10, bulk at $6.50 to $6.90, yearling steers at $6.25. The market closed the week about 20 lower on grass steers, cows and heifers, most stock, and veal calves a quarter lower on prime weak calves. Run today is 15,000, market 10 higher. Top steers sold at $6 65, nothing topping included. Bulk ranged from $5.50 to $6 60, although good ones would sell up to $6.75. Western steers are active and firm, and sell at $4.60 to $5.75, cows steady and active at $2.75 to $4.75, heifers up to $6, calves up to $7, bulk at $4 to $6.50, all weights included, stockers and feeders steady to strong. Stockers at $3.50 to $4.60, feeders $4.75 to $5.75. Moderate receipts of cattle are looked for balance of this week in which event a strong healthy market is inevitable.

Receipts of hogs last week totaled 56,000 head, a falling off of about 7,000 from previous week. The market declined from day to day until Friday when there was a reaction and the week closed showing ten advance of 5 cents over the low time. Run today is 6,000, market 10 higher, top $6.82 1-2, bulk of hogs at $6.65 to $6.80, against a top of $6.05 2-2 last Monday.

Supply of sheep and lambs is comprised of range stuff mostly, but in spite of the light marketing market did not better than ran ate steady throughout the week. Run today is 2000, market is strong and active. Lambs are worth $6.50 to $7.35, yearlings up to $5, wethers today at $5.75 ewes $5.35. Included in the receipts are a good many feeding sheep which find a ready sale.

Keep Bills.

It is well to keep every bill paid or not for an indefinite period. One never knows when mistakes may occur or when dishonesty may be attempted. The steel bill files are all very well enough they are not remarkable for their neatness or order, but a better way is to use a large spring back and paste the bills in alphabetical order according to the names of those to whom they are preferred. Then, if a dispute would be well to prepare the letter like those of an address book, so that it would be easy to find any bill at any time. Of course, this is only a cheaper home-made substitute for a regular letter file, which is the very best thing for the purpose.

Wall Isn't Judicially Defined.

In the case of state vs. Hennessey 90 Pac. Rep. 221, the Nevada supreme court gives a definition of the slang phrase "all in." The question came up in connection with the admission in evidence of a dying declaration, the declarant's statement that he was "all in" being relied on to show that he was under a sense of impending death. The court said: "The expression 'all in' is one frequently made use of in the western country. And when considered in the circumstances of the case may, we think, be taken to have meant that the speaker considered his life was practically at an end."

Seclusion, Banishment of Diseases.

An optimist is to be credited with the statement that the time will come when those who are afflicted with infectious diseases will be duly and not wanted. I also look forward to the time when it will be an institution for persons to dwell in secret for typhoid, cholera, and diphtheria as it will for a man to die or [illegible] in England. Very little [illegible] to date, but [illegible] the time [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

NEBRASKA NEWS

DEMENTED WOMAN KILLS SANATORIUM ATTENDANT.

THREW ACID INTO HIS FACE

Attendant Was Asleep at the Time—Woman Said He Was Trying to Murder Her Family—Other News.

Irene Nickel, a demented woman at the Bailey sanatorium, near Lincoln, stealthily crept from her bed, poured carbolic acid down the throat of J. Gallogly, an attendant who was asleep at the hospital, so that he died three hours after the poison was administered. The coroner's jury found that the man had come to his death by having carbolic acid thrown into his face and that the Bailey sanitorium was exonerated from any blame.

The woman wore handcuffs through the entire act. She rose in the early morning, went to the bed of the young man, who she thought was murdering her family, and she was determined to stop it. She said in her testimony that she debated whether she should take the poison herself or give it to the man. She decided that if she took the acid the killing would still go on but if she killed him it would stop at once, and her family would be safe.

Mr. Gallogly was sleeping in an adjoining room. He was lying on his back and his mouth was partly open. The woman took the poison from the chest and in the awkward way one would throw the contents of a bottle if both the hands were tied, she threw it on the face of the sleeping man, a part of the liquid going into his mouth and the rest on other parts of his face. He started from the bed and removed a part of the acid from his mouth by expectorating vigorously. His face and neck were badly burned besides parts of the body where the acid touched.

Irene Nickel lives at Alvo. She is said to come from a good family. Her folks thought that a few weeks at the sanitorium would restore her to her normal health. Her people did not like the idea of sending her to the state insane asylum. She has been in Lincoln for several months.

Kicks on Pure Food Law.

E. H. Stearns, attorney for the Great Western Cereal company of Chicago, called on Food Commissioner J. W. Johnson to protest that the Nebraska food law is in contravention of the state and federal constitutions, in that it appears to prevent the sale of cereals and a dish in a sealed package. The law prevents the giving of prizes and gifts with food stuff and Commissioner Johnson has ruled that a dish enclosed in a package of breakfast food is a prize prohibited by the state law. The manufacturers say this ruling is wrong. They assert that it is simply a matter of the sale of "so much oats and so much dish" at a fixed price, that the purchaser pays for the oats as well as the dish and has a right to make such a purchase.

Dies From Injuries.

John McLaughlin, the Burlington fireman who was run over by a train in the Ashland yards, died in Lincoln. The injury was the left leg necessitating its amputation above the knee. He was twenty-two years old. He has been in the employ of the Burlington but a short time and at the time of the accident was acting as a man on a switch engine in the Burlington yards at Ashland. He was helping some of the brakemen make up a train of cars and was on the east end of the rolling cars in the act of coupling when he fell down in the yards when the train caught him, mangling the left leg from the middle of the thigh downward and cutting off the toes of his right foot. Besides, he had an arm broken.

Appoints Dr. Osborn.

The official announcement has been made of the appointment of Dr. Frank Osborn, superintendent of the institute for feeble-minded youth at Beatrice. C. C. Husted, representing the governor, and Secretary of State Junkin, representing the board of public lands and buildings, will leave for Beatrice to check over state property and oversee the transfer of the same from Superintendent Johnson to Dr. Osborn. Land Commissioner Eaton and Private Secretary Dimmery were in Kearney to perform the same service at the industrial school for boys. Mr. Hayward has been succeeded by Prof. Sherman, late superintendent of the Columbus schools.

Clothes Were On Fire.

The queer spectacle of a man riding through the streets, part of his vehicle and even a part of his clothing afire, and he entirely unconscious of it, was presented at Grand Island last week. Wm. Schertel wondered what men were yelling at him for and upon turning about found part of the buggy seat and his coat burning. He is a fireman himself and had the flames extinguished without injury to himself. The wind was blowing all the smoke and odor away from him.

SAD STORM AT LIBERTY.

Lightning Strikes Livery Barn and Causes Considerable Damage.

The neighborhood of Liberty was recently visited by one of the worst electrical storms in a long time. The livery barn operated by J. L. Draucker was struck by lightning and entirely consumed. No horses were burned but nearly all the other equipment was destroyed. The building was owned by W. H. Richards and was insured for $60. Draucker had some insurance but not nearly enough to cover his loss.

Ben Maxwell's barn, one mile north of Liberty, was also burned, being struck by lightning about 11 o'clock.

Three carpenters who were sleeping in the barn, C. A. Ripley, Roy Housman and Ed. Buckley had a narrow escape, but managed to get out. All the contents of the barn were saved except the hay. Loss will probably reach from $200 to $500.

A barn on the premises of John Mallon west of town was also burned together with one horse and two stacks of oats.

A heavy rain of about two inches fell during the night and was of great benefit to the corn.

Big Partition Sale of Land.

The large real estate deal known as the Richard Williams estate, and located in Saunders county around Cedar Bluffs, was sold at referee's sale, in partition, upon order of the district court for the county. There were 13 eighty-acre tracts, or ten hundred and forty acres, which brought the fancy price of $111, the lowest, to $152, the highest, per acre. The homestead was sold to the widow for $150 per acre, and the eighty acres adjoining brought $152 per acre. These facts and figures indicate the value placed upon Saunders county lands by farmers of the community.

Hastings Teacher Hurt.

Miss Agnes Meston, teacher in the fifth and sixth grades, Hastings, met with a serious accident while visiting with relatives at North Platte. In stepping from a buggy at that place Miss Meston sustained a fall which resulted in the fracture of both bones of one leg just above the ankle joint. Although her injuries are not regarded as dangerous, it will necessitate the appointment of a substitute in the west ward school for several months. Miss Meston's parents have been notified of the accident and the matter has been referred to the teachers' committee with the power to act.

Marshal Faces Trial.

John Schmidt, village marshal of Glenville, was tried at Clay Center before County Judge Palmer and a jury on a charge of assault and battery preferred by Mr. Fred Freitag. The trial resulted in a disagreement. The difficulty grew out of a previous day's transaction in which Schmidt accused Freitag with preventing the arrest. Freitag shows unmistakable signs of rough treatment, but is not dangerously hurt.

Boys Are Released.

Olin Ghumm, "O. A." Cooper, Floyd and Ralph Shaffer, the four Rumbold lads accused of robbing the department store of Boyd & Lyford, were held by Judge Fallstead to answer in district court for the offense, but were released on their personal recognizance, with the understanding that their parents would be responsible for their appearance in district court at the proper time.

Race Horse Drops Dead.

Sir Townsend, a trotting stallion, owned by George Townsend, of Tecumseh, fell dead in a race at the county fair in Tecumseh. A ruptured blood vessel was the cause. Sir Townsend had a record of 2:24 1-2 and Mr. Townsend refused $1,000 for a half interest in him this summer.

Gallagher will be liberated after having served one year and twelve days actual time.

FALLS TO RIVER

SCORES OF LIVES LOST BY COLLAPSE OF BRIDGE.

SPANNED THE ST. LAWRENCE

The bridge was about a mile and a half in length, and half of it from the south shore to midstream, crumpled up and dropped into the water. Ninety men were at work on this section of the structure, and the whistle had blown at 5:30 for the men to quit work for the day, when there came a grinding sound from the bridge at mid stream. The men turned to see what had happened, and an instant later the cry went up, "The bridge is falling." The men made a rush shoreward, but the distance was too great for them to escape. The fallen section of the bridge dragged others after it, the snapping girders and cables booming like the crash of artillery. Terror lent fleetness to the feet of the frightened workmen as they sped shoreward, but only a few of them reached safety before the last piece of ironwork on the south shore was dragged into the river.

Three score of bridge workers are still held in the mesh work of debris at the bottom of the river. A roll call confirmed the early estimates of the losses of life. Seventy-nine men failed to answer to their names and were not among the injured at the Levis hospital. Fifteen bodies lie at the morgue awaiting the result of the coroner's inquest. Of the total of seventy-nine dead, or missing, sixteen were skilled American mechanics. Some of the bodies of the unfortunate men can be seen below the surface of the water, tightly wedged in an inextricable network of steel, where it is utterly impossible to reach them. Twenty-nine Indians and nineteen white Canadians are missing.

CARS IN A CRASH.

Fifteen Lives Lost in a Trolley Collision.

Fifteen persons were killed and about fifty injured in a head-on collision between an interurban express train, consisting of a motor car and a trailer, and a traction car on the Mattoon and Charleston electric line. The crash occurred on a sharp curve, one mile west of Charleston, Ills. A confusion of orders received over the telephone is said to have been the cause of the accident. The cars approached each other at a high rate of speed, and the impact was so terrific that the motor car and trailer were telescoped by the traction car. There was no warning and few passengers had time to escape by jumping. The passengers, nearly all of whom were en route to the Coles county fair at Charleston, were killed or maimed where they sat in their seats.

ACTOR MANSFIELD IS DEAD.

Richard Mansfield, the best known actor on the American stage, passed away Friday at his summer residence, Pleasure Oaks, New London. Death was directly due to disease of the liver, aggravated by complications.

Richard Mansfield was born on the island of Heligolan on May 24, 1857. His mother was Mme Mansfield Rudersdorf, a famous primadonna, and it was from her that Mansfield inherited his love for the arts.

Mr. Mansfield is survived by his widow, Beatrice Cameron Mansfield, who, until the birth of their one child, George Gibbs Mansfield, now seven years of age, was his leading woman for twelve years. He leaves two brothers, Felix and Henry Mansfield, and one sister, Madame Brassy, of Macon, France.

RATES TOO HIGH

CHARGE OF DISCRIMINATION IS MADE BY LEAD, S. D.

RAILROAD MEN ON STAND

Before Special Commissioner John H. Marble of Washington, D. C., is being held in Lead, S. D., a meeting of the interstate commerce commission to hear the complaint of the Lead Commercial club representing shippers of that district that the Northwestern and Burlington railroads are discriminating in their freight rates against the Black Hills.

The session is being attended by officials of both roads from Chicago, Omaha and Sioux City, and promises to be of more importance to the Black Hills. Representing the Northwestern road are Ben T. White, general solicitor; F. Walters, general manager; S. F. Miller, freight agent; S. M. Braden, general superintendent; each of whom has jurisdiction over the lines west of the Missouri river and M. E. Benjamin, general agent for the Black Hills. The Burlington road has H. Holden, general solicitor; George H. Crosby, traffic manager; both from Chicago, and J. L. Bentley, commercial agent at Deadwood.

The testimony so far has brought out the effect that railroads do charge considerably higher freight rates to the Hills than to other points much further west; notably Butte, Mont., but this is justified by the roads whose representatives allege that the difference in volume of business, tonnage carried and the greater expense of operating their lines in the Black Hills gives them the right to charge higher rates to points there.

They also announced a new schedule which goes into effect October 1, from Chicago, St. Paul and Minneapolis, Sioux City, Omaha, Lincoln and Denver to Black Hills points. This will give a general reduction of from 18 to 25 per cent.

ASKS WASHINGTON FOR AID.

Indian Inspector Asks Help in Fight on the Standard.

In pursuing his determination to make the Standard Oil company give honest measure, Isadore Wulfson, city inspector of weights and measures for Indianapolis, Ind., has appealed to the authorities in Washington for aid.

Mr. Wulfson relates his efforts to trap the Standard people and tells of the trial and conviction of a driver for giving short measure. He tells further of the fact that none of the company's cans are filled by machinery and that this is causing complications, and says in conclusion:

"I am determined that this company, just as every other dealer, shall give full measure and I would appreciate it if you will send me such information touching this question as you have been able to obtain."

NEGROES ARE STILL WANTED.

Black Men May Continue to Work on Panama Canal.

A reduction recently in the forces at work on certain divisions of the Panama canal gave rise to the report that the canal commission desired to get rid of negro laborers. When questioned in this matter, Col. Goetals, chairman of the commission, declared to the Associated Press that the rumor was without foundation. He explained that in recruiting the various divisions he had ordered that certain division should give preference to Americans who had been left without employment as a result of injaying off large numbers of men. This fact had given rise to the rumor that the colonel had declared that only white men were wanted.

Flood Situation is Serious.

Flood reports continue to be received at Tokio, Japan, and many parts of the country have collapsed and many bridges have been damaged. Several days must elapse before traffic is restored to normal. The rice crop of Tokio's flood plain is yet obstructed by water and the sea supply is almost completely stopped. The sanitary authorities of the central government are already busy with precautionary measures to prevent the outbreak of epidemics of cholera, dysentery and fever in houses and districts from the flood, a very extensive area of central Japan.

JAPAN IS GRATEFUL.

Owes United States Too Much to Ever Fight Us.

Kiujiro Ishii, director of the department of commerce of Japan, arrived in Los Angeles August 27. In an interview he said:

"I find that a great change has come over the Japanese who have left their land for America, and especially those in California. They seem to become imbued with the American spirit of progress and all seem very happy. Surroundings and conditions here are much better than any place which I have visited so far. Of the 17,000 Japanese in and about Los Angeles, I have not found a since case of want."

When questioned about the possibility of hostilities between the United States and Japan, Ishii smiled and said:

"Japan would not fight America under any circumstances. The people of this country have done so much for our nation that it is an absolute absurdity to imagine anything of the kind. It is what you call a joke."

Speaking of the conditions in the Philippine islands he continued:

"The greatest defense for Japan against foreign powers at this time is the ownership of the Philippine islands by the United States. Korea and Manchuria are fully adequate to care for our rapid increase in population, and 8,000 people emigrating to these countries each year."

Ishii was tendered a banquet by prominent citizens of Los Angeles.

MANGLED BY A LION.

Torn, bruised and suffering from shock, Mrs. Anna A. Houcke, fifty-five years old, of 78 Van Bram street, Pittsburg, lies at her home in a precarious condition as the result of an attack by a lion at Luna park, a summer resort in the city. Mrs. Houcke was rescued almost from the jaws of death while she lay on the ground where the animal had thrown her, and while scores of men were firing a fusillade of bullets into the enraged beast, who meanwhile was biting and clawing at the woman's body.

The attack occurred in the afternoon when the park was crowded with women and children. Without warning the lion appeared from behind one of the buildings, and with a roar pounced and sprang for Mrs. Houcke, who was nearest to him.

WILL REMOVE OLD FRIGATE.

Constitution to Be Taken From Boston to Washington.

There is a strong probability that the famous old frigate Constitution will be taken from Boston to Annapolis, or perhaps to Washington, to remain permanently. With every disposition to avoid arousing the ire of the other bay states and causing such a demonstration as was made when the hoodoo deliverance of Secretary Bonaparte in favor of taking the old ship out to seat and making a target of her, Secretary Newberry has had his hand bound by the congested condition at the Boston navy yard where the frigate lies, to call the attention of Governor Guild of Massachusetts to the necessity of moving her from the present berth.

In a letter addressed to Commonwealths Attorney Robert Franklin of Frankfort, Ky., chief prosecuting counsel for the state in the Goebel murder case, Governor Beckham offers immunity from official or personal harm in seeking that William S. Taylor is protected from arrest and allowed to return to the state of Indiana if he gets the consent of the Indiana court at Georgetown, this state, to testify in the next trial of Caleb Powers, charged with the murder conspiracy case. Governor Beckham says that he and the commonwealths attorney can absolutely insure Taylor's immunity and his return to Indiana.

HIGGINS LYNCHED

MURDERER OF THE COPPLES VICTIM OF MOB VIOLENCE.

WAS ON HIS WAY TO TRIAL

"The jury finds that Loris Higgins came to his death by strangulation, at the hands of parties unknown."—Verdict of coroner's jury which sat over remains of Loris T. Higgins.

A Bancroft, Neb., August 26 dispatch says: For the first time in many years, a criminal has been hanged in Nebraska before being given the full benefit of trial by jury. Loris R. Higgins, alias Fred Burke, the self-confessed murderer of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Copple of Thurston county, was in a secret manner taken from the officers who were conveying him to Pender, where his trial was to have begun today, and hanged from a bridge a half mile from this city by a mob consisting of about a score of masked men fully armed. The deed was performed with great deliberation, and had apparently been planned long before its execution.

Although some efforts at disguise were made by members of the mob, it is believed that several of them were recognized by Sheriff Young, who was one of the officers in charge of the prisoner, and their lives, in consequence, are under speculation. Public sentiment is divided on the question of the justification of the lynching.

Although the trial of Higgins was to have been held at Pender, the county seat of Thurston county, the fact that the lynching occurred in Cuming county transferred the whole duty of determining the blame for the outrage to the officers of Cuming county. This is made clear by the fact that the inquest held at the scene of the lynching, word of its occurrence being immediately telephoned to West Point, the seat of Cuming county.

The action of the mob, aside from being caused by the horrible features of the crime committed by Higgins, is believed also to have been caused by the general understanding that Higgins' attorney was to ask for a change of venue when the case was called this morning. The Copples were very popular in the community in which they lived. It is thought here tonight that there will be no arrests as a result of the lynching.

The lynching occurred shortly before 9 o'clock this morning. Since the day following his arrest at Hooper last May, Higgins had been kept at the Dodge county jail, save for the one day's trip made to Pender some weeks ago, when his preliminary hearing was had.

As the train bearing Higgins, Sheriff Young and a deputy pulled out of Lawrence this morning it was boarded by several men, who conducted themselves decorously enough till the train reached Bancroft. Then the stop was made here they descended and suddenly surrounded the engine. The men in charge of the train were compelled, at the points of revolvers, to run the engine ahead for a considerable distance. The mob, which by this time had been much augmented, then returned to the train, forced the surrender of Higgins, and proceeded with the lynching with as little ceremony as though attending a public lecture.

Higgins, although warned of what might happen when he should be brought back to face trial for his terrible crime, was badly frightened when he finally faced the mob. No mercy was shown him, however. He was immediately bundled into a dray, which had been requisitioned for the occasion. The wagon, followed by the mob, then proceeded to a bridge about half a mile from the town. A rope was then produced, and the noose was placed around the neck of the victim. He was permitted to make a statement, in which he voiced his sorrow for the crime he had committed, declared that he had long since made his peace with God, and was prepared to face his punishment. The last act of his brief talk he was pushed off the edge of the bridge. His body, encased in overalls and shirt, was probably instantaneous, but as the rope jerked taunt a score of bullets were fired into the suspended body by members of the mob.

The crime for which Higgins was to have been tried was one of the most horrible in recent criminal history in Nebraska. The murderer, who was little more than a boy, had been engaged only a few weeks before his crime by Mr. Copple as hired man on the farm occupied by the latter. On the morning of May 13 the children of the family—of whom there were five—were awakened by shouts from their father, in the rear of the house, accompanied by gun-shots. Their mother was also aroused, and hurried out of the house to learn the cause for the disturbance. Neither parent was ever seen alive again by the children. The father had been shot to death, while the mother's brains had been beaten out by part of a baseball bat in the hands of her assailant.

DIET FOR INVALID

DISHES THAT ARE BOTH NOURISHING AND TEMPTING.

Hot Weather is Period Most Trying Both for Invalid and Nurse—Cold Broth Sometimes Better Than Hot.

The chronic invalid or convalescent is particularly an object of pity in midsummer. The appetite is less captious in cold weather than in hot, and unfortunately for the housewife is less inclined to put forth special effort at the very time when the invalid is most exacting. As the convalescence or comfort of the ailing member of the household depends so much upon the diet, the effort to supply food at once nourishing and appetising must be sustained. Daintiness is extremely important in serving food for an invalid. Thin, undecorated china and glassware, a liberal use of the inexpensive paper doylegs, and garnishings of fresh parsley, cress and slices of lemon will help along the good work of tickling the jaded appetite.

Bread, the staff of life, is always a problem in serving food for invalid. When toast palls, try pulled bread for a change. This can be made in connection with your regular baking day. From your bread dough enough will be kept in a dry place and heated as needed.

Pulled Bread.—Bake ordinary yeast bread in the shape of long, narrow French loaves. When cold, but not entirely cold, cut lengthwise through the center, then with two forks scoop or pull the bread out from each half, leaving the two forks, pull it apart in strips six or seven inches long and an inch or an inch and a half in width and thickness. Line a large baking pan with brown paper and arrange the strips of bread on this, rough and crinkled edges uppermost. Set in the oven with the door partly open until it dries out thoroughly, then close the door until the bread turns a golden brown. Warm each time before serving. This is made like Zwieback, but its odd shape appeals to the invalid.

If broths must be served as nourishment, try them ice cold instead of hot. The nutritive qualities are there just the same and, if properly seasoned, iced broths are just as good for the patient as the hot ones, and infinitely more tempting. Chicken broth, as believed also to have been caused by the general understanding that Higgins' attorney was to ask for a change of venue when the case was called this morning. The Copples were very popular in the community in which they lived. It is thought here tonight that there will be no arrests as a result of the lynching.

USE FOR OLD SHIRTWAISTS.

Discarded Garments May Be Utilized in Many Ways.

Discarded white shirtwaists are not the useless articles they first appear. One with a pretty front may be cut out in neck and arms for a corset cover. A child's gulmpe or a lady's chemisette may also be cut from the portions of discarded waists. Embroidered collars are easily obtained from embroidered fronts. The edges are bound around with bias folds or narrow braid. A plain shirtwaist makes a good foundation for a chemisette of sheer material, as it aids in holding that decidedly modified to wander astride in place. The sleeves and neck are cut out, the armholes bound, and the chemisette stitched into position. If desired, the tail portion may be cut away just above the waist line, doing away with extra bulk at that point. A narrow hem will do as a finish.

Buttered Rice.

A nice "made-over" entree for lunch is made by boiling rice, draining well, and placing while warm in a bowl or mold. Then turn it out carefully upon a pie plate and set in a quick oven. When hot all through draw to you in the oven and butter plentifully. Serve very hot. Do not set it until it browns lightly. Then set once again, sift over it a thick coating of cheese—preferably Parmesan — and leave in the oven until the cheese is melted. Then beat irregularly with a meringue of whites of two eggs, beaten up with a pinch of celery salt. Brown very lightly, slip a spatula under the mold, and transfer to a hot platter.

Cheese Pudding.

One cupful each of grated or chopped cheese, breadcrumbs and milk, one beaten egg, one teaspoonful of butter, one-half teaspoonful each of salt and mixed mustard, one saltspoonful of pepper. Put cheese and bread crumbs in alternate layers in a buttered pudding dish, mix egg, milk and seasoning, and pour over and bake in oil firm, or about 15 minutes. Serve hot.

My wife and many of my friends have used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results and I can earnestly recommend them."

Jerome on Colored Evidence.

District Attorney Jerome, of New York, said one day of a piece of suspicious evidence:

"It is evidence that has been tampered with, colored. It is like the lady's report of her physician's prescription.

"A lady one day in July visited her physician. The man examined her and said:

"'Madam, you are only a little run down. You need frequent baths and plenty of fresh air, and I advise you to dress in the coolest, most comfortable clothes—nothing stiff or formal.'

"A few days after her husband asked her what the physician had said. The lady replied:

"'He said I must go to the seashore, do plenty of swimming, and get some new summer gowns.'"

Not Entire.

The aeronaut, after painfully extricating himself from the wrecked balloon, limped to the nearest farmhouse.

"Madam," he said to the woman who answered his knock, "can you accommodate with a night's lodging a balloonist who has come to grief?"

"I'd be glad to," she hesitated, "but you are an entire stranger to—"

"Not an entire one," he interrupted, with some severity. "For I have left my left ear, three teeth, and certain portions of my nose back there with the ruined car."

She Experimented.

A little girl of five was taken to the dentist recently and evinced considerable unexpected attention to the sermon which graphically told the story of the stilling of the tempest on the Sea of Galilee, and how Christ walked on the waves. In the afternoon her mother missed her and began an anxious search of the house. As she neared the bathroom she heard sounds of splashing, and hurried to the door to behold a small, excited face peering through the crack of the big white tub, and to hear a small, excited voice exclaim: "Say, mamma, this walking on the water is quite a trick."

Why He Was Jolly.

Bidder met Kidder, and Kidder was just bubbling with good humor.

"What are you feeling so uncommon jolly over?" said Bidder.

"Why, my best girl went and got married yesterday," said Kidder, slapping Bidder on the back.

"Seems to me that's about the last thing for a chap to feel jolly over," said Bidder.

"What!" said Kidder. "It was me she went and got married to!"

And so the cigars were on Bidder.—Browning's Magazine.

FEET OUT.

She Had Curious Habits.

When a person has to keep the feet out from under cover during the colds and chills in winter because of the heat and prickly sensation, it is time that coffee, which causes the trouble, be left off.

There is no end to the nervous conditions that coffee will produce. It shows in one way in one person and in another way in another. In this one the baby lived in D. Dak. she says:

"I have had my life's sweetest rest the night with my feet and limbs out of the bed on the coldest nights, and felt afraid to sleep for fear of catching cold. I was troubled almost every night with twitching and jerking of the lower limbs, and for most of the time I have been unable to go to church or to lectures because of that awful feeling that I must keep on the move.

"When it was brought to my attention that coffee caused so many nervous diseases, I concluded to drop coffee and take Postum Food Coffee to see if my trouble was caused by coffee drinking.

"I only drank one cup of coffee for breakfast but that was enough to do the business for me. When I quit it my troubles disappeared in an almost miraculous way. Now I have no more of the jerking and twitching and can sleep with any amount of budding over me and sleep all night, in sound, peaceful rest.

Girls Destined for Harems.

The Circassians, who live in the northwestern part of the Caucasus, and who think it is more honorable to live by plunder than by industry, make it a custom to bring their daughters up to be sold as slaves to the Turks and Persians. Circassian beauties, therefore, shine not in their native land but in the harems of the orient.

Laundry work at home would be much more satisfactory if the right starch were used. In order to get the desired stiffness, it is usually necessary to use so much starch that the beauty and fineness of the fabric is hidden behind a paste of varying thickness, which not only destroys the appearance, but also affects the wearing quality of the goods. This trouble can be entirely overcome by using Defiance Starch, as it can be applied much more thinly because of its greater strength than other makes.

The trust magnate leaped up from the banquet table and made a dive for his 100-mile-an-hour automobile.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

In 1869 Rhoda Grove drops out and Elk Creek and Humboldt are added, making a circuit of five appointments. In 1870 Salem is also added to this circuit, making in all nine appointments and having two pastors, W S Blackburn and J W Taylor.

In 1871 Table Rock and Salem asked to be divided and propose on each division to build a church at very promising points, and this seems to be the beginning of the building movement in this circuit as the report for 1872 shows that Table Rock has one parsonage valued at $1100, and 1873 three two-stories valued at $2,000 and parsonage $1400.

Humboldt remained on the Table Rock Circuit until 1875 which it was made a Circuit. Elk Creek was then placed on the Table Rock Circuit which then had four appointments, viz Table Rock, Clear Creek, Elk Creek and Mount Zion. Elk Creek was soon taken off the Table Rock Circuit but the county appointment at Clear Creek was continued for several years.

Our present church was erected in 1888 at a cost of $3000 and the same year the old church was converted into a parsonage. The present parsonage was built in 1895 and cost $1200.

In 1861 there were only four Methodist church edifices in the State of Nebraska and as there were very few school houses many pastors were not able to hold extra revival services, owing to "limits" and no public buildings suitable for such purposes. As might be expected they began to avail themselves of "God's first Temples," the native groves, and much old fashioned Methodist camp meetings. The first of these to be held in Table Rock Circuit was in 1861 on the South Fork of the Nemaha and is spoken of by Rev. L W Smith as "a glorious meeting at which there were many conversions." Camp meetings were held at Table Rock at an early date and for many years the meeting was one of the great events of the Nebraska City District.

In 1883 Presiding Elder Brier in his report of Table Rock writes as follows: "Here is where we hold our district camp meeting. Thirty souls were converted at our last camp, and we look forward to next year for even greater results." But the good results desired and expected at the meeting in 1884 were not accomplished, rather on account of the storms that were encountered and the meetings were discontinued.

The Table Rock Circuit and charge has been served by at least 26 pastors and their time of service is all the way from a few months on a charge to a term of three years. Only one pastor has left the charge and been returned later, viz Rev. L M Smith, who was pastor in 1860 and was again pastor in 1863 and 1864. Four of our pastors have served for a period of three years, viz. Peter Van Fleet, J. F. P. C. Johnson and A. W. Shamel.

The salary paid to these pastors runs all the way from almost nothing to $1000.00 per year. In 1859 the pastors salary for Table Rock Mission was estimated at $200.00 and was apportioned as follows: Table Rock, $60; Pawnee City, $50; South Fork $30; Long Branch, $30; Balls Class, $30;

The $900 mark was reached in 1884 and since that time the pastor has been paid from $700 to $1000 per year.

The various benevolences have been well supported by the Table Rock church and while the full amounts apportioned have not always been raised but there are very few blanks in the reports of Table Rock.

W. E. The primary election Tuesday called out a larger percentage of the voters than had been anticipated, and yet it was small compared with the total number of votes cast at the general election. In the first district 85 votes were cast and in the second 93; in the first district 71 republican votes were cast and in the second, while the democrats only polled 8 in the lower and 13 in the upper district the prohibitionists polled 2 votes. There was no scramble in the local republican ranks except for sheriff; where the votes were divided between the four candidates as follows:

Fuller 30; Goodale 12, Shano 37; Strunk 94; Shano getting the prefect for road overseer, Windfield 67 and Strejc 32; for this office John Lehman received democratic votes enough to be the democratic nominee. Judge Reese carried the precinct over Sedgwick in a vote of 60 to 35; Judge Raper received 75, Chapman 62, David K Miller received 88 for senator; on the democratic ticket the printed names carried the precinct and Mr. Jobe is also the partys candidate for sheriff.

For Justice of the peace M H Marble received 67 votes, B F Norris received 77 votes, for constable while his democratic competitors are E J Sibbs The returns of the county in dicate that the candidates on the county ticket are nominated, on the republican ticket being but one office contested, that of sheriff, for which there were four candidates and resulted in so close a vote that Mr. Fuller won by 7 votes over Mr. Goodale of Burchard.

Other kindly festivities have been good, but the thirteenth, in 1907, is to be better. Beginning September 25 and continuing with increasing interest day after day until October 5, there will have been nothing like it ever witnessed by the people of the trans-Missouri. Only in the matter of form and location will the program resemble past efforts. Greater attractions than have ever been secured before, more wonderful and more numerous, will be offered to the crowds of visitors, and the experience of former years has taught a number of new wrinkles in the way of producing more dazzling effects. In all the other details of the ten days' festal period."—The Excelsior.

William F Trilolf, an old soldier who has been at the Milford home, has been discharged on the accusation of using profane language, for having charged the commandant with being partial in his administration of the home and with starving the members and taking their pension money without authority. Other charges were made against Trilolf. He was a caller at the office of Land Commissioner Eaton yesterday to explain why he was out of the home. Mr. Eaton declares that the home of the soldiers home is drunkenness. Dr W H Wilson, who has practiced medicine in Table Rock for a quarter of a century, left on Monday for his new home in Lincoln, where he has purchased the Chas Bryan home and moved into it. Dr Wilson came here a young man, bought a drug store and began practicing medicine; about a year later he went back to the old home in Iowa where he was united in marriage to Miss Phebe Campbell and the young husband and wife came to Table Rock to start a new home; two daughters were born to them who are now grown into young womanhood; the family will be greatly missed in church and social circles of our little city. Dr Wilson was popular as a citizen and served in several official positions in the town; was a member and president of the school board for many years; served two terms in the house and one in the senate of the Nebraska legislature; a few months ago received the appointment of state health inspector, which necessitated his removal to Lincoln. He is interested in our public enterprises, is a large property holder both in town and country. Perhaps no man in the community would be more greatly missed than Dr Wilson; but his friends throughout the entire vicinity wish him and his health, wealth and happiness in his larger field of usefulness.

No Quarrel with Time.

According to the poet we are speeding "swiftly down the ringing grooves of change," and this is nowhere more apparent than in the alterations in the popular taste for the better, every thing considered. A writer in the New York Evening Post, in alluding to this matter, says that those who occupy the benches in the public parks on a summer afternoon to listen to the band are no longer satisfied with the "Star Spangled Banner" and a medley from the comic operas, but must have selections from Wagner and Gounod, though he indicates that they may not be averse to a little of Richard Strauss thrown in, we suppose, by way of dessert in the musical feast. There is a like fastidiousness in regard to painting, due to the influence of the museum of fine arts and picture exhibitions. Chromos, even when they are copies of celebrated paintings, have lost their vogue, and the fashion for fruit and flower pieces is going out, while "marines," representing heart-rending shipwrecks, have been superseded. It is somewhat satirically observed, by "Waves with cotton wool crests and a splash of moonlight which dissolves on touch because it is so suggestive." A change in the taste of literature is also apparent in the demand for short stories in dialect to replace the old-fashioned serial novels. Continued works of fiction in the monthly magazines do not have their admirers, though the majority of readers no longer like bloody tales of the frontier type or long drawn out sensational narratives of unhappy brides and ghostly visitants. Instead they prefer a story concerning the fair settlement worker who lives among the poor and perhaps makes a romantic marriage, or accounts of automobile adventures in which the heroine has many lucky escapes from peril to her various limbs. In sermons, too, the ministers keep abreast of the times in short discourses, treating the topics of the hour as they bear on moral and religious life, and do not model their sermons after the fathers, who often had sleepy congregations. What was fine enough in the departed days, that we hear so much praise about, says Boston Budget, is not adapted to the present. With Tennyson, we hold it well good things should pass, and with the changes of time we need not quarrel. They are usually in the direction of progress.

A Wholesome Change.

Slavery in its best aspect implied a moral obligation. The author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" softened the terrible arraignment by the description of the old-style southern slave-owner, with his ingrained sense of responsibility to his living chattels. With the destruction of slavery this standard passed. Undeviating the upward, economic struggle of the south is a story of savage exploitation of the negro through his fatal self-indulgence. Drink, drugs and debt—these three were made the chains of a new and subtle enslavement. Narcotics sold by the very employers of labor served, on the one hand, to return to the coffers of the employer all that he had paid out in wages; on the other, to keep his black workman in subservience. Within a few years coffin varnish has been distributed as a regular ration to the emergency workers on threatened levees, "to keep them up to the work." That system has, happily, passed. The "boss" who debauched his men with liquor or drugs is today despised by many whom he is not tolerated. The negro may keep his wage if he will but work honestly and, not less important, consistently for it. With the dawning of economic wisdom has come a recrudescence of the better spirit of slavery days, the responsibility of the master to the servant. The negro who chooses to be self-supporting and self-respecting has a better chance, says Collier's, than ever before under the wise guardianship of the new south.

Born, Not Worn.

William Warner of Great Barrington, Mass.; Albert G. Herpin of Trenton, N. J., and Joseph Root of Erie, Pa., are to engage in a struggle for the nonsportific championship of the United States. Warner has not slept a wink, so he says, for the past 70 years; the Trenton man says he has not closed his eyes for the 14 years immediately preceding. Mr. Root has a 35-year record as an anti-Rip Van Winkle.

The awful prophecy is made that Chicago in the future will be a city of women, as the strenuous life is killing off the men. This fact may somewhat dampen the ardor of the young men of the east to follow the historic advice of going west.

"Yaktitquma" is the name the Japanese apply to their "Jingoes," the ones who are always looking for trouble with other nations. The word might be taken over into English. It would "Chauvinistic ones."

NOT THE TIME TO STOP.

Manager Saw the Possibilities in the Situation.

Jim Johnstone, the famous baseball umpire, and recently in New York that baseball crowds were far kinder to umpires than they used to be.

"This is true of theater crowds, too," said Mr. Johnstone. "Why, with provincial touring companies in the past, malfeasment was regularly expected. In fact, the complaints profited by it in more ways than one.

"I know of a company that was playing 'The Broken Vow' in Pain's Rocks, a one night stand. The audience didn't like 'The Broken Vow,' and eggs, cabbages and potatoes rained upon the stage.

"Still the play went on. The hero raved through his endless speeches, dodging an onion or a baseball every other minute, and pretty sore from the missiles that he hadn't been able to dodge.

"But finally a gallery auditor in a paroxysm of rage and scorn hurled a heavy book, and the actor, thoroughly alarmed, started to retreat.

"'Keep on playing, you fool,' hissed the manager from the wings, as he threw the book back to him with a bound. 'Keep on till we get the other one.'"

PRESCRIPTIONS IN LATIN.

The Public Should Have Them Translated by the Druggists.

What virtue is there in the secrecy with which the doctor hedges about his profession?

"Professional etiquette" occupies a prominent place in the curriculum of every medical school, and when strictly analyzed "professional etiquette" seems to mean "doing what is best for the doctor, individually and collectively."

Among the things that "is best for the doctor" is the writing of his prescriptions in Latin, and thus keeping the public in ignorance not only of what it is taking for its ills, but forcing a call upon the doctor each time a prescription is needed.

That is to say that you have the ague. You had it last year and the year before. Each time you have visited the doctor and he has prescribed for you in Latin—which have never known what he has given you for the disease, and so each time you are forced to go to him again and give him an opportunity to repeat his prescription—in Latin, and his fee—in dollars.

If you ask the doctor why he uses Latin in writing his prescriptions, why he writes "aqua" when he means water, he will give you a technical dissertation on the purity of the Latin language, and the fact that all words are derived from it, etc. It will be a dissertation that you may not be able to answer, but it will hardly convince you:

It would be a good thing for the public to devise a little code of ethics of its own; ethics that will be "a good thing" for the public individually and collectively."

Let us apply one of the rules of this code of ethics to you, the individual:

You call on a physician when you have the ague, the grippe, or any of the other ills to which human flesh is heir, and which you may have again some day. He writes a prescription—in Latin, and you take this, to you, meaningless scribble to the druggist to have it compounded. Right here is where you, individually, are ill used. Say to the druggist that you want a translation of that prescription. It is your privilege to know what you are taking. While the doctor's code of ethics may not recognize this right it is yours just the same.

With the translated prescription in your possession you have two distinct advantages. You know what you are taking, and should you wish to call some other doctor at some time you will be able to tell him what drugs you have been putting into your system, and also if you should have the same disease again you can save yourself a visit to the doctor, and his fee, by taking this translated prescription to the druggist once more and having it refilled.

Corn, Not Worn.

Little Margaret's grandmother had written for a photograph of her namesake, the "baby." For material reasons it was advisable that the little girl should appear as well dressed as possible, and a cousin's new open-work dress was borrowed for the occasion. On being arrayed for the picture Margaret rushed to her father, crying:

Evil of Tipping System.

Although there is a great effort made to keep secret the thefts in hotels and restaurants in New York, it is quite evident they are on a rapid increase. The manager of a large restaurant says the system of having servants depend almost entirely upon patrons for their pay lowers their moral standard and causes them to look on those who are employed to serve as their legitimate prey.

Would Make Rich Crop.

It is estimated that 21,000,000 acres are available for rice growing in Louisiana and Texas, and the value of such crop would be $600,000,000. This would make the rice crop 20th in point of value among the cereals of this country.

Can Not Escape Thoughts.

Man is a thinking being, whether he will or no; all he can do is to turn his thoughts the best way.—Sir William Temple.

THE SCHOOLHOUSES

WHAT THEY MEAN TO THE PEOPLE OF THE COMMUNITY.

AND HOW THEY ARE BUILT

It Is the Money That Stays at Home Which Makes Good Ones Possible —A Simple System That Works.

Your schoolhouses. Those of the town, and those of the country districts. You know what they mean to you and to your children.

They represent the difference between ignorance and enlightenment. They mean to your children the difference between signing their names with a mark or in writing. They represent the difference between the civilization of the twentieth century, as this country knows it, and the barbarism of benighted Asia or Africa.

You want the schoolhouse, do you not?

You would willingly make sacrifices to keep it, would you not?

You glory in the free educational system of this country, do you not?

But, Mr. Citizen, did you ever sit down and consider carefully what it is that makes possible the schoolhouses of this country; the schoolhouses that stand as beacon lights on the tops of a thousand hills; the schoolhouses that carry cheer and enlightenment to the hearthstones of the homes of a thousand valleys?

It is the taxes that you and your neighbor, and your neighbor's neighbor pay into the school fund year after year, is it not?

And why do you pay it?

Because you own property—real estate, bonds and mortgages—and because that property is valuable.

What makes your real estate valuable?

It is the prosperity of the community. As the community grows and prospers the value of your property increases. As your property increases in value and you write your wealth in thousands instead of hundreds, the amount you pay into the school fund, increases. When the school fund increases the old building gives place to a new and more modern structure, in which your children and your neighbor's children secure their instruction. And, again, the erection of the new building but adds more to the value of your property.

It is an endless chain system that builds villages out of cross roads, and cities out of villages.

Who are you, Mr. Citizen, and who is your neighbor and your neighbor's neighbor, whose contributions to the school fund make the schoolhouses possible? You and your neighbor, and your neighbor's neighbor, are the farmers, the merchants, the doctors, the blacksmiths. You are each and every man who go to make up the community in which you live, and it is only when you work collectively that you accomplish results—that you build up new schoolhouses.

And how shall you work collectively?

By a simple system of boosting one another. You, we will say, have oats to sell—your neighbor buys them of you. He, you will say, has dry goods to sell—you buy them of him. It is this system of mutual help that makes the town grow into the city, that increases the price of real estate in the town and in the community surrounding it, that builds new schoolhouses.

The dollar that is unnecessarily sent away from home never bought so much as a nail for a schoolhouse, never put a shingle on its roof.

But the dollars that are unnecessarily sent away from home send back to the community which they left only ruin. It is these dollars that prevent the replacing of the leaking roof, the broken door hinge or the rickety desk.

It is the dollars that are unnecessarily sent away from home by you, and your neighbor, and your neighbor's neighbor that prevent the erection of your, and your neighbor's, and your neighbor's neighbor's real estate. That makes the school fund grow less year after year. That forces the discharge of the competent teacher for a less competent one. That reduces the standing of your schools in the educational system of the country.

Work it backwards, send your money for the things you need away from home instead of spending it at home, and the system that builds villages out of cross roads, and cities out of villages, that increases the value of your real estate and permits you to write your wealth in four figures where previously three figures were enough, and you will make of the thriving little city but a village, and of the village but a cross roads.

Do you not believe, Mr. Citizen, and do you think your neighbor and your neighbor's neighbor should believe, that it pays best to keep the dollars in the home community? Keep the system moving forwards, help to make a city of your village. Boost your town's interests and you boost your own.

Buttermilk Cocktail.

GAMES OF SHARPERS.

Millions upon millions of dollars are fraudulently taken from the pockets of the people year after year through the operation of confidence men. The schemes used by these men are numerous. Nearly all are based upon the fact that the average person is always willing to take the best of a bargain.

During the past few months swindlers have been operating in different parts of the country, and their method, while a modification of an old swindling game, has some new features worthy of notice. Their usual procedure is to locate farmers who are not well known to local bankers and loan men. They approach the farmer and under pretext of seeking to purchase farming land, manage in some way to secure his signature. This is generally done by inducing him to write a letter, or to sign some statement. Once the signature is secured, a fictitious deed to the farmer's land is prepared and this is fixed up in such a manner as to show the seal of some notary or other officer. Then with this deed the swindler is in position to negotiate a loan upon the land. This game has been successfully worked in a number of western states.

Residents of agricultural districts should be continually on their guard against the signing of receipts or any kind of contract which may be presented to them by strangers. Within the past few months there have been numerous cases where farmers, in signing what they thought was a receipt for the money at home will do this. It means home opportunities for your children.

TOWN BOOSTING TIPS.

The visitor who trips over your broken sidewalk will not have a very high opinion of your town as a place of business.

The home town is the best place for the boys if you will make the home merchants your customers.

The money at home will do this. It means home opportunities for your children.

Don't drive around the hole in the road week after week. Get your neighbors together and fix it.

The home market for the farm products is the saving clause in our system of government. Take away the home community. Not necessarily home markets and the farms will soon become unprofitable and valueless.

No city mail-order house will extend credit to you when times are hard, or crops fail. Could you consistently ask any of your home merchants when you send your money to the city during the days of prosperity?

Encourage small factories to locate by means of a bonus, but by keeping the children in the home town that they may become factory employes, and get a home opportunity to raise in the world.

Do not begrudge the money paid for taxes when it is used for road and town improvements. Such an expenditure is like bread cast upon the waters—it will return many fold.

BOTH TRACKS USED

NO HARD AND FAST RULE FOR RAILROADS.

Division Superintendent Explains Why Some Lines Use the Left Hand Right of Way, and Others the Reverse.

"On a double-track system which track do the seat-bound trains use?" asked the man with the high forehead at the Railroad club last night, according to the Kansas City Star.

"Same answer," curtly replied the operating official, who began to suspect that he was being jollied.

"I can prove you are wrong," said a young man who had been studying a picture that hung on the wall. It was a picture of the Twentieth Century limited on the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railroad. It showed a double track with the train speeding along on the left-hand track.

"Here is the Los Angeles limited on the Chicago & Northwestern," said another man. "It's on the left-hand track."

"Those are the exceptions," explained the operating official. "The Lake Shore and the Northwestern Eastern are the only roads I know of other railroad in the country uses the right-hand track.

"You may be right," said a traveling salesman present, "but I rode from Holliday, Kan., to Emporia the other day. It's double track all the way, and we used the left-hand track."

Expert Says Them Right.

"Must have been something the matter with the right-hand track," growled the operating official. But there wasn't. A division superintendent of the Santa Fe joined the group and he was appealed to.

"We use the right-hand track when-ever we have double track except on the Emporia line. We change from the right-hand track to the left-hand track at Holliday. This exception is because of the grades. The line was originally a single-track system. The grades on the original line were suited for west-bound traffic. So we built the second track for east-bound traffic. It is this peculiar condition that makes us left-handed on the Emporia cut-off.

"The right-hand track is in general use by virtue of a rule adopted by the American Railway association, which requires that all standard railroads use the right-hand track. It was thought best to use the right-hand track for the reason that it affords the engineer a better opportunity to observe the signals which are in use on all double-track systems. It was the theory of the management of the Northwestern and of the Lake Shore lines that if the engineer was on the left-hand side he could watch both tracks, so when the rule was adopted an exception was made in favor of these lines."

Explanation of Time Card.

"Now that we have settled this proposition let us have an explanation why we never see anything on official time cards concerning north-bound and south-bound trains," suggested the man who had started the first argument.

"In making up time cards only two directions are recognized," said the operating official. "Every train is either an east-bound or west-bound train. The east-bound trains carry even numbers and the west-bound trains odd numbers. For instance, a train from Coffeyville, which is south from Kansas City, is carried as an east-bound train and trains to Leavenworth and Omaha, which are north of Kansas City, are carried as west-bound trains.

"Now, I suggest by way of conclusion that you fellows who are supposed to be in the railroad business brush up a few elementary principles of railroading. I'd start a night school for your benefit most any time."

MACHINE DUMPS THE DIRT.

By Means of Movable Trestle, Hole is Quickly Filled Up.

The Cleveland Short Line is making a fill 6,000 feet long just outside of the city limits, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. It extends from Rockport Road eastward to the west to a point near East Seventy-first street on the east. The work is one of the most difficult on the Beltline job. The valley in which the roadbed is being built is about 400 feet deep at some places. The fill was necessary in order to maintain the low grade in which the road excels.

OLD MEN HAVE FAST RUNS.

Veteran Engineers in the Most Responsible Positions.

"Nearly all of the fast runs on the Central are in charge of the oldest men," said Travelling Engineer Patterson, "and they make good, too. Once in a while a younger man might make a better single run, but day in and day out the old man will beat him. If anything goes wrong the old engineer is right on the job. He doesn't get rattled and go up in the air. His long experience has included something like it at some time or other, and he goes to work to get things straight where a younger man would lose his head.

"And as for nerve—why, one of the fastest runners on the road is Bony Thompson, and he is more than 70 years old. He will run as fast as anybody wants to travel along rails, and always handles his engine with rare judgment.

"Then there's Billy Raymond. He isn't any younger than Thompson. If he doesn't run fast enough to make time with the Empire State Express we haven't heard anything about it.

"Martin Ryan is another. His age is between 65 and 68, and yet he has been with the Limited Express that pull the Twentieth Century. Ryan is independently rich, and he just rails roads for fun. Life wouldn't be worth living for him off the road, and the company is glad to have him. Denny Cashin is in the sixties, and he runs nothing slower than the Lake Shore Limited.

"We wouldn't know how to go about placing an age limit, for some men are old at 40 and others are young at 70."

CASUALTIES ON THE ROAD.

Herr Guillery, an official of the archive bureau of the Prussian railway administration, has prepared a comparative table of statistics of those killed and injured by railways in various countries.

He finds that both absolutely and relatively the railroads in the United States are the most deadly. The United States has more mileage than all of Europe, but, even taking that into consideration, the United States holds preeminence in proportional figures.

Out of every 10,000 employes the relative figures of killed are: United States, 26.1; England, 12.3; Switzerland, 8.5; Russia, 7.6; British India, 6.7; Belgium, 4.1.

Out of every 1,000 railway employes the ratio of the number injured each year is as follows: United States, 43.5; Switzerland, 26.3; England, 11.8; Belgium, 11; Germany, 2.4.

Herr Guillery finds that in a single year, the fiscal year of 1902, 376,800 persons were injured in the United States, of whom 60,000 were employes, and 9,300 were killed, of whom 3,600 were employes.

In the matter of travelers injured France holds the lowest record in the world. United States shows proportionately 40 times as many injured as Russia, 22 times as many as Italy, as England 20, Belgium, 8, Switzerland 4, Germany, 2.

Wanted Heavy Damages.

When the old New England railroad was in enjoyment of an independent corporate existence, a trotting horse that had been entered in all the races which the New England fair circuit was killed in an accident to the train upon which the animal was being transported.

The owner put in a claim not only for the value of the horse, but also for the first prize in every event in which he had been entered. The total was a staggering one, especially for a bankrupt railroad.

In prosecuting his claim the owner maintained that the horse was the most remarkable trotter the country had ever seen and that he would have been a dead sure winner throughout the season.

The court, however, was a more moderate view of the animal's trotting abilities, and based the sum of the damages upon the actual value of the equine wonder.

The making of the fill requires the work of experts. The dumping of dirt is made easier by a movable wooden trestle. It is called the "Jumbo" by the workmen. The dirt cars are backed out onto the trestle over a work-train tracker and the trestle is extended along as the dirt is piled up under it. The dirt cars dump automatically and alternate. No two dump in succession on the same side of the fill. This makes the work on both sides uniform.

The dirt for this kind of work is taken from two steam shovels that are excavating near by. The temporary tracks extend from the steam shovels to the fill and the trains are operated by dinky engines that make fast time.

SERIAL STORY

FRIDAY THE 13TH

A Novel by THOMAS W. LAWSON

The sacredness of the scene made me feel like an intruder, and I started to leave the room. But in a moment Beulah Sands was her usual self and, turning to me, she said: "Mr. Randolph, please forget what you have seen. For an instant, as I saw Mr. Brownley's awful misery, I thought of nothing but what he had done for me and how I could do for my father, what a penalty he has paid. From what you said when you left and the fact that I got no word from father to-day, I fear the worst and did not dare look at the tape; I simply waited and hoped and—prayed. Yes, I prayed as my mother taught me to pray when-ever I was helpless and could do nothing myself. And I felt that God would not let the noble work of two such men be overthrown by those you were battling with. In the midst of a calmness that I took for a good omen, you came. Can you blame me for forgetting myself? Mr. Brownley," the voice was now calm and self-controled, "tell me what you have done. Where do we stand?" "There is little to tell," Bob answered. "Cameron's attack on Standard Oil have taken me into camp as they would take a stuck pig. They have made a mouthpiece out of Bryan and are using him for all he is worth. This caused Mr. Randolph a heavy loss. Roughly, I figure that of your four hundred thousand capital and the million four hundred thousand profit you had this morning, only your capital remains."

Wishing to spare Bob, I interrupted and myself gave the girl briefly the details of what had happened. She listened intently and seemed to take in all the trifling "System" matters; seemed to see just what it meant to us and to her. But she made no comment, showed by no movement or sign that she suffered. As soon as I was through she turned to Bob, who had stood with his eyes fastened upon her face, as though some source of life to him must come an assurance that this was all a bad dream.

"Mr. Brownley," she said, "let us figure up just where we stand, so that we may see anything on official time cards concerning north-bound and south-bound trains," suggested the man who had started the first argument.

"In making up time cards only two directions are recognized," said the operating official. "Every train is either an east-bound or west-bound train. gone for a week and that I was on my way. She said in her calm, confident manner: "I don't think there is anything to worry about, Mr. Randolph. Mr. Brownley is too much of a man to allow an affair of this sort to do anything more than annoy him. He will be back all the better for his rest."

CHAPTER IV.

The following week Bob returned to the office. He had not changed, and yet he had changed greatly. Rest had apparently done much for him. His color was good, his step elastic as of old, and his head was thrown back as it he were bowled up for the fray and wanted all to know it. Yet there was something in the eye, in the setness of the jaw, in the hair-trigger speed with fiercely savage grip in which he closed his strong hands on the arms of his chair, that told me more plainly than that this week in the optimistic, soft-hearted Bob Brownley I had known and loved. I could not help feeling that if I had been a leader of forlorn hopes and picked him for the one who was sat before me and come to my men when I was selecting bomb-throwers, I should have seized upon him of all men as the one to stalk the cear or his marked minions. Surely the iron that had entered Bob's soul a week before had affected his whole being. I think Beulah Sands had some such thoughts. For I saw a shadow of perplexity cross her broad, low forehead after her first meeting with him, a shadow that had not been there before.

For days after Bob's return I saw little of him. I think Beulah Sands saw less. During stock exchange hours he was not most of his time on the floor, but he executed few of our orders. He merely looked them over and handed them out to his assistants. As far as I could learn, he spent much of his time there yesterdaying through hpke's graveyards, a not uncommon pastime for active business members whose first thought specials have been open & witched by the "System" tower-man. So strong had become this habit of going about from pole to pole with bent head and a far-off gaze that his fellow members began to humor and respect it. They all knew that Bob clashed up against the Sugar panic hard. No one knew how hard, but all guessed from his changed appearance and habits that it must have been a bone-smashing blow. Nothing so quickly and so deeply stirs a stock exchange man's feelings for his brother member as to know that "They" have pitched his El Dorado fiver—that is, if he has been a good fellow. They will humor his every whim and patiently await the day when he shall be again in normal condition; for all stock gamblers whom Fate, or the old hag's hunchback twin, the "System," has dumped, either remain below the surface or eventually round to. Every day as soon as the stock exchange closed, Bob disappeared, whither I could not learn. I had tried once or twice to draw him out, under pretense of insisting upon his accepting my wife's invitation to dine with us. He always had a good excuse for one to take to Kate, but that was all. Apparently he had no idea that I took any interest in his movements after business hours.

As for Beulah Sands, there was but one change noticeable in her. Whenever a footstep stopped in front of her door she looked up from her work with an expectant, almost appealing gaze, as though she were always waiting for some one. I had not seen Bob in her office since that disastrous Sugar day, and as he went directly to the exchange every morning and left there every afternoon without returning to the office, doing all his business by messenger or over the wire, there was but little chance of his meeting her.

November 1st had come and gone, and the books showed no change in Beulah Sands' account. There was

"Miss Sands, I understand what you mean," Bob broke in, "and I should apologize for not having consulted you about your business affairs. The fact is, I have not been quite clear as to the best thing to do. I hope you don't think I have forgotten. Never for a moment since I took charge of your affairs have I forgotten my promise to see that they were kept active. Truly I have been trying to think out some successful plan, but—but—there was a hoarseness in his voice—"I have not had my old confidence in myself since that day in Sugar when I killed your hopes and destroyed the chance of saving your father—no, I have not had that confidence a man must have in himself to win at this game."

THE STORY.

JOAB with feverish haste adjusted his garments and started towards the palace of King David. The few who were in the market place at that early hour were startled and surprised to see the captain of the hosts of Judah abroad at such time, knowing that only the most important matters could take him to the presence of the king at that unseasonable hour. But Joab was too much absorbed with his own thoughts to notice the startled glances which followed him. For that morning a secret messenger had brought to him alarming tidings from Mahanaim, the royal city of Israel, where Ishbosheth, the son of Saul reigned. These tidings were to the effect that the king had been slain upon his bed.

"And now is David's opportunity," muttered Joab to himself as he hurried on. "Now will he be able to bring Israel under his hand. Will he but give his consent, I will start with the morning, this very day."

And arriving at that moment at the palace door, he knocked impatiently, loath to let one precious minute be wasted. Urging the surprised servant to hasten he entered the audience room of the king, and not long after David the king entered.

"What but the king's good?" responded Joab, reassuringly. "I seek the bidding of thy king to go and bring Israel under thy banner."

Thou, who hast killed Abner, the captain of the hosts of Israel, just when I had made a league with him," excitedly demanded David. "Wouldst thou kill Ishbosheth, the king, also?"

Joab winced at the words of David.

"Righteous act! Callest thou murder an act of righteousness? Whose hand is stained with blood? Surely it was not by emissary which hath done this thing!"

"Nay, nay, I am guiltless of such charge. I know not who hath killed Ishbosheth upon his bed, but this Joab, the leader of thy armies, knows, and that is that thy opportunity hath come to spread thy rule and thy kingdom over all Israel. Bid me," Joab, went on rapidly and with increasing enthusiasm, "bid me go, and I promise thee ere a fortnight hath passed to have all Israel under thy banner."

"Think you for a moment," he thundered, "that David would take a mean advantage of the misfortunes of his brothers in Israel? Does David's kingdom increase through unholy intrigue? Has God left the heavens that David cannot still trust him?"

"But it is now or never," protested Joab. "Israel needs a leader. If I find not such in thee they will choose one from among themselves to lead them. There are many ambitious souls among the men of Israel."

"But this thing is not of God. If Israel seek me not as king, then will not I reach out for the kingdom."

Further protest on the part of Joab was prevented by the hurried entrance of a servant who announced the arrival of two messengers from Israel who demanded to see King David at once, and at a sign from the king they were admitted.

Bowing low before the king, they waited until he bade them rise, when they addressed him as follows:

"We be thy servants, O king. We are Rechab and Baanah, the sons of Rimmon the Beerothite, and are come to David at once, and at once to our Lord. Behold the head of Ishbosheth, the son of Saul thine enemy, which sought thy life."

And as they spoke they unrolled before the startled eyes of David and Joab the ghastly head of the dead king of Israel.

"The Lord hath avenged my lord the king this day of Saul, and of his seed."

But they got no further, for David turned upon them and in a voice which cut like steel he said:

"As the Lord liveth, hath it redeemed my soul out of all adversity, when one told me saying, Behold, Saul is dead, thinking to have brought good tidings, I took hold of him and slew him in Ziklag, who thought that I would have given him a reward for his tidings. How much more, when wicked men have slain a righteous person in his own house upon his bed? Shall I not therefore now require his blood of your hand, and take you away from the earth?"

And turning to his young armor bearers standing near he commanded them to seize Rechab and Baanah and to take them out and slay them, which command was promptly obeyed. Their hands and their feet and hanged them up over the pool in Hebron.

But David had the head of Ishbosheth taken and buried in the sepulcher of Abner in Hebron.

Now, when tidings of these things reached the ears of the people of Israel, they were glad, and knew that it had been concerned in the wicked plot, and that he was not trying in any way to force an extension of his kingship over Israel. For this reason when the people from all the tribes had come together it was quickly agreed that they should seek David out at Hebron and sought to make him to become king over Israel as well as Judah.

And so it came to pass that a few days after, even while Joab was speaking to his assembled friends of the folly of King David by which he had lost his chance of winning control over all of Israel, that the elders from all the tribes met in audience with David at Hebron, saying to him;

"Behold, we are thy bone and thy flesh. Also in time past when Saul was king over us, thou it was he that leadest out and broughtest in Israel: and the Lord said to thee, Thou shalt feed my people Israel, and thou shalt be a captain over Israel."

So all David's people came with them in Hebron before the Lord, and there they anointed David king over Israel, and the rejoicing of the people exceeded what had been seen in Israel since the days of Judah and Israel.

Papa's Occupation.

Recently a little girl applied for a registration blank in a New York school. The teacher wrote down her name, her address, her age, but at "Father's occupation" the child balked and hung back. The teacher had visions of a parental burglar, and reasoned gently. "Tell me what it is my dear, and I will see whether we shall put it down or not." "Aren't I won't tell," the girl insisted. "Just tell me," said the teacher, "and I won't speak of it to anyone else." The little girl hesitated and twisted her hands. "He's a worm eater," she finally burst out. "A worm eater!" cried the horrified teacher. "Yes'm. He's a worm eater in an antique." And it transpired that the father was daily engaged in boring imitation worm holes in bogus antique furniture, so that the dealers can say: "Look at the worm holes if you think this isn't genuinely old."

New Wood Preservative.

The preservation of wood with sulphur, applied in liquid form, is gaining special favor in Germany. The material completely fills the cell spaces of the fiber, and at moderate temperatures it is little affected by water, acids and alkaline solutions, though it oxidizes readily at high temperatures. Poplar is best adapted for this treatment, results with oak and pine being less satisfactory.

DAVID UNITES THE KINGDOM

STORY BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1907, by the Author, W. E. Hoben.)

SERMONETTE.

David knew how to forgive. Israel had shared with King Saul in the persecution of David, but David was ready to turn good for evil. He had no scores to settle when the providences of God brought his former enemies under his power.

Selfish ambition David had not. On the contrary, his career sticklingly illustrates the possibility of a human soul gauging his ambitions in harmony with the will of God. He wanted only what God in his own time and way was ready to give. Hence he escaped the pitfalls of human plotting and intrigue and his hands were free from the stains of the blood of his enemies.

David desired the kingdom because God had promised it to him and because he desired to serve to serve God through such exalted office. He wanted to be king that he might lead the nation in the paths of righteousness.

There is no loftier or holier ambition in the world to-day than to desire power and a position that such may be exercised and used to the honor and glory of God and the blessing of mankind.

Schisms in families or in nations are sad and distressing, and the sooner they are healed the better. But reunion which met the voluntary approval of both factions. David might have subdued Israel by force of arms, but he chose rather the method of righteousness and truth and justice.

God can give what human scheming and plotting cannot gain.

The question arises: "Would David have been justified in the use of force in reuniting possession of that which God had promised should be his?" Is the injunction: "Suffer wrong rather than do a wrong" a safe principle to follow in our dealings with others.

In Psalm 37, Twenty-third Psalm, declares that after the walk through the valley of the shadow of death the Lord prepared for him a table in the presence of his enemies. Such proved literally true in his experience. God laid the united kingdom at his feet, and the plottings of his enemies had failed. It is surely true that they that wait upon the Lord shall not be ashamed.

THE STORY.

JOAB with feverish haste adjusted his garments and started towards the palace of King David. The few who were in the market place at that early hour were startled and surprised to see the captain of the hosts of Judah abroad at such time, knowing that only the most important matters could take him to the presence of the king at that unseasonable hour. But Joab was too much absorbed with his own thoughts to notice the startled glances which followed him. For that morning a secret messenger had brought to him alarming tidings from Mahanaim, the royal city of Israel, where Ishbosheth, the son of Saul reigned. These tidings were to the effect that the king had been slain upon his bed.

"And now is David's opportunity," muttered Joab to himself as he hurried on. "Now will he be able to bring Israel under his hand. Will he but give his consent, I will start with the morning, this very day."

And arriving at that moment at the palace door, he knocked impatiently, loath to let one precious minute be wasted. Urging the surprised servant to hasten he entered the audience room of the king, and not long after David the king entered.

"Thou, who hast killed Abner, the captain of the hosts of Israel, just when I had made a league with him," excitedly demanded David. "Wouldst thou kill Ishbosheth, the king, also?"

Joab winced at the words of David.

"Righteous act! Callest thou murder an act of righteousness? Whose hand is stained with blood? Surely it was not by emissary which hath done this thing!"

"Nay, nay, I am guiltless of such charge. I know not who hath killed Ishbosheth upon his bed, but this Joab, the leader of thy armies, knows,

APPEAL THAT WAS NEEDED.

Judge Must Also Have Been Follower of the Gentle Art.

John Quincy Adams, of Massachusetts, third of that name, who died about ten years ago, was very fond of fishing, and not especially fond of his legal profession.

One day, the story runs, a case in which he was counsel was down for trial in a Massachusetts court. Mr. Adams had made his appearance, but sent a letter to the judge. That worthy gentleman read it, and then postponed the case with the announcement:

"Mr. Adams is detained on important business."

It was afterward learned by a colleague of Adams that the letter read as follows:

"Dear Judge: For the sake of old Izaak Walton please continue my case till Friday. The smelts are biting, and I can't leave."

CHILDREN TORTURED.

When a little girl or boy is tortured with the Cuticura Remedies her feet and limbs were covered with running sores. In about six weeks we had her completely cured and there has been no recurrence of the trouble.

"In July of this year a little boy in our family poisoned his hands and arms with poison ivy. In twenty-four hours his hands and arms were a mass of torturing sores. We used only the Cuticura Remedies, and in three weeks his hands were entirely healed up. Mrs. Lizzie Vincent Thomas, Fairmont, Walden's Ridge Tenn., Oct 13, 1905."

Cure to Have One.

Lincoln Steffens, in an address on municipal politics, said in Chicago of a certain city:

"That city is as notorious for its rottenness as the town of Pebbles is notorious for another characteristic.

"Here is an incident that will give you an idea of the reputation of Pebbles.

"On a train one day a man rushed into a car; held up his hand for attention, and shouted excitedly:

"'Anybody here who belongs to Pebbles?'

"'Aye; I do,' said a small, dry old fellow calmly.

"'Then,' said the other, 'lend us yer corkscrew.'"

Burglar's Pathetic Wail.

A burglar arrested in London the other night remarked regretfully: "I knew the weather would do 10 houses in two hours. But I am sorting old."

No Quarrel with Time.

According to the poet we are speeding forever down the ringing grooves of change, and this is more apparent than in the alterations in the popular taste for the better, every thing considered. A writer in the New York Evening Post, in alluding to this matter, says that those who occupy the benches in the public parks on a summer afternoon to listen to the band are no longer satisfied with the "Star Spangled Banner" and a medley from the comic operas, but must have selections from Wagner and Gounod, though he indicates that they may not be averse to a little of Richard Strauss thrown in, we suppose, by way of dessert in the musical feast. There is a like fastidiousness in regard to painting, due to the influence of the museum of fine arts and picture exhibitions. Chromos, even when they are copies of celebrated paintings, have lost their vogue, and the fashion for fruit and flower pieces is going out, while "marines," representing a battle-ending shipwreck, have been superseded, it is somewhat satirically observed, by "Waves with cotton wool crests and a splash of moonlight which discloses nothing because it is so suggestive a change in the taste of furniture is also apparent in the demand for short stories in dialect to replace the old-fashioned serial novels. Continued works of fiction in the monthly magazines still have their admirers, though the majority of readers no longer like bloody tales of the frontier type or long drawn out sensational narratives of unhappy brides and ghostly visitants. Instead they prefer a story concerning the fair settlement worker who lives among the poor and perhaps makes a romantic marriage, or accounts of automobile adventures in which the heroine has many lucky escapes from perils of various kinds. In sermons, too, the ministers seem to abreast of the times in short discourses, treating the topics of the hour as they bear on moral and religious life, and do not model their sermons after the fathers, who too often had sober congregations. Even the fine enough in the departed days, that we hear so much praise about, says Boston Budget, is not adapted to the present. With Tennyson, we hold it well good things should pass, and with the changes of time we need not quarrel. They are usually in the direction of progress.

A Wholesome Change.

Slavery in its best aspect implied a moral obligation. The anti-slavery novel of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" softened the terrible arraignment by the chapters on the old-style southern slave-owner, with his ingrained sense of responsibility to his living chattels. With the destruction of slavery this standard passed. Underlying the upward, economic struggle of the south is a story of savage exploitation of the negro through his fatal self-indulgence. Drink, drugs and—these three were made the chains of new and subtle enslavement. Narcotics sold by the very employers of labor served, on the one hand, to return to the coffers of the employer all that he had paid out in wages; on the other, to keep the negro workman subservience. Within a few years cocaine had been distributed as a regular ration to the emergency workers on threatened levees, "to keep them up to the work." That system has, happily, passed. The boss who debauches his men with liquor or drugs is to-day despised; in many sections he is not tolerated. The negro may keep his wage if he will but work honestly and, not less important, soundly. Ours for it! With the dawning of economic wisdom has come a revival of the nobler spirit of slavery days, the responsibility of the master to the servant. The negro who chooses to be self-supporting and self-respecting has a better chance, says Collier's, than ever before under the wise guardianship of the new south.

Born, Not Worn.

William Warner of Great Barrington, Mass.; Albert G. Herpin of Trenton, N. J., and Joseph Root of Erie, Pa., are to engage in a struggle for the nonsporific championship of the United States. Warner has not slept a wink, so he says, for the past 70 years; the Trenton man says he has not closed his eyes for the 14 years immediately preceding. Mr. Root has a 25-year record as an anti-Rip Van Winkle.

The awful prophesy is made that Chicago in the future will be a city of women, as the strenuous life is killing off the men. This fact may somewhat dampen the ardor of the young men of the east to follow the historic advice of going west.

"Yakkiguma" is the name the Japanese apply to their "Yingees," the Koreans who are always looking for trouble with other nations. The word might be taken over into English. It means "thoughtless ones."

NOT THE TIME TO STOP.

Manager Saw the Possibilities in the Situation.

Jim Johnstone, the famous baseball umpire, said recently in New York that baseball crowds were too kinder to umpires than they used to be.

"This is true of theater crowds, too," said Mr. Johnstone. "Why, with provincial touring companies in the past, maltreatment was regularly expected. In fact, the companies profited by it in more ways than one.

"I know of a company that was playing 'The Broken Vow' in Paint Rock, a one night stand. The audience didn't like 'The Broken Vow,' and eggs, cabbages and potatoes rained upon the stage.

"Still the play went on. The hero raved through his endless speeches, dodging an onion or a baseball every other minute, and pretty sore from those missiles that he hadn't been able to dodge.

"But finally a gallery auditor in a paroxysm of rage and scorn hurled a heavy boot, and the actor, thoroughly alarmed, started to retreat.

"'Keep on playing, you fool,' hissed the manager from the wings, as he hooked in the boot with an umbrella. 'Keep on till we get the other one.'"

PRESCRIPTIONS IN LATIN.

"Professional etiquette" occupies a prominent place in the curriculum of every medical school, and when strictly analyzed "professional etiquette" seems to mean "doing what is best for the doctor, individually and collectively."

Among the things that "is best for the doctor" is the writing of his prescriptions in Latin, and thus keeping the public in ignorance not only of what it is taking for its ills, but forcing a call upon the doctor each time a prescription is needed.

Let us say that you have the ague. You had it last year and the year before. Each time you have visited the doctor and he has prescribed for you—in Latin. You have never known what he has given you for the disease, and so each time you are forced to go to him again and give him an opportunity to repeat his prescription—in Latin, and his fee—in dollars.

If you ask the doctor why he uses Latin in writing his prescriptions, why he writes "aqua" when he means water, he will give you a technical discussion of the affinity of the Latin language, and the fact that all words are derived from it, etc. It will be a dissertation that you may not be able to answer, but it will hardly convince you.

It would be a good thing for the public to devise a little code of ethics of its own, to make that will be a good thing for the public individually and collectively.

Let us apply one of the rules of this code of ethics to you, the individual.

You call in the physician when you have the ague, the grippe, or any of the other ills to which human flesh is heir, and when you may have again some day. The doctor prescribes—in Latin, and you take this, to you, meaningless scribble to the druggist, who also is provided. Right here is where you come in, if you are wise. Say to the druggist that you want a translation of that prescription. It is your privilege to know what you are taking. While the doctor's code of ethics may not recognize this right it is yours just the same.

With the translated prescription in your possession you have two distinct advantages. You know what you are taking, and should you wish to call some other doctor in consultation you will be able to tell him what drugs you have been putting into your system, and also if you should have the same disease again you can save yourself a visit to the doctor, and his fee, by taking this translated prescription to the druggist once more and having it refilled.

Swell of Tipping System.

Although there is a great effort made to keep secret the thefts in hotels and restaurants in New York, it is quite evident they are on a rapid increase. The manager of a large restaurant says the system of having servants depend almost entirely upon patrons for their pay lowers their moral standard and causes them to look on those they are supposed to serve as their legitimate prey.

Would Make Rich Crop.

It is estimated that $1,000,000 acres are available for rice growing in Louisiana and Texas, and the value of such crop would be $400,000,000. This would make the rice crop fifth in point of value among the cereals of this country.

Can Not Escape Thoughts.

THE SCHOOLHOUSES

WHAT THEY MEAN TO THE PEOPLE OF THE COMMUNITY.

AND HOW THEY ARE BUILT

Your schoolhouses. Those of the town and those of the country districts. You know what they mean to you and to your children.

They represent the difference between ignorance and enlightenment. They mean to your children the difference between signing their names with a mark or in writing. They represent the difference between the civilization of the twentieth century, as this country knows it, and the barbarism of benighted Asia or Africa.

You want the schoolhouse, do you not?

You glory in the free educational system of this country, do you not?

But, Mr. Citizen, did you ever sit down and consider carefully what it is that makes possible the schoolhouses of this country; the schoolhouses that stand as beacon lights on the tops of a thousand hills; the schoolhouses that carry cheer and enlightenment to the heartthrones of a million of a thousand valleys?

It is the taxes that you and your neighbor, and your neighbor's neighbor pay into the school fund year after year, is it not?

Because you own property—real estate, bonds and mortgages—and because the property is valuable.

What makes your real estate valuable?

It is the prosperity of the community. As the community grows and prospers the value of your property increases. As your property increases in value and you write your wealth in thousands instead of hundreds, the amount you pay into the school fund increases. When the school fund increases the old building gives place to a new and more modern structure, in which your children and your neighbor's children secure their instruction. And, again, the erection of the new building but adds more to the value of your property.

It is an endless chain system that builds villages out of cross roads, and cities out of villages.

Who are you, Mr. Citizen, and who is your neighbor and your neighbor's neighbor, whose contributions to the school fund make the schoolhouses possible? You, and your neighbor, and your neighbor's neighbor, are the farmers, the merchants, the doctors, the blacksmiths. You are each and every man who go to make up the community in which you live, and it is only when you work collectively that you accomplish results—that you build up new schoolhouses.

By a simple system of boosting one another. You, we will say, have oats to sell—your neighbor buys them of you. He, you will say, has dry goods to sell—you buy them of him. It is this system of mutual help that makes the town grow into the city, that increases the price of real estate in the town and in the community surrounding it, that builds new schoolhouses.

The dollar that is unnecessarily sent away from home never bought as much as a nail for a schoolhouse, never put a shingle on its roof.

But the dollars that are unnecessarily sent away from home and never come back to the community which they left only ruin. It is these dollars that prevent the replacing of the leaking roof, the broken door hinge or the worn out desk.

It is the dollars that are unnecessarily sent away from home by you, by your neighbor, and your neighbor's neighbor that decrease the value of your, and your neighbor's, and your neighbor's neighbors' real estate. That makes the school fund grow less year after year. That forces the discharge of the competent teacher for a less competent one. That reduces the standing of your schools in the educational system of the country.

Work it backwards, send your money for the things you need away from home instead of spending it at home, and the system that builds villages out of cross roads, and cities out of villages, that increases the value of your real estate and permits you to write your wealth in the thousands instead of hundreds, the amount you pay into the school fund increases. When the school fund increases the old building gives place to a new and more modern structure, in which your children and your neighbor's children secure their instruction. GAMES OF SHARPERS.

Millions upon millions of dollars are fraudulently taken from the pockets of the people year after year through the operation of confidence men. The schemes used by these men are numerous. Nearly all are based upon the fact that the average person is always willing to take the best of a bargain.

During the past few months swindlers have been operating in different parts of the country, and their method, while a modification of an old swindling game, has some new features worthy of notice. Their usual procedure is to locate farmers who are not well known to local bankers and loan men. They approach the farmer and under pretext of seeking to purchase farming land, manage in some way to secure his signature. This is generally done by inducing him to write a letter, or to sign some paper or card. Once the signature is secured, a fictitious deed to the farmer's land is prepared and this is fixed up in such a manner as to show the seal of some notary or other officer. Then with this deed the swindler is in position to negotiate a loan upon the land. This game has been successfully worked in a number of western states.

Residents of agricultural districts should be continually on their guard against the insidious approach of any kind of contract which may be presented to them by strangers. Within the past year some smooth swindlers have succeeded in securing thousands of dollars on fraudulent notes, securing from farmers, who were foolish enough to take for granted that washing machines, refrigerators, etc., were to be had for the asking, a written order or their receipts for the same. These receipts turning up later as negotiable notes.

The writer of checks cannot be too careful in filling in the amounts. The favorite methods of the check receiver is to insert after the words "six," "seven," "eight" or "nine" the letter "y" or "ty" and change the ciphers in the check accordingly. Thus it can be seen that a check written for eight dollars, by the addition of the letter "y" can be made to read for eighty dollars and the changing of the amount, by the figure nine, by the addition of cipher, makes the forgery, when well executed, hard to discover.

HELP THE TOWN.

Some of the Virtues in Friendly Rivalry Between Merchants.

Good, healthy competition and friendly rivalry, devoid of all spirit of boggishness, is a good thing for any town. Each and every business man and property owner in a town, and the country immediately surrounding it should be intensely interested in every project, particularly should every merchant be active in anything that means general prosperity for the place, and which will increase trade for all the merchants of the town. People generally like to do their trading in towns where there are well kept stocks and plenty variety of goods, and where there is sufficient competition as to assure be fair prices consistent with good business judgment. There is little use for the merchants of a place to blow and brag about their business, unless they can demonstrate that they are "delivering the goods" and satisfying their customers. There is no good to be looked for by merchants decrying the goods and the methods of their brother merchants. There is no more effective way of killing the business of a town than by fostering a spirit of petty jealousy and narrow mindedness. Wherever such a spirit is found it will be discovered that trade is being turned to some other town where merchants are pulling together, work more in harmony with one another.

TOWN BOOSTING TIPS.

The visitor who trips over your broken sidewalk will not have a very high opinion of your town as a place of business.

The home town is the best place for the boys if you will make the home town prosperous. Keeping the money at home will do this. It means more opportunities for your children.

Don't drive around the hole in the road week after week. Get your neighbors together and fix it.

The home market for the farm products is the saving clause in our system of government. Take care of the in your community. Not necessarily home markets and the farms will soon become unprofitable and valueless.

No city mail-order house will extend credit to you when times are hard, or empty half its dwellings. Consistently ask it of your home merchant when you send your money to the city during the days of prosperity.

Encourage small factories to locate by means of a bonus, but by keeping the children in the home town that they may become factory employes, and get a home opportunity to raise in the world.

Do not begrudge the money paid for taxes when it is used for road and town improvements. Such outlay, expenditure is like bread cast upon the waters—it will return many fold.

Belgian Girls Learn Housework.

In Belgium girls are expected to give five weeks out of each school year to learning housework. The girl is required to know not only how to cook a dinner, but to clean up and care for a kitchen, do marketing, wash and iron.

Division Superintendent Explains Why Some Lines Use the Left Hand Right of Way, and Others the Reverse.

"On a double-track system which track do the east-bound trains use?" asked the man with the high forehead at the Railroad club last night, according to the Kansas City Star.

"Same answer," curtly replied the operating official, who began to suspect that he was being josked.

"Those are the exceptions," explained the operating official. "The Lake Shore and the Northwestern railroads use the left track. Every other road in the country uses the right-hand track.

"You may be right," said a traveling passenger agent, "but I rode from Emporia, Kan., to Kansas City the other day. It's double track all the way, and we used the left-hand track."

Expert Sets Them Right.

"Must have been something the matter with the right-hand track," growled the operating official. But there wasn't. A division superintendent of the Santa Fe joined the group and he was appealed to.

"We use the right-hand track whenever we have double track except on the Emporia line. We change from the right-hand track to the left-hand track at Holliday. This exception is because of the grades. The line was originally a single-track system. The grades on the original line were suited for west-bound traffic. So we built the second track for east-bound traffic. It is under those conditions that makes us left-handed on the Emporia cut-off.

"The right-hand track is in general use by virtue of a rule adopted by the American Railway association, which requires that all standard railroads use the right-hand track. It was thought best to use the right-hand track for the reason that it affords the engineer a better opportunity to observe the signals which are in use on all double-track systems. It was the theory of the management of the Northwestern and of the Lake Shore lines that if the engineer was on the left-hand side he could watch both tracks, so when the rule was adopted an exception was made in favor of these two lines.

Explanation of Time Card.

"Now that we have settled this proposition let us have an explanation why we never see anything on official time cards concerning north-bound and south-bound trains," suggested the man who had started the first argument.

"In making up time cards only two directions are recognized," said the operating official. "Every train is either an east-bound or west-bound train. The east-bound trains carry even numbers and the west-bound trains odd numbers. For instance, a train from Coffeyville, which is south from Kansas City, is carried as an east-bound train and trains to Leavenworth and Omaha, which are north of Kansas City, are carried as west-bound trains.

"Now, I suggest by way of conclusion that you follow who are supposed to be in the railroad business brush up on the elementary principles of railroading. I'd start a night school for your benefit most any time."

A railway locomotive may roughly be said to be equal in strength to 900 horses.

MACHINE DUMPS THE DIRT.

By Means of Movable Trestle, Hole Is Quickly Filled Up.

The Cleveland Short Line is making a fill 6,000 feet long just outside of the city limits, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. It extends from the Radway homestead on the west to a point near East Seventy-first street on the east. The work is one of the most difficult on the belt line job. The valley in which the roadbed is being built is about 400 feet deep at some places. The fill was necessary in order to maintain the low grade in which the road excels.

The making of the fill requires the work of experts. The dumping of dirt is made easier by a movable wooden trestle, it is called the "Jumbo" by the workmen. The dirt cars are backed out onto the trestle over work train tracks and the trestle is extended along as the dirt is piled up under it. The dirt cars dump automatically and alternate. No time is lost in succession on the same side of the fill. This makes the work on both sides uniform.

The dirt for this kind of work is taken from two steam shovels that are excavating near by. The temporary tracks extend from the steam shovels to the fill and the trains are operated by dinky engines that make fast time.

OLD MEN HAVE FAST RUNS.

Veteran Engineers in the Most Responsible Positions.

"Nearly all of the fast runs on the Central are in charge of the oldest men," said Traveling Engineer Patterson, "and they make good, too. Once in a while a younger man might make a better single run, but day in and day out the old man will beat him. If anything goes wrong the old engineer is right on the job. He doesn't get rattled and go up in the air. His long experience has included something like it at some time or other, and he goes to work to get things straight where a younger man would lose his head.

"And as for nerve—why, one of the fastest runners on the road is Tony Thompson, and he is more than 70 years old. He will run as fast as anybody wants to travel along rails, and always handles his engine with rare judgment.

"Then there's Billy Raymond. He isn't any younger than Thompson. If he doesn't run fast enough to make time with the Empire State Express we haven't heard anything about it.

"Martin Ryan is another. His age is between 65 and 68, and yet he handles one of the big Atlantics that pull the Chicago limited. Ryan is independently rich, and he just railroads for fun. Life wouldn't be worth living for him off the road, and the road's glad to have him. Ryan's right in the stirring, and he runs nothing slower than the Lake Shore Limited.

CASUALTIES ON THE ROAD.

Herr Guillery, an official of the archive bureau of the Prussian railway administration, has prepared a comparative table of statistics of those killed and injured by railways in various countries.

He finds that both absolutely and relatively the railroads in the United States are the most deadly. The Union of States has more miles than all of Europe, but, even taking that into consideration, the United States holds preeminence in proportional figures.

Out of every 10,000 employes the relative figures of killed are: United States, 26.1; England, 12.3; Switzerland, 8.2; Russia, 7.8; British India, 6.7; Belgium, 4.1.

Out of every 1,000 railway employees the ratio of the number injured each year is as follows: United States, 43.5; Switzerland, 25.3; England, 11.3; Belgium, 11; Germany, 2.4.

Herr Guillery finds that in a single year, the fiscal year of 1902, 376,500 persons were injured in the United States, of whom 60,000 were employes, and 8,300 were killed, of whom 3,500 were employes.

In the matter of travelers injured France holds the lowest record in the world. United States shows proportionately 40 times as many injured as Russia, 22 times as many as Italy, as England 20, Belgium, 8, Switzerland 4, Germany, 2.

When the old New England railroad was in enjoyment of an independent corporate existence, a trotting horse had been cut in two by the cars. Suits in the New England fair circuit was killed in an accident to the train upon which the animal was being transported.

The owner put in a claim not only for the value of the horse, but also for the first prize in every event in which the animal had been entered. The total was something startling, especially for a bankrupt railroad.

In prosecuting his claim the owner maintained that the horse was the most remarkable trotter the country had ever seen and that he would have been a dead sure winner throughout the season.

The court, however, took a more moderate view of the animal's trotting abilities, and based the sum of the damages upon the actual value of the equine wonder.

The sacredness of the scene made me feel like an intruder, so I started to leave the room. But in a moment Beulah Sands was her usual self and, turning to me, she said: "Mr. Randolph, please forget what you have seen. For an instant, as I saw Mr. Brownley's awful misery, I thought of nothing but what he had done for me, of what he had risked, all for my father, what a penalty he has paid. From what you said when you left and the fact that I got no word from Brownley, I am willing to trust you, and did not dare look at the tape; I simply waited and hoped and—prayed. Yes, I prayed as my mother taught me I should do when-ever I was helpless and could do nothing myself. And I felt that God would not let the noble work of two such men be overthrown by those you were battling with. In the midst of a calmness that I took for a good omen, you came. Can you blame me for forgetting myself? Mr. Brownley's voice was now calm and self-controlled. "tell me what you have done. Where do we stand?" There is little to tell," Bob answered. "Cameron's and the Standard Oil have taken me into camp as they would take a stuck pig. They have made a monkey of me out of me, and we are ruined, utterly," caused Mr. Randolph a heavy loss. Roughly, I figure that of your four hundred thousand capital and the million-four hundred thousand profit you had this morning, only your capital remains."

Wishing to spare Bob, I interrupted and myself gave the girl briefly the details of what had happened. She listened intently and seemed to take in all the trickery of the "System" masters; seemed to see just what it had done to us and to her. But she made no comment, showed by no outward sign that she suffered. As soon as I was through she turned to Bob, who had stood with his face fastened upon her face, as though somewhere out of its soft beauty must come an assurance that this was all a bad dream.

"Mr. Brownley," she said, "let us figure up just where we stand, so that we may know what to do to recoup. You have sold so many times, since I have been here, that I fail now. Wall street is magic land; that no man may tell 24 hours ahead what will happen to him. You have said if so much as times that I believe it. We know that this morning we were at the goal, that we were millions ahead, and all from 24 hours' effort. We have yet almost three months left, and I do not see why we have not just as much chance as we had day before yesterday. Yes, and more, because we are wiser. We know something we did not know then. We will include the dividend cuts and the senate duplicity in our figuring."

We both dumbly stared in wonder ing admiration at this marvelous woman. Was it possible that a girl could have such nerve, such courage? Or had woman's hope, so persistent when her loved ones are in trouble, made Beulah Sands blind to the awfulness of the situation? As I looked at her I could not doubt that she fully realized our position and that she was really suffering more than either of us, that she was only acting to ease Bob's anguish. Bob brought out his memorandum, and in a half an hour we had the figures. The total loss was nearly three millions. As Beulah Sands' 20,000 shares had cost less than ours and Bob figured to save her capital of $400,000 intact, we felt some comfort. Beulah Sands had watched the figuring with the keenness of an expert, and when Bob completed the last item, which showed that she still had what she started with, she drew the sheet containing the totals to her. "I was willing to risk a million and did not dare look at the tape; I simply waited and hoped and—prayed. Yes, I prayed as my mother taught me I should do when-ever I was helpless and could do nothing myself. And I felt that God would not let the noble work of two such men be overthrown by those you were battling with. In the midst of a calmness that I took for a good omen, you came. gone for a week and that I was uneasy, she said in her calm, confident manner: "I don't think you need any thing to worry about, Mr. Randolph. Mr. Brownley is too much of a man to allow an affair of dollars to do anything more than annoy him. He will be back all the better for his rest."

CHAPTER IV.

The following week Bob returned to the office. He had not changed, and yet he had changed greatly. Neat and apparently done much for him. His color was good, his step elastic as of old, and his head was thrown back as if he were buckled up for the fray and wanted to know it. Yet there was something in the eye, in the setness of the jaw, in the hair-trigger calm, yet fiercely savage grip in which he closed on my hands on the arms of his chair, that told me more plainly than words that this was not the optimistic, soft-hearted Bob Brownley I had known. I could not help feeling that if I had been a leader of the Russian terrorists, and this man who now sat before me had come to me with the news that Nicholas Romanoff, I should have seized upon him of all men as the one to stalk the czar or his marked minions. Surely the iron that had entered Bob's soul the week before had affected his whole being. I think Beulah Sands had some such thoughts. For I saw a shadow of perplexity cross her brow, her forehead after her first meeting with him, a shadow that had not been there before.

For days after Bob's return I saw little of him. I think Beulah Sands saw less. During stock exchange hours he spent most of his time on the floor, but he executed few of our orders. He merely looked them over and handed them out to his assistants. As far as I could learn, he spent much of his time there yesterday. Yesterday was Bob's graveyards, a not uncommon pastime for active exchange members whose first through specials have been the poor little $30,000 balance; no other entries. One afternoon Beulah Sands had asked for a meeting between Bob and myself in her office. She could hardly have asked Bob to come without me, but I knew it was Bob she wanted to see, and I felt that the best thing I could do for them was to leave them alone. So I made some excuse for a moment's delay at my desk, started Bob to go into her office, and promising to follow shortly. He went in, leaving the door partly open. I think that from the moment he entered the room both of them utterly forgot my existence. From her desk Beulah could not see me, and Bob for so that his back was half toward me. I did not intend to know it. Yet there was something in the eye, in the setness of the jaw, in the hair-trigger calm, yet fiercely savage grip in which he closed on my hands on the arms of his chair, that told me more plainly than words that this was not the optimistic, soft-hearted Bob Brownley I had known. I could not help feeling that if I had been a leader of the Russian terrorists, and this man who now sat before me had come to me with the news that Nicholas Romanoff, I should have seized upon him of all men as the one to stalk the czar or his marked minions. DAVID UNITES THE KINGDOM

Scripture Authority: — 2 Samuel 5:5; 6.

SERMONETTE.

David knew how to forgive. Israel had shared with King Saul in the persecution of David, but David was ready to return good for evil. He had no scores to settle when the providences of God brought his former enemies under his power.

Selfish ambition David had not. On the contrary, his career strikingly illustrates the possibility of a human soul gauging his ambitions in harmony with the will of God. He wanted only what God in his own time and his own way was willing to give. Hence he escaped the pitfalls of human plotting and intrigue and his hands were free from the stains of the blood of his enemies.

David desired the kingdom because God had promised it to him and because his anointing was to serve God through such exalted office. He wanted to be king that he might lead the nation in the paths of righteousness.

There is no loftier or holier ambition in the world to-day than the desire for power and position that such may be exercised and used to the honor and glory of God and the blessing of mankind.

Schisms in families or in nations are sad and distressing, and the sooner they are healed the better. But reunion must meet the voluntary approval of both factions. David might have subdued Israel by force of arms, but he chose rather the method of righteousness and truth and justice.

God can give what human scheming and plotting cannot gain.

The question arises: "Would David have been justified in the use of force in gaining possession of that which God had promised should be his?" Is the injunction: "Suffer wrong rather than do a wrong" a safe principle to follow in our dealings with others.

David in the Twenty-third Psalm, declares that after the walk through the valley of the shadow of death the Lord prepared for him a table in the presence of his enemies. Such proved literally true in his person—when the people from all the tribes came together it was quickly agreed that they should seek David out at Hebron and there request that he become king over Israel as well as Judah.

And so it came to pass that a few days after, even while Joab was speaking to his intimate friends of the folly of King David's ways, he was at the head of a throng of winning control over all of Israel, that the elders from all the tribes sought audience with David at Hebron, saying him:

"Behold, we are of thy bone and thy flesh. Also in time past when Saul was king over us, thou wast he that leddest out and broughtest in Israel: and the Lord said to thee, Thou shalt feed my people Israel, and thou shalt be a captain over Israel."

And David made league with them in Hebron before the Lord, and there they anointed David king over Israel, and the rejoicing of the people exceeded the morning which had filled the land because of the wars which had been waged between the kingdoms of Judah and Israel.

THE STORY.

JOAB with feverish haste adjusted his garments and started toward the palace of King David. The few who were in the market place at that early hour were startled and surprised to see the captain of the hosts of Judah thrown for such time, knowing that only the most important matters could take him to the presence of the king at that unseasonable hour. But he was much absorbed with his own thoughts to notice the startled glances which followed him, for that morning a secret message had come and the rejoicing of the people exceeded the morning which had filled the land because of the wars which had been waged between the kingdoms of Judah and Israel.

"And now is David's opportunity," muttered Joab to himself as he hurried on. "Now will he be able to bring Israel under his hand. Will he but give his consent, I will start with the army this very day."

And arriving at that moment at the palace door, he knocked impatiently, loath to let one precious minute be wasted. Urging the surprised servant to hasten he entered the audience room of the king, and not long after David the king entered.

"Thou, who hast killed Abner, the captain of the hosts of Israel, just when I had made a league with him," excitedly demanded David. "Wouldst thou kill Ishbosheth, the king, also?"

"Nay, nay, I am guiltless of such charge. I know not who hath killed Ishbosheth upon his bed, but this Joab, the leader of thy armies, knows, and that is that thy opportunity hath come that thou mayest say and truly come over all Israel. Bid me," Joab, went on rapidly and with increasing enthusiasm, "bid me go, and I promise thee ere a fortnight hath passed to have all Israel under thy banner."

"Think you for a moment," he thundered, "that David would take a mean advantage of the misfortunes of his brothers in Israel? Does David's kingdom increase through unholy means? Has God left the heavens that David cannot still trust him?"

"But it is now or never," protested Joab. "Israel needs a leader. If it and not such in thee they will choose one from among themselves to lead them. There are many ambitious souls among the men of Israel."

"But this thing is not of God. It Israel seek me not as king, then will not I reach out for the kingdom."

Further protest on the part of Joab was prevented by the hurried entrance of a servant who announced the arrival of two messengers from Israel who demanded to see King David at once, and at once from the king they were admitted.

Bowing low before the king, they waited until he bade them rise, when Rechab began as follows:

"We be thy servants, O king. We are Rechab and Baanah, the sons of Rimmon the Beerothite, and we come to bring thee good things for our Lord. Behold the head of Ishbosheth, the son of Saul thine enemy, which sought thy life."

And as they spoke they unrolled before the startled eyes of David and Joab the ghastly head of the dead king of Israel.

But they got no further, for David turned upon them and in a voice which cut like steel he said:

"As the Lord liveth, who hath redeemed my soul out of all adversity, when one told me saying, Behold, Saul is dead, thinking to have brought good tidings, I took him, and slew him in Ziklag, who thought that I would have given him a reward for his tidings. How much more, when wicked men have slain a righteous person in his own house upon his bed? Shall I not therefore now require his blood of your hand, and take you away from the earth?"

And turning to his young armor bearers standing near he commanded them to seize Rechab and Baanah and to take them out and slay them, which they were speedy to do, and hanged their hands and their feet and hanged them up over the pool in Hebron.

But David had the head of Ishbosheth taken and buried in the sepulcher of Abner in Hebron.

Now, when tidings of these things reached the ears of the people of Israel, they knew that David had not been concerned in the wicked plot, and that he was not striving in any way to force an extension of his kingship over Israel. For this reason when the people from all the nation met together it was quickly agreed that they should seek David out at Hebron and there request that he become king over Israel as well as Judah.

And so it came to pass that a few days after, even while Joab was speaking to his intimate friends of the folly of King David's ways, he was at the head of a throng of winning control over all of Israel, that the elders from all the tribes sought audience with David at Hebron, saying him:

"Behold, we are of thy bone and thy flesh. Also in time past when Saul was king over us, thou wast he that leddest out and broughtest in Israel: and the Lord said to thee, Thou shalt feed my people Israel, and thou shalt be a captain over Israel."

And David made league with them in Hebron before the Lord, and there they anointed David king over Israel, and the rejoicing of the people exceeded the morning which had filled the land because of the wars which had been waged between the kingdoms of Judah and Israel.

Judge Must Also Have Been Follower of the Gentle Art.

John Quincy Adams, of Massachusetts, third of that name, who died about ten years ago, was very fond of fishing, and not especially fond of his legal profession.

One day, the story runs, a case in which he was counsel was down for trial in a Massachusetts court. Mr. Adams did not make his appearance, but sent a letter to the judge. That worthy gentleman read it, and then postponed the case with the announcement:

It was afterward learned by a colleague of Adams that the letter read as follows:

"Dear Judge: For the sake of old Izaak Walton, please postpone my case till Friday. The smelts are biting, and I can't leave."

CHILDREN TORTURED.

Girl Had Running Sores from Eczema —Boy Was Scalded by Hot Water —Both Cured by Cuticura.

"Last year, after having my little girl suffered by a very prominent physician for an obstinate case of eczema, I resorted to the Cuticura Remedies, and was so well pleased with the almost instantaneous relief afforded that I discarded the physician's prescription and relied entirely on the Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Pills. When we opened the parcel with the Cuticura Remedies her feet and limbs were covered with running sores. In about six weeks we had her completely well, and there has been no recurrence of the trouble.

A clerk in a railroad freight office at Valley City suffered from rheumatism in the right leg, which he attributed to rheumatism. He consulted a physician and spent a good deal of medicine, but continued to grow worse. One morning recently the office force, in a spirit of frivolousness, rubbed his back and rubbed against the afflicted calf. The clerk gave a howl, kicked with his bad leg and a very good kick through the door. He bounded in a chair and sat down with a few strong remarks about cats and mankind in general. A few minutes later he rubbed his tender head and arose. He shook his leg and tooby smiled. Then he walked like a drum major across the floor and boisterously shook hands with himself. The sharp twinges had disappeared and there has been no recurrence of pain. The clerk's doctor corrected his diagnosis when asked for an explanation of the sudden cure and said that what he mistook for rheumatism was probably caused by a pinched ligament. The kick at the cat straightened out the leg, and removed the cause of the trouble.

HAVE TO FIGHT PREJUDICE.

Salvation Army Unpopular Among Certain English Classes.

A woman on discovering that she had become sober while in the care of the Salvation army had up her hands in horror, shrieking "Take me away from here quick, or I'll lose my reputation!" This story was told by Gen. Booth. "It's a true story, and illustrates how absurd is some of the prejudice we have to overcome took upon drunkenness as no stain upon their character, but think their reputations are besmirched if they attend a Salvation army meeting. I can tell you another story. An old drunken lad, fell into our hands. We looked up his record, and found that he had been struck no less than eighteen times after much trouble, we located his wife, who lived in a distant town. So we sent her this telegram: 'We have found your dear husband. In a few hours the answer came back: 'You can keep him.'"

Sentiment.

A flag is no more to be classed as a strip of bunting than the sword of Bunker Hill could be classed as a chunk of steel. Memories, traditions, ideals, heroism, patriotism are unreal because they cannot be measured with a yardstick or weighed on the scales of a coal yard. Loyalty to the flag is a force as real and far more permanent than the most lifting crane of the navy yard. Patriotism will move more, in the space of time, than the biggest engine in the freight yards. Ideals are more powerful than the biggest mound of sodium that the civilized world can ever get together. Public sentiment has had more to do with the digging of the Panama canal than the fearless shovels driven by steam in the Culebra cut.

Plan Excavations at Memphis.

Appeals to Selma men in England for funds to undertake the great task of excavating the ruins of Memphis. It is expected that England will now do for Memphis what the French government has done for Delphis and the Germans for Olympia. The sites of the four great temples are plainly marked, so that exploration can begin at once. This mass of ruins covers 100 acres, as much as the whole of the site at Karnak, and it is estimated that $15,000 will be needed annually for fifteen years to accomplish the work. Important material is believed to lie within a few yards of the surface, so that results should be reached promptly.

Useful Candle Nut.

One of the oddest nuts in the world is the candle nut, which grows in the Pacific islands. The name is derived from the fact that the kernel is so full of oil that when dried it can be stuck on a reed and used as a candle. The natives of Hawaii roast these nuts, and after removing the shell reduce the kernel to a paste, which, when seasoned with salt and pepper, is reported as making an appetizing dish. The husk of the nuts and the gum which exudes from the tree have medicinal values, while the burned shell is used in making an indelible ink with which tattooing is done.—American Fruit and Nut Journal.

Victims of Poor Food.

At a recent military enrollment in Sweden, Germany, of 694 young men able to service, only 20 percent were found to be up to the physical standard. The peasants of this country were once thus among the most robust of all empires, but owing to the dearness of meat and the fact that the milk and eggs was a staple article of food now sold to cheese factories, their physique has degenerated.

...Russian Gathers Her Insects Help Him to Collect Them.

Ants' eggs come in the main from Russia. They are the best food obtainable for gold fish, and canaries and other cage birds thrive on them wonderfully. They cost about 50 cents a pint. In the forests of southern Russia ant nests abound. The Russian egg hunter does not do his own collecting however. He takes the poor ants do it for him. Selecting a hot, sunny day, the man first greases little piles of twigs, a dozen or more of them, near the thickest colonies and then he kicks open all the nests in the neighborhood. The ants know that their eggs, when exposed to the sun would be made sterile in a few hours, and they take them up and hurry to place them under the nearest shelter. The nearest shelter is, of course, the little pile of twigs, and under each of these there are soon heaped the eggs from a hundred nests. The egg hunter, after a smoke and a nap, has nothing to do but gather up his spoils and dump it in his sack. He ships the eggs in hundred weight bags, all over the world.

A SNAP FOR THE MICE.

"Beads" of Rice Furnished Forth an Appetizing Luncheon.

The wind shook the Japanese curtain of bamboo and glass beads, and as the strands divided the bench was visible—the white bench, the blue sea and the bathers bobbing up and down in the sun-warmed billows. "These Japanese curtains," said the host, "are a fraud, some of them. No wonder you can see through them. They get thinner and thinner. For the glass beads disappear. The mice eat them." "Mice eat glass beads!" gasped the guest. "So I thought at first. But, finding the beads on all my curtains disappearing, I investigated. And I found that these pretty pale beads were not made of glass at all. They were made of rice! They were translucent rice kernels strung beadlike between the bits of bamboo. No wonder they disappeared so fast. They made a fine lunch for the mice."

Woman M. P.'s Mishap.

One of the women members of the Finnish diet met with a laughable mishap recently while attending the sittings of a legal committee. Bored by the proceedings she hastened her chair and rocked to and fro with her feet clear off the ground. Suddenly she overbalanced and fell above the chair, with which she became locked. For moments as she lay on the floor the equality of the sexes is coming to be looked upon so much as a matter of course that the male members of the committee, not concealing their appreciation of the humor of the situation, are reported to have been ungallant enough to refrain from expressing regret at the mishap.—London Mail.

Horns on Horse's Skull.

A recently acquired abnormality of the British museum is the skull of an English horse showing a pair of rudimentary horns on the forehead. Older specimens are a portion of a similar skull with the horns and models of the foreheads of two thoroughbreds having horns, the skin extends uniformly over the horns, with no sign of thickening or hardening. Just what these horrific growths signify is perplexing naturalists, as none of the ancestral horses or immediately related species were horned animals, and if there is no hereditary influence it is remarkable that so many freak appendages should appear in the same place.

Affection Between Senators.

There was sincere affection between the late Alabama senators, Morgan and Pettus. It is said that Pettus adored Morgan. He looked up to him as few men look up to other men. When Morgan passed away the fading old veteran lost all interest in life. These things sound unbelievable, perhaps, to a skeptical modern time, but Morgan and Pettus did not belong to a modern time. They were relics of an elder age. They passed away almost together. The death of one preceded and, the Alabama men say, brought about the death of the other. Together they lie in Selma, where, side by side, they lived for 40 years.

Strenuous Medical Treatment.

Although the Maoris of New Zealand have made considerable strides in civilization during recent years some of their barbaric superstitions survive. One of the most persistent is belief in the "tohunga" or tribal medicine man. His patients sometimes succumb to his energetic methods of treatment. The latest case of that sort comes from Waikato. A sick girl, after having been immersed in cold water for some hours, was beaten on with sticks to drive the evil spirits out, the "tohunga" afterward gripping her throat to prevent their reentering. She died the next day.

Copperhead's Hiding Place.

While picking corn from a barrel Mrs. Irvin Showers thought the cord was being moved of its own accord, but upon closer investigation she discovered some shiny object in the bottom of the barrel. Suspicion was aroused, and Dr. Showers' attention was called to the moving contents of the wagon. A pair of pincers was secured and a large copperhead snake was drawn from between the ears of Mrs. Irvin Showers. It had evidently ...

FOR HAPPY MARRIED LIFE.

Good Manners Go Far to Preserve Peace and Concord.

A great many people seem to think that the marriage ceremony absolves them from all further courtesies and attentions to the person whom they have wed. After that they are always in negligee, both as to manners and clothes, when they are at home. This is a fatal mistake. Because a woman is married is no excuse for her going untidily about the house, and telling her husband home truths that hurt his vanity. Because a woman is his wife gives a man no right to say things to her he would not dare to say to any other lady who possessed a big, able bodied brother. Good manners are the preservation of peace and concord and are warranted to keep happiness in any climate. The problem of how to be happy though married is really no problem at all. No mystery should ever have been made of it. It is merely fair dealing in fair partnership—giving the other party the privileges and perquisites you assume for yourself, and allowing the person you love as much consideration and civility as you would show a stranger.—New York Weekly.

GoldCoinTonics
6 Feeds for One Cent

Your stock needs tonics. They aid digestion, also cure and prevent diseases.

They will make you extra profits

Why is it that Gold Coin Stock Tonics are considered so much better than stock foods? Why is it that all the farmers and farmers' sons in the state will not use stock foods as long as Gold Coin Stock Tonics are to be had? Why is it that College Professors, Farm Experimentalists, Farm Journals and State Officials endorse Gold Coin Stock Tonics? Because they do what they claim to do, and what they say they will do. They feed these animals more per cent of what they eat. Gold Coin Tonics increase digestion, tone up the system, strengthen and build up the constitution, thereby making your farm animals worth more money.

Did it ever occur to you that the digestive apparatus of the four different classes of farm animals are entirely different and therefore naturally require different treatment and different feeders. For example, farm cattle and horses are good for fowls but would be very bad for cows. Science has proven that different medicines and different foods act differently on different animals. Therefore it stands to reason that a medicinal Stock Tonic must be prepared according to the class of animals for which it is intended. That is just why Gold Coin Stock Tonics are prepared in four different varieties: "Gold Coin Horse Tonic" for horses, "Gold Coin Cattle Tonic" for cattle, "Gold Coin Hog Tonic" for hogs and, "Gold Coin Poultry Tonic" for poultry

Makes Hens Lay

Gents:—I got a pail of your famous Egg-a-Day Poultry Tonic and must say my hens have never before laid as many eggs as they have during the months of October and November. Will recommend it to my neighbors. My flock is a mixed lot of Brown Leghorns, Buff Cochins and Barred Rocks. I intend to start in with ten full blooded Buff Cochin Roosters. Am just keeping them for the amount of eggs they lay. Yours

Judge D B Searle Says:

Gentlemen: Your animal tonics are all right. I highly endorse them. I believe your stock powder is a regular tonic appetite and makes the food rations more palatable. The disease digestive tonic will make the stock raisers more profit. For while conditioning my stock for the market I will buy my stock of you in preference to your goods certainly insure satisfaction.

Prof. Thomas Shaws Opinion

Gold Coin Stock Food Company, St. Paul Minn.
The ingredients used in the manufacturers of Gold Coin Stock Tonics have been submitted to me and my opinion asked with reference to the influence they are likely to exert on animals. With reference thereto I may say that they are of a character which would be helpful to all animals of this class. The difference in the combination used for the different classes of animals I regard as a wise distinction. Properly used such ingredients should be helpful in tonic or in doses, when given thus for the or work and aiding digestion in cattle and otherwise in low condition or injured by excessive feeding. Edited by E. E. Linn. Our Motto "For God and Home and Every Land"

This is the first campaign in Nebraska in which political bosses cut no figure. The people will nominate the candidates and afterwards elect them. You are one of the people and should take an active interest in these primaries and elections hereafter. Politics from now on means a square deal for the masses, lower passenger rates, lower freight rates, less extortion by trusts and combinations. These things can only be accomplished by every honest voter making it a part of his business. The people can only know what is really going on by reading the newspapers. But you ought to read a newspaper that can print the truth about all the candidates; a paper that has no self interest in politics; whose owners are not office holders or office seekers. The publishers think the STATE JOURNAL is such a paper and in order to prove it to you make the special offer of only 50c from now until after election; 75c if you want the Sunday also. The earlier you send in your order the more you get for your money. Lincoln is the news center.

Wholesale liquor dealers contend that to comply with the new state pure food law, labeling bottles of liquor with the percentage of alcohol contained in the package means about late prohibition They say that they cannot comply with the law unless they redistill the goods. The state pure food inspector says that they must comply with the law however, and it may be possible that prohibition may be brought about in this state by the wholesale dealers of liquor being unable to sell properly labeled intoxicants.—Nemaha Republican.

Two of our well known young people made a trip to Falls City Monday and were joined in matrimony by County Judge Gagnon at the court house. The contracting parties were Miss Bessie, youngest daughter of Wm Arnold and Mr. Lon Emerson. The bride has lived here a number of years and enjoys a wide acquaintance and friendship among the young people. Mr. Emerson is a comparative stranger, the family having moved here within the past year. They will reside for the present with her parents, but expect to go to housekeeping soon. The Leader wishes these young folks a happy, prosperous future.—Humboldt Leader.

Leroy Allen was very badly injured Monday evening by coming in contact with one of the wires which had been stretched across the corner of the park to prevent pedestrians from cutting unsightly paths across the village green. The lad was running at full speed and dashed against the wire, which threw him backwards injuring his spine and rendering him speechless the remainder of the night and a greater part of the next day. He was taken to the home of F M Williamson and Dr. Widmer and Doctor Widmer was summoned, when it was possible to relieve the sufferings of the boy.—Humboldt Standard.

Webster's Ready Reply.

While editor-in-chief of the Unabridged Dictionary, Noah Webster, lived in New Haven. Webster had a small son, Chauncey, who was a precocious youngster. Chauncey was fond of playing with the printers' type, and one day he set up a few lines and showed them to his father. Webster looked at them and said: "Chauncey, you have made a mistake in spelling 'Chauncey.'" "No, I haven't, father," replied the boy. "Yes, you have," said Webster, "and I'll bet you a penny you can't find it." Chauncey looked at the lines carefully, and then said: "I've got you, father; you've spelled it wrong yourself." "Where?" asked Webster. "Why, you've spelled 'penny' with two n's," replied Chauncey.

BEING JUST TO ALL.

Give every man his due.

If you cannot be generous in your judgment you can at least be just.

You never can tell when you will be a claimant for leniency yourself.

Oh, it's a lovely quality—that of being able to find some good in everyone.

It is merely that the same sort of temptation does not assail every one alike.

I know a woman to whom it is the greatest comfort to go and confess your mistakes and wrongdoings.

"I know," she always says, "just how it is. I might have done the same thing had I been in your place."

She listens with such sympathetic interest and has the rare knack of being able to put herself in your place.

Just because you are strong when another person is weak does not argue that you are free from failure yourself.

She does not make wrong seem right, but she points out your mistakes so wisely and gently that it takes all the sting out of confession.

THE STATE FAIR OF 1907 A FINANCIAL SUCCESS.

LARGE CROWDS ON GROUNDS

Attendance Is But Little Less than that of 1906, which Had Bryan's Homecoming Day to Aid It

State Fair Attendance.

The total attendence this year amounted to 97,880 as opposed to 104,342 last year, and 56,453 the year before. The last day saw a decided increase over the same day a year ago, but not by any means the best last day in the history of state fairs.

The state fair of 1907 has ended. The week was satisfactory in every way. The weather was ideal; a rain just before the opening day settling the dust, and the whole week which followed passed without a rainfall.

SECRETARY MELLOR

To whom, in a large measure, the success of the State Fair was due.

The state fair in every particular was fully up to expectations, and thousands of those who viewed it declared it to be the best ever held. The exhibits of live stock, machinery, mechanical arts, fish, dairy and food products, poultry, all were complete, and a source of inspiration and instruction to those interested. The races were better than usual, as the larger purses hung up drew better matching material. The new and pleasing feature of this year's racing program was the track meet, the human racers sharing interest with the animal species.

Notwithstanding there were no cheap rate excursions this year the attendance was nearly as large as last year, even though Wednesday of 1906, being the Bryan homecoming day, brought thousands to town, the exception to a complaint that the road bed from Holdrege to the western state line is in bad condition.

Death Mystery at Geneva.

A month old babe died in the west part of Geneva, as some thought, under suspicious circumstances, and the coroner and county attorney made an investigation delaying the burial about two hours. Nothing criminal could be proven and no arrests were made. The exact cause of death was not determined. The testimony secured would indicate indifference and neglect, but no criminal intent was proven.

Off to New Location.

Prof. and Mrs. F. G. Miller, of Lincoln, left Monday morning for their new home in Seattle, Wash. They went by way of San Francisco, and expected to spend several days in sight-seeing at different points of interest along the way. Prof. Miller is the recently elected head of the department of forestry of the Washington state university, which is located at Seattle.

Work Started on Bank Building.

The brick work has been started on the Bonham State bank building at Fairbury. It is to cost $20,000 and will be one of the most modern bank buildings in that section of the state. The new bank is being promoted by Isaiah Bonham and sons of Mahaska, Kas. Mr. Bonham is one of the wealthiest men in the northern part of Kansas and will give a strong backing to the banking institution.

Falls Dead at Fair Grounds.

George Spuhler, a well known farmer living five miles north of Lincoln, on North Fourteenth street, dropped dead at the fair grounds. A few minutes before he fell he had complained a son to get his team so they might start for home. He complained of feeling badly. His son waited for the team and while Mr. Spuhler was walking toward the gate, and when about a block north of the south entrance he fell. A physician was sent for, but he pronounced him dead after an examination.

Crack South Dakota Safe.

Three robbers cracked the safe of the bank at Frankfort, S. D., secured several thousand dollars and made their escape on a hand car. Posses are scouring the country. Although descriptions are meagre, it is thought the men will be captured soon. Besides valuable papers taken or destroyed considerable cash is missing. Much of the money was held by the bank to accommodate grain and stock men.

Cream Tester Examinations.

Food Commissioner J. W. Johnson recently held examinations in various counties for the accommodation of cream testers, but not many testers were enabled to attend the meetings and for their benefit he has decided to request county judges to hold examinations and thus save applicants for a license the expense of making a trip to Lincoln. A list of questions will be sent to county judges and the applicants may take the examination by going to the county seat. The Milford Mail says that the food commissioner may direct how examinations are to be held.

Road Will Build Crossing.

The state railway commission has received word that the Burlington railroad will build crossings at Morgan. Railway Commissioner Clarke left recently for Oxford to meet J. H. Darner of Cozard, the owner of a mill who has asked that the Burlington be required to build a switch to his mill. The Burlington recently promised to furnish the switch. Mr. Clarke will proceed over the Burlington "high line" to inspect the track in response to a complaint that the road bed from Holdrege to the western state line is in bad condition.

MAN KILLED AT ROGERS, NEB.

Is Hit By Fast Train and Thrown Over Thirty Feet.

Ralph Feldman, supposed to be a wealthy resident of Philadelphia, Pa., was struck by Union Pacific westbound train No. 15 at Rogers, Neb., and was almost instantly killed. Feldman was a passenger on the eastbound train No. 10 which was on the side track at Rogers waiting for the other train to pass. He had gotten off the car for a breath of fresh air. When No. 15 came into sight Feldman found himself on the opposite side of the track from No. 10, and he attempted to cross in front of No. 15. He was buried thirty feet into the air and fell to the ground forty feet from the track. He was placed in the baggage car, and the train hurried to Fremont. He expired before it reached Fremont.

JUMPS FROM A HIGH WINDOW.

Patient at An Omaha Hospital Commits Suicide.

Mrs. Anna Gorman, a patient at St. Joseph's hospital, Omaha, committed suicide by jumping from a third-story window while her nurse was absent. Mrs. Gorman had been at the hospital three weeks, suffering from a nervous disorder, but her nurse had seen no signs which indicated that the woman should be closely watched. When the nurse returned to the woman's room after a brief absence, she was surprised to find the patient missing. Search was begun and the body was found on the ground below. The woman lived an hour, but did not regain consciousness.

Finds Farmers Read Papers.

Postmaster Dan Wonder of Blue Springs has taken notice of the reading habits of the patrons of his office and finds that of the 150 farmers who receive mail there all but a dozen take daily papers, besides the usual number of weekly and monthly publications. Some of them take two or three dailies, usually a local paper published in the nearest small city, a so-called metropolitan paper and perhaps a life stock journal from Kansas City, St. Joseph or Omaha. Mr. Wonder believes that this growth of the means of securing early and constant information will give this state a well informed as well as intelligent electorate and that good government will be the rule here in consequence.

Guilty of Manslaughter.

Missouri Valley Editor Must Face Punishment for Killing.

A. H. Sniff, editor of the Harrison County News, at Missouri Valley, Ia., was found guilty of manslaughter by a jury here for the killing of Mort Brundige, on March 15 last. The trial had lasted a week, and had aroused intense interest. Brundige was offended by editorial criticism of the conduct of his brother-in-law at a dance, and it was reported had threatened to kill the editor in revenge. After having previously failed to obtain entrance to the editorial sanctum, Bundige followed Sniff through the street and as he was ascending the steps to his office, Sniff turned on Bundige and after cautioning him not to advance further, pulled a revolver and fired. Bundige fell mortally wounded.

POLICE FIRE ON SOLDIERS.

A dispatch from Junction City, Kas., says: A mob of fifty soldiers of the Farriers school at Fort Riley came here about 10 o'clock in the morning for the purpose of releasing a comrade who was confined in the county jail. The sheriff and city police were notified of their coming and from positions in windows above the jail opened a fire that quickly dispersed the mob as it sought to force an entrance. The authorities at Fort Riley placed guards at the jail and are aiding in the effort to find the members of the mob. Two arrests have been made. No one was shot.

MUCH PLEASED WITH TEST.

Members of Naval War College Return From Maneuvers.

Members of the naval war college who arrived in Newport after several days spent on board the ships of Rear Admiral Evans' battleship fleet during the maneuvers in southern waters and on the trip up into Massachusetts water, speak in terms of high commendation of the work of the ships. They said that in all the evolutions the distances were kept admirably and all the movements were carried out with great precision. While off Nantucket shoals the ships ran into a thick fog and the new submarine signal bell system was given a severe test. The officers of the war college said it was thoroughly successful. The fleets speed was reduced, but although they could not see each other in the mist, the distances were maintained perfectly.

PASSENGERS WERE ROBBED.

Thieves Got $100 on a Rock Island Train.

Sleepy passengers bound east from Lincoln on Rock Island No. 8, leaving at 12:30 Friday morning, had their pockets picked by two or three robbers who boarded the train in Lincoln. The total loss is said to have been abut $100. Before the passengers, who had been attending the fair, got on the train at Lincoln they complained of pocketpicking and two men were pointed out as accused of attempting to get other people's money. After the train had proceeded as far as Al Conductor Henry Duval received complaints from passengers who said they had lost their pocketbooks. Shortly afterwards he had trouble with two of the men accused, and made arrangements to have them taken into custody when Omaha was reached. While the train was passing over a piece of slow track near Murdock the robbers backed out at the end of the train and escaped in the darkness. Before that the conductor had covered them with a revolver and one of them had drawn a knife on him. The third man suspected escaped by jumping from the window of a toilet room.

Milk Famine at New York.

A milk famine menaces New York according to prominent dealers. They say the shortage is 8,000 quarts a day and that the supply is decreasing daily. The price, they predict, will soon advance to ten cents a quart. The late uprising and the scarcity of fodder for the cows is said to be responsible for the decreased supply.

Wants Good Relations.

He bears messages to the government of both countries of the accession of Mohammed Ali Shah to the Persian throne, upon the death of the former Shah, which took place on January 8 last. The general says it is his desire to establish permanent commercial relations between the United States and Persia. Where there is, he says, a large market for American cotton and agricultural implements.

PRIMARY ELECTION IN NEBRASKA

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 4—Returns from the primaries throughout the state came in slowly, practically all figures being received over the long distance telephone. Returns early indicated the nomination of Judge Reese for supreme judge, a majority of the counties reporting showing margins in his favor. Returns from Douglas county were, as was expected, very favorable to Sedgwick, but figures received in Omaha from the state were to much the same effect as those received in Lincoln. Shortly before 2 o'clock about one-third of the precincts from Douglas county gave Reese 446, Sedgwick 337. Thirty-two precincts gave Sedgwick 1,426, Reese 786. In Lancaster county thirty-two precincts out of fifty-two gave Reese 1,816, Sedgwick 1,097.

One of the unexpected features of the returns received up to 2 o'clock was the showing made by Caldwell for railroad commissioner. On account of the meagerness of the returns, especially on this office, it was not possible to estimate what the strength of Caldwell might be throughout the state as a whole, but in several counties he was pressing Clarke hard, and had the heavier vote in several instances. Returns on candidates for the state offices on the democratic and other tickets were practically all.

All over the state the vote appears to have been very light—even more so than had been anticipated. Many precincts reported a vote of twenty-five per cent or even less, while by far the larger number of those heard from mustered little more than half the normal vote. The attendance of many voters at the state fair, ignorance of the meetings and importance of the primary, and lack of interest in its outcome were considered the probable reasons for the poor showing. Good weather prevailed over the greater portion of the state. As a rule, where a fight was made, it was on local nominations, rather than those for state offices. Many counties even complained of a lack of candidates for the nominations on local tickets.

BRUTAL MURDER NEAR ADAMS.

Mrs. Sarah Martin, Wife of Aged Farmer, Victim of Atrocious Villian.

A dispatch from Adams, Neb., a small town southeast of Lincoln, says that Sarah Martin, the wife of Jacob Martin, a prominent farmer and stockman living six miles northwest of this place, was murdered and O. H. Shumway, who was employed on the farm as hired man, is missing, together with a horse, buggy, gun and a sum of money belonging to Mr. Martin. Officers in all neighboring counties have been notified to be on the look out for Shumway.

The murder of Mrs. Martin was first discovered by her husband. Mr. Martin had left immediately after dinner for the school house, some miles away, where the primary election was being held. He returned about 4:30, and entering the house he at once noticed numerous blood stains on the floors and walls. The stains continued up the stairs, and the aged farmer at last found the dead body of his wife, with her throat cut from ear to ear, lying in a heap under the bed in an upstairs room. The body was swathed in bed clothes.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin had lived together now for many years, their children having married and moved away from the farm.

TWO CENT FARES NECESSARY.

Governor Hoch Says Kansas is Entitled to Change.

Governor Hoch has issued a statement answering the arguments of Gardiner Lathrop and other railroad attorneys made before the railroad commissioners in the 2-cent fare hearing. Hoch cited Lathrop's commendation of Hughes' action in New York in vetoing a 2-cent fare bill and passing the decision on to the New York board, and declared Lathrop wants to give power to a New York board which he claims is illegal to give to a Kansas board. Governor Hoch also declared the adoption of 2-cent fares in neighboring states since the last legislative session had changed conditions governing Kansas and made 2-cent fare rate in that state necessary.

Mutilates a Painting.

Another valuable picture in the galleries of the Louvre was practically destroyed yesterday. This is the third time within two months that injuries in the galleries have been wantonly damaged. The culprit this time was a girl, who, with a pair of scissors, cut the canvas of Ingre's masterpiece, "The Stetine Chapel." She was at once apprehended and explained that she had damaged the painting from a desire to be arrested. Some means to put an end to these deplorable acts of vandalism, which have become alarming, will be decided.

YOUNG QUEEN IS OBLIGING.

Will Not Disturb Sessions of the Peace Conference.

At the peace conference, the committee on land warfare, which has been considering the rights and duties of neutrals, has minded its knots. Baron Marschall von Bieberstein (Germany) announced that he could not accept the French amendment regarding neutrals residing in the territory of belligerent countries, and M. Bourgeois (France) declared that in that case he would withdraw the proposal. As a result there remained only a few clauses to be dealt with, principally those conceived in the spirit of the Luxemburg proposal concerning the use of neutral material and transportation. This proposal was adopted.

M. Neldoff, president of the conference, announced that Queen Wilhelmina had decided to leave the hall of delegates at the close of the conference. The opening of the Netherlands parliament will take place this year in some other building.

FROM ONE FORMULA

SIX TASTY AND ATTRACTIVE DISHES MAY BE MADE.

Ingredients Required Are Simple and Always on Hand—Dutch Rolls a Welcome Addition to Any Menu.

I have found, after a great many experiments, that no less than six tasty, attractive and extremely economical dishes may be made from this one simple but reliable formula, properly carried out, writes A. M. B. in the Delineator. The ingredients required are: One quart of sifted flour, five teaspoonfuls of baking powder, half a cupful of butter, one small teaspoonful of sugar, half a small teaspoonful of salt and sufficient milk to make the dough of a soft consistency.

My method of mixing is to sift the baking powder with the flour. I then add the butter, which must previously have been cut into small pieces, and follow with the sugar and salt. I mix all these ingredients together thoroughly with the hands, rubbing the butter well into the flour, after which I add the milk, mixing them mix as lightly and handle as little as possible.

With this dough as a foundation it will be easy to prepare any one of the following dishes:

1. Tea Biscuits.—Place the dough on the mixing-board and flatten it with the hand until it is no more than an inch in thickness, but do not use the rolling pin upon it. Cut the biscuits with a tumbler, cup or biscuit cutter, and bake in a buttered tin, in a moderate oven for about half an hour.

2. Dutch Rolls.—Roll the dough out until it is about half an inch thick; then cut it with small bits of butter, about half an inch apart. Sprinkle generously with sugar, and roll as if making a roly-poly; then cut in slices each about an inch thick, and bake in a well-buttered pan in a hot oven for about an hour.

3. Raisin Loaf.—Make he mixture as directed, but add half a pound of raisins before adding the milk; then bake in a bread tin, in a slow oven for three-quarters of an hour.

4. Short Cake.—Mix as directed; then bake in a round tin for half an hour. Split the cakes and butter them while hot; afterwards place a layer of fresh fruit or preserves between them and serve with sifted sugar and whipped cream.

5. Roly-Poly Pudding.—Mix as directed; roll the dough until it is about half an inch thick; then cover it with fresh fruit and roll it up. Place it in a pudding dish or earthen bowl and steam for half an hour. If preferred, the dough may be covered with jam or jelly, and, after being rolled up, may be steamed in a process that will take about three-quarters of an hour.

6. Pie Crust.—This mixture will also make a good, plain pie crust, and is especially good when used in making meat pies.

Oriental Trinkets.

Everything oriental is fashionable this season, from the material to the buttons and buckles. Old Chinese character trickets are worn on the breast belts and red and yellow Chinese chameleons set in jade are extremely smart, according to a writer in Dress. Many of the newest robes are ornamented with Japanese coral buttons set in rims of dull gold, or large silver gilt buttons with the Chinese dragon. Even with the Marie Antoinette fichus are worn pins of scarabeaus wings in oriental designs set with amethyst, coral, or turquoise.

Boiled Salad Dressing.

Yolks of three eggs; one teaspoon mustard, one teaspoon salt, two tablespoons sugar, dash of cayenne, two tablespoons melted butter or oil, one and one-half cups rich milk, one cup hot vinegar, one tablespoon cornstarch. Beat the yolks well, add the mustard, salt, sugar and cayenne; then the butter or oil, and the milk. Heat the vinegar to the boiling point. Mix dry ingredients thoroughly and add to the egg mixture. Add yolks and beat into hot milk alternately with hot vinegar. When cooked smooth and thick all in butter or oil.

To Clean Furniture.

Go over the furniture with a cloth dipped in paraffin oil and allow it to stand for an hour, which will loosen the dirt. Next wash the furniture with a suds made of pure soap and rain water. Rub very dry with a soft cloth and polish with a piece of white flannel dipped in turpentine. This will not injure a piano, but restores the wood to its original beauty. Dries dull because it's dirty and needs to be cleaned with soap and water.

Ruffled Net Curtain.

To do up ruffled net curtains, stretch out on a sheet after starching. Pin just to the ruffles and leave until dry. Take up and iron only on the ruffles, dampening as you go along. This will leave the curtain perfectly straight.

Telegraph Clothes Line.

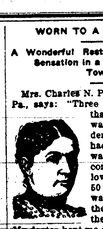
An ordinary telegraph wire makes a better line to hang clothes on than the usual rope line, as it does not break, sag or rot. It is wiped off easily and made clean.

New Piping.

The increasing demands for piping has made the progressive dressmaker seek for some more perfect and easy method of making her dress trimmings. The shops are now showing prepared tapes made of good quality and in every shade.

WORN TO A SKELETON.

A Wonderful Restoration Caused a Sensation in a Pennsylvania Town.



Mrs. Charles N. Preston, of Elkland, Pa., says: "Three years ago I found that my housework was becoming a burden. I tired easily, had no ambition and was failing fast. My complexion got yellow, and I lost over 50 pounds. My thirst was terrible, and there was vague in the kidney secretions. My doctor kept me on a strict diet, but as his medicine was not helping me, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They helped me at once, and soon all traces of sugar disappeared. I have regained my former weight and am perfectly well."

TOLD HIM THE TRUTH.

Dad's Indigestion Got the Better of His Judgment.

An old German farmer, who resided in one of the rural districts of the state of Iowa, was the father of a half-witted boy, whose lack of intellect was the cause of no little anxiety and solicitude on the part of the paternal parent.

"Pot poy Shon," he was heard to remark in the course of a conversation with a neighbor of like Teutonic origin, "he iss not ferry bright, aber I ton't vant you to tell him because I ton't vant him to know it."

Meanwhile the young hopeful was driving through the barnyard with a load of hay, which in attempting to turn a sharp corner he unfortunately upset.

The old man immediately became highly indignant. "Shon!" he bellowed in a voice of thunder, "you see a planes fool, you always vas a fool, you always vill pe a fool, you not know noddings."—Judge's Library.

Why Advertising Pays.

"You will be pressed for money oftener because you have no advertising bills to pay than because you have," observes the Buffalo News. "Big advertising bills and big bank balances grow, together, out of the same publicity campaigns. The merchant who holds down his expense account by cutting out advertising saves money just the way the railroads would if they should stop buying coal for their locomotives. Without coal the wheels won't turn; without publicity trade comes to a standstill. It pays to throw silver out of the window that gold may come in at the door.

Of Little Faith.

At the Pine Grove camp ground in Canaan, Conn., a little girl was removed to her home very much excited and being naughty to her playmates. The child was told that when she said her prayers at night she should seek forgiveness and ask the Lord to help her be a better girl. Here is the prayer which the youngster made under protest:

"Oh, Lord, I want you to help me to mind my mamma, to help me to be a better girl, to help me to be good to my playmates, to—but, pshaw, Lord, what's the use? I 'spect you don't believe half I'm saying."

A Hopeless Case.

"Yes," said the business man, "I have given up trying to collect that little bill from Bilkins."

"You see, he is a big, muscular fellow, and he used to throw my collectors out."

"Then why didn't you employ a woman collector?" inquired a writer in Spare Moments. "He couldn't do that to a woman."

"That's what I thought, so I got one and sent her round, but she never came back."

"Why not?"

"He married her."

FAMILY FOOD.

Crisp, Toothsome and Requires No Cooking.

A little boy down in N. C. asked his mother to write an account of how Grape-Nuts food had helped their family.

She says Grape-Nuts was first brought to her attention on a visit to Charlotte, where she visited the Mayor of that city who was using the food by the advice of his physician. She says:

"They derive so much good from it that they never pass a day without using it. While I was there I used the Food regularly. I gained about 15 pounds and felt so well that when I returned home I began using Grape-Nuts in our family regularly.

"My little 18 months old baby shortly after being weaned was very ill with dysentery and teething. She was sick nine weeks and we tried everything. She became so emaciated that it was painful to handle her and we thought we were going to lose her. One day a happy thought urged me to try Grape-Nuts soaked in a little warm milk.

"Well, it worked like a charm and she began taking it regularly and improvement set in at once. She is now getting well and round and fat as fast as possible on Grape-Nuts.

"Sometime ago several of the family were stricken with LaGrippe at the same time, and during the worst stages we could not relish anything in the shape of food but Grape-Nuts and oranges, everything else nauseated us.

"We all appreciate what your famous food has done for our family."

"There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

IN THE SUPERLATIVE DEGREE.

Little Son's Explanation Seemed to Cover the Case.

Little son, aged seven, whose training has been of the most painstaking and conscientious, rather took away his mother's breath in describing the dog's game of ball. He ended with:

"And, mother, Topsy caught the ball in her mouth, and then just ran like h—"

"Like what?" cried the startled mother.

"Why, like h— don't you know, mother?" innocently.

"No, I don't believe I do. Just how is that, dear?" she asked faintly.

"Well, I don't know jus' what it means, myself," he confessed, "but it's a whole lot faster than 'lickety-split!'"

CASE OF ECZEMA IN SOUTH.

Suffered Three Years—Hands and Eye Most Affected—Now Well and Is Grateful to Cuticura.

"My wife was taken badly with eczema for three years, and she employed a doctor with no effect at all until she employed Cuticura Soap and Ointment. One of her hands and her left eye were badly affected, and when she would stop using Cuticura Soap and Ointment the eczema came back, but very slightly, but it did her a sight of good. Then we used the entire set of Cuticura Remedies and my wife is entirely recovered. She thanks Cuticura very much and will recommend it highly in our locality and in every nook and corner of our parish. I. M. Robert, Hydropolis, La., Jan. 5 and Sept. 1, 1906."

Statue Finally Completed.

When Alfred Stevens designed the noble monument to the duke of Wellington in St. Paul's cathedral, London, he intended that his work should be crowned by an equestrian statue. But Stevens died before his design was carried out. Now, 35 years after his death, the equestrian statue has been completed and before long will be placed in position.

Starch, like everything else, is being constantly improved, the patent Starches put on the market 25 years ago are very different and inferior to those of the present day. In the latest discovery—Defiance Starch—all injurious chemicals are omitted, while the addition of another ingredient invented by us, gives to the Starch a strength and smoothness never approached by other brands.

Tripped.

Gunner—So you think the DeBlowers are faking about their extended European tour?

Guyer—I should say so. They said there were so many Americans in Venice that many had to walk in the middle of the street.

Gunner—Well?

Better Still.

Professor (coming from his club, holding up triumphantly his umbrella to his wife)—You see, my dear Alma, how stupid are all the anecdotes about our absent-mindedness, you see, I haven't forgotten my umbrella.

Mrs. Professor—But, my dear, you didn't take your umbrella with you; you left it at home.

The extraordinary popularity of fine white goods this summer makes the choice of Starch a matter of great importance. Defiance Starch, being free from all injurious chemicals, is the only one which is safe to use on fine fabrics. Its great strength as a stiffener makes half the usual quantity of Starch necessary, with the result of perfect finish, equal to that when the goods were new.

New Zealand has set aside 2,000,000 acres of land for endowment for the purposes of education and old age pensions. Custom duties have been reduced on necessaries of life, and increased in other lines to protect industries.

A Pardonable Fault.

Dr. Edward Everett Hale, discussing a rather finicky attack that had been made on certain recent statements, smiled and said:

"But who or what is blameless? It is like the case of the Scottish hen. An old Scottish woman wished to sell a hen to a neighbor.

"'But tell me,' the neighbor said, 'is she a'thegither a guid bird? Has she got nae faults, nae faets at all?'

"'Aweel, Margot,' the other old woman admitted, 'she has got one fault. She will lay on the Lord's day.'"

Had a Cheer Coming.

Years ago, when the G. A. R. annual department encampment was held in Boston, as the veterans were marching along one of the avenues a lady, who had secured an elevated position on a wagon in a side street, became conspicuous by the enthusiasm she displayed, and was dissatisfied with the lack of it in the by-standers. "Cheer!" said she. "Why don't you cheer? I guess you'd cheer if you'd lost two husbands in the war as I did."—Life.

Sheer white goods, in fact, any fine fresh goods when new, owe much of their attractiveness to the way they are laundered, this being done in a manner to enhance their textile beauty. Home laundering would be equally satisfactory if proper attention was given to starching, the first essential being good Starch, which has sufficient strength to stiffen, without thickening the goods. Try Defiance Starch and you will be pleasantly surprised at the improved appearance of your work.

Senator Foster Library.
The late Senator Foster of Alabama was a "forty-niner," going overland to California in the early days and engaging in placer mining. He took with him on that long and tedious journey three books, the Bible, Shakespeare and Burns' poems.

"He said of these at one time, not long since, 'I read the Bible from cover to cover. I read the side notes, I read the captions of the chapters; I learned great parts of it by heart, and I know I forgot not them yet. I learned many of Burns' poems by heart, and reads of Shakespeare in the same way.' Such reading of these three books was an education in itself. It was likely that many miners engaged in that search for wealth spent their leisure in as profitable a way.

Goshawk's Changing Plumage.
I know no bird which passes through so many changes of plumage and color of eyes as the goshawk. A young one which I have mounted is about the size of a small hen and is covered with white down. His eyes are pale blue. I colored the eyes exactly from life. When fully grown its first plumage is dark brown above and the eyes are pale yellow. No one would be likely to suspect this being a goshawk who had only seen such birds as I have. Later it comes to be a dark, shady gray of the nape and the eyes, after passing through all the intermediate changes in color, from straw yellow, orange yellow and pink finally assume the deep, rich red of the adult.—Forest and Stream.

Long Overdue.
"What," queried the very young man, "was the happiest day of your life?"

"It hasn't come yet," answered the oldest inhabitant, sadly.

"Hasn't come yet!" echoed the other in surprise. "When do you think it will come?"

"When people cease to ask fool questions," answered the old man.

He'd Failed So Often.
"Mr. Timmid has asked if he might call to-night. I think he wants to tell me that he loves me," said Miss Mercer.

"Yes, and I'm afraid that he will, also."

Gambling in Rain.
Like the Chinese, the natives of India are greatly addicted to gambling. They have, indeed, one form of wager which is peculiar to the country, and which consists in betting on the weather. This is called "putna," and has one advantage over most forms of gambling in that there is no possibility of cheating, since there is no reliance or control over the results. The sportsman make wagers whether it will rain or not, and also how much there will fall, the latter question being settled by rain gauges. There is great excitement on cloudy days. The gamblers rush to the offices or "dens" and record their bets with the bookmakers. Then, if the expected downpour comes, anxious groups assemble round the rain gauges. Even horse racing, it is said, has not more fascination for some of the gamblers.

Use of Lion's Mane.
The lion's mane, like the human beard, serves a distinct use. The lion, without it, would soon die out. The jungle is the lion's hunting ground. Here he stalks the buffalo and other such creatures, leaping on their backs or else on them. They tear madly away, and in their flight strive to scrape off the lion against trees, trunks and bushes. But his mane protects him. Without it the bumps and knocks he receives in that wild ride would infallibly make him fall unconscious to the ground in fighting his mane also protects the lion, safeguarding his throat against the longest, sharpest claws.

Romance of Modern Trade.
The fact that a man to-day can sit down in a restaurant overlooking the Thames embankment, or at a table among the trees at the base of the Washington and dine on fresh salmon brought from the waters of California, or on fruit which shows graphically the continental colony they have given rise to in modern trade, remarks a

For the Children

To succeed these days you must have plenty of grit, courage, strength. How is it with the children? Are they thin, pale, delicate? Do not forget Ayer's Sarsaparilla. You know it makes the blood pure and rich, and builds up the general health in every way.

TURKEY OUR NOBLEST BIRD.

Crossing with the Wild Species to Improve Market Product.

The most notable American bird in the farm category is the turkey, growing as he does to the great weight of 30 and even 40 pounds, and loating nothing in flavor and toothsomeness.

Likewise, the most regal of our remaining game birds is his blood brother, the wild turkey, from which he has descended.

There is perhaps no instance where domestication has scored so little in improvement as with the turkey. In fact, in some respects the taming and breeding have hurt instead of helped the species.

No prize domestic gobbler is ever so beautifully marked or so resplendent with feathers of black shaded with rich bronze and illuminated with a lustrous finish of burnished copper as is the typical wild turkey, while the vigor and vitality of the wild bird is such that to this day we strengthen the most virile of our bronze turkeys by an infusion of the wild blood.

Rhode Island stands for the best in turkey production. The last census shows less than 7,000,000 turkeys in the United States and only about 5,000 produced annually in Rhode Island, yet, according to a turkey expert, if all the turkeys of the country were of such good quality as Rhode Island's, their total value would be doubled.

According to the department of agriculture, the growing of turkeys has greatly improved during the last few years as a result of a determined effort on the part of producers of "standard bred" stock to demonstrate that it is much more profitable to use pure breeding stock than the smaller and less vigorous stock of times past.

The wild turkey is also being used to instill further new vigorous blood into the domestic flocks. Inbreeding is the fatal defect among the practice of many turkey growers.

The fact that turkeys will from the time that they are six weeks old until winter gain the greater part of their entire living from bugs, insects, grasshoppers and waste grain matters their existence during this period at little or no cost to the grower where there is a sufficient range for the birds.

Nineteen-Hour Days.
"Our hours," said a nature student, "are nothing to the birds'. Why, some birds work in the summer 19 hours a day. Indefatigably they clear the crops of insects.

"The thrush gets up at 2:30 every summer morning. He rolls up his sleeves and falls to work at once. And he never stops till 9:30 at night. At these 19 hours during that time he feeds his voracious young 200 times.

"The blackbird starts work at the same time as the thrush, but he lays off earlier. His whistle blows at 7:30, and during his 17-hour day he eats about 100 meals before his kiddies.

"The titmouse is up and about by 3 mouse is said to feed his young, 417 in the morning, and his tapping tunes up at night. A fast worker, the titmouse—meals of caterpillar mainly—is the long, hard, hot day."

The Speaking Voice.

"The words butter so parsnips," was an old saying; but one may question whether it is as true as it is old. A well-modulated voice, speaking the king's English with ease and accuracy, is a possession which lends a grace to the most humble. Ever since the Bible was equally notorious for his horror of clean linen. One day, on his complaining to Dudley North at his club that he had become a perfect martyr to rheumatism and tried every possible remedy without success ,the latter wittily replied: . .

"Pray, my lord, did you ever try a clean shirt?"

BRUTALITY OF MEDICAL ETHICS.

(From the National Druggist for June, 1907.)

Dr. Augustus Charles Bernays, who died a few days ago in St. Louis, was, probably, the foremost surgeon in the United States. His fame was coextensive with the civilized world. He was not only an operator of the highest order, but a tireless and exhaustive worker in the field of original surgery. He performed the first successful Cesarean section in 1889 in St. Louis, and also the first successful coeliotomy for gunshot wound of the abdomen and the first gallstone operation in Missouri. A record held by Dr. Bernays has never been equaled: Out of eighty-one successive cases of appendicitis which necessitated operation, seventy-one in succession were with perfectly satisfactory results, the seventy-second patient falling of recovery, but the subsequent seventeen cases successfully treated.

And yet, with such a record, matchless as was his skill, varied and extensive as was his learning, wonderful as were his accomplishments, he was not considered, by the American Medical Association, as worthy of membership in that organization.

No charge was ever brought against him which, in the remotest degree, reflected on his qualifications as a surgeon; his moral character was never the subject of attack; he was not accused of having done anything unbecoming a man or a gentleman. "The head and front of his offending had been to extent—money!" He dared to think! He refused to mold his opinions and to govern his actions by the arbitrary rules which those whom he knew to be his inferiors had set up for his guidance! In other words, he could not regard the Code of Ethics of the American Medical Association as being inspired, or having any binding authority on him where his judgment told him it was wrong. And so, "every dog" or more, on account of some trivial infraction of this sacred "Code," a movement was started to expel him from the local association, which was only defeated by his hastily sending in his resignation. As membership in the A. M. A. is dependent upon membership in the local and State societies, his name was dropped by the national organization.

And so, though he had saved thousands of lives, though other physicians had profited by his art; this brilliant surgeon, this great and able man, has, during all these years, been an outcast—a social "leper"—and regarded as "ethical" or worthy of fellowship by that body of physicians banded together in the American Medical Association!

And this is the association which, under pretense of working for the public good, is, in reality, only seeking to control Congress and the State Legislatures in the interest of their own selfish schemes; which is trying to create a Cabinet position and to place one of its members in that position; which is maneuvering by law to exclude from the use of the mails all manufacturers of medicines who do not comply with the absurd requirements that they decree to set up, which, in short, is trying to put upon the statute books of State and nation laws that will, in effect, establish a kind of medical priesthood, to which only their own members will be eligible with power and control over the health and lives of the people!

God help the druggists, the drug manufacturers, the proprietors of members of their guild, and the people generally, if this association ever succeeds in its undertaking. If it does, it will, after the abolition of the labor unions, dictate a "closed shop," and say to doctors who prefer to be independent, "You must join our union or, failing to do so, compel them to get out of the business. It will say what medicines shall be taken, and how they shall be under it will hedge the people about with a lot of petty regulations under pretense of protecting the public health. In fine, a medical bureaucracy will be established to tyrannize over the people.

Let no man call this a false alarm. If there are those who are inclined to do so, let them read the journal of the A. M. A. Let them scan the proceedings of the association, held always behind closed doors, and carefully edited, as they are, before they are published in its official organ. If they will do this they will see that we are not trying to create a bugaboo to frighten their timid souls.

JUST A GENTLE HINT.

One Remedy Appearances Indicated Nobleman Had Never Tried.

The earl of Surrey, afterward eleventh duke of Norfolk, who was a notorious gourmand and hard drinker and a leading member of the Beefsteak club, was so far from clearly in his person that his servants used to avail themselves of his fits of drunkenness—which were pretty frequent, by the way—for the purpose of washing him. On these occasions they stripped him as they would a corpse, and performed the needful ablutions. He was equally notorious for his horror of clean linen. One day, on his complaining to Dudley North at his club that he had become a perfect martyr to rheumatism and tried every possible remedy without success ,the latter wittily replied: . .

Sends Emigrants to Canada.

The Salvation Army in England is sending emigrants to Canada in batches of 600 monthly.

A Plymouth man asked a Provincetown man how tall that shaft that is to be erected at Provincetown to commemorate the landing of the Pilgrims there was to be. And the Provincetown man replied that it would certainly be tall enough to be seen from Plymouth and other places that are fond of posing as the original Pilgrim landing places. This indicates, remarks the Boston Herald, the somewhat testy state of mind existing among the inhabitants of those places. There's no trouble love lost between them, and the ceremonies at Provincetown did not soften this feeling altogether.

A medical contemporary makes the surprising announcement that "cities are more brunette than surrounding country districts." Why this should be with most of the bleaching preparations in the cities is not evident, unless it may be a result of coal smoke.

Bishop Fallows makes a strong bid for the feminine vote by maintaining that women are not more selfish than men—and yet it is noticeable that he gives no statistics as to who is paying for ice cream and soda water.

MAKING A BLUFF

WELL-MEANING CITIZENS WHO WORK ALONG WRONG LINES.

KNOCKING THE HOME TOWN

Her Commercial Clubs Fail in Work Undertaken for the Improvement of Local Conditions.

In a western town not long since a General Call was issued to citizens to hold a Meeting for the purpose of organizing a Business Men's Association, or as the papers announced, a Commercial club. According to the Newspaper Reports of the event the meeting was a Grand Success, and some 40 or 50 prominent citizens enrolled their names as members. Thus the Commercial club was started on its Career.

Among the active citizens and those who were foremost in advocating the Club as an Important Thing for the welfare of the Town, were a Minister and a Lawyer. The good clergyman was made the Secretary, a Banker of the town was elected President, and the Lawyer Treasurer. As is usual with such clubs, a Constitution and Bylaws were adopted, an Executive Committee appointed, and also a Hustling Committee to add Push to the club. It was outlined that by harmony and co-operation the town could be Boomed and made much Better. One of the Things desired was a Public Library. Among the other Things was a Manufacturing Enterprises. A Creamery and another Elevator for the town, to compete with the one Elevator already located there.

After months of careful labor on the part of the Commercial Club devel-oped the fact that the efforts towards securing any of these Things were Fruitless results. There was a Surplus Evidence of fruits were a lot of dried apple peelings and cores, which were used as a base. The seed supposed to be berry seeds, was ground and the natural coloring was coal tar dyes, and in the whole thing was a fraud factory from start to finish. Several thousand cans of fruit were found. These were old, several years perhaps, and the labels dirty showing their age. From these the labels were removed and new ones put on. These goods were dead stock on the manufacturers' hands, until bought for a mere song by the mail-order concern.

Roof Gardens for Berlin.

It is proposed to introduce roof gardens in Berlin. A good many doctors and professors are doing all they can in favor of the scheme, and are agitating for the gardens, particularly in the narrower city thoroughfares. The idea would not be difficult to carry out, the houses being mostly all of one height, and it is already possible in many parts to walk from one street to the next along a good broad roof track.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKETS.

How Agricultural Towns Can Assist in Preventing "Corners" in Produce.

Now and then complaint is heard of how the large packing houses and handlers of produce manipulate prices of eggs and poultry. These concerns are enabled to do this through their facilities for extensively handling goods and preserving them in their mammoth cold storage plants. Their system is to buy in the lowest market and hold the produce until the demand is such that prices reach the top notch.

It is evident that were the business men of small towns to follow out to some extent the plans of these large houses; the home market would be materially improved. In the agricultural towns merchants are the most extensive handlers of farmers' produce. This business is incidental to the mercantile business, and few merchants have proper facilities for the storing and proper care of perishable goods, therefore, immediately upon receiving supplies from the farmer, consignments are made to the commission houses in the large cities, and thus are the large corporation are enabled to obtain control of the markets and to manipulate prices.

Each agricultural community produces enough poultry and eggs and miscellaneous dairy produce to support a prosperous exclusive produce house. But when the articles that the farmers have for sale are distributed among a dozen or more stores, each acting independently, it is evident that highest market prices cannot be paid. The plan proposed for the receiving station of co-operative produce companies in each town has many desirable points to the farmer. At small expense a co-operative plant of sufficient capacity to handle all perishable products of the community can be put in order. A plant of this kind, if rightly managed, should enable the best conditions of the local markets and higher prices could be paid for produce than the merchants could afford to pay for the same.

A number of towns in the middle west have adopted this system, and with success. Not alone have the home markets been greatly improved, but a greater volume of trade has been brought to the merchants. Should this plan be universally followed, in agricultural districts, it would lessen the opportunity for the manipulation of prices of produce, and the "cornering of the market" by the large commission and packing houses.

THERE MUST BE MERIT.

While it is the duty of every home loving and patriotic citizen to encourage and support home enterprise, it should be part of the principle that the home enterprises should be such as to merit support. The matter of service and of competition are important. It must be a public spirited citizen, indeed, who will willingly pay home merchants exorbitant prices for what is needed, when the same goods can be purchased in some nearby town at lower prices. The local bank should be patronized, if well conducted, and those in charge of it men of integrity and enterprise. But oftimes there are illustrations of local industries being conducted in such unbusinesslike ways as to call in the confidence of the people in the community. Under such circumstances little censure can be given those who will seek foreign institution when they have money to deposit.

While it may be true that the small or towns and cities do not afford unprincipled schemers the chance to conduct business, illegitimately efficient, now and then, present themselves to the people to make them cautious and perhaps prejudice them against patronizing home institutions.

Too often it is found that insurance companies, investment concerns, banks and mercantile establishments put forth claims that are misleading statements and thus should be patronized, while in fact their methods of conduct are such as to set with the confidence of the people. Merit is an important factor in the home trade matter, and no argument can be made that will justify the people of a community giving support to institutions that are unsound, or which are managed in a way as to impose upon the residents of the community.

HELPING ALONG THE TRUSTS.

Sending Money Away from Rural Districts Assist in Making Them.

It appears as if the trusts are in the country to stay. The legislative action of the government seems to merely mean a little more regulation. Trusts generally have their starting point in Wall street. It is in Wall street that the money earned by them goes. Each trust industry means so much more for the coffers of the multi-millionaires. It is a sorry fact that the people of the country have been for years bamboozled by trust managers, and unknowingly have been compelled to donate toward their support. That the great mail-order concerns in Chicago have been backed up by Wall street capital has just become generally known, and for months Wall street financiers have decided to build up even greater in the mail-order business, and one concern has had its capital increased to $40,000,000. It has been toward such a monster enterprise the people of the west have been turning their trade the past several years, and by so doing have kept western communities from advancing.

SOME CORN RECIPES

FOR THOSE WHO ARE FOND OF DELICIOUS VEGETABLE.

Boiled in Milk Is One Excellent Way of Preparing It—In the Form of an Omelet—Served as Pudding.

A nice way to cook tender corn is in milk. In this case husk the corn and drop into the boiling milk. Cook just five minutes from the time it begins to boil. Keep covered closely while cooking and serve as soon as done. Where there is a large family, to be provided with corn, it is wiser to cook the corn in relays.

Indian Corn Pudding.—Select firm, plump ears of corn, medium size, and with a keen-bladed knife score each row of kernels, then scrape out the pulp, leaving the hulls on the cob. To the pulp taken from a dozen ears allow a pint and a half rich milk, four beaten eggs, a teaspoonful salt, a half teaspoonful pepper, and if the corn lacks sweetness two or three tablespoonfuls sugar. Bake in a well-buttered deep earthen dish for two hours, in a slow, steady oven.

Green Corn Fritters.—Cut the kernels from four good-sized ears young corn. Add two beaten eggs, half a teaspoonful salt, a saltspoonful pepper, a cup of flour and enough cold milk. Have ready a hot frying pan well greased and drop the batter by spoonfuls. There should be enough for a dozen. Do not let the fritters touch. Cook in relays, frying on one side four minutes, then turn and fry the other. These are delicious on corn and heaped a little for chicken or to serve for breakfast.

Green Corn Omelet.—Score the rows of four large ears of corn and scrape out the pulp. Mix with five well-beaten eggs, whites and yolks together, one tablespoonful cream, half a teaspoonful salt and pepper to season. Heat a frying pan, drop in a table spoonful butter and grease every portion of the sides and bottom. Pour in the omelet and tilt the pan, sliding a thin-bladed knife under the omelet to prevent its sticking. When nearly cooked on top the stove, set in the oven to finish. Then fold over and turn on to a hot platter.

Broiled Sweet Corn.—Boil the ears of corn two minutes, then drain and dry on a towel. Place on a broiler and toast over glowing coals or under the gas flame until a golden brown. Season with salt and send to the table in a napkin.

Baked Corn.—Take out the coarse outer husks from young corn, turn back the inner and remove the silk. Bring the inner husks back over the end, tie in place and lay in the oven. Bake about 20 minutes.

What to Do with Left-Over Corn.—Cut from the cob, then chop very fine. Put over the fire in a shallow basin, adding milk to moisten slightly. Let it just come to a boil, no more, or it will be hopelessly scorched. Season with salt, pepper and butter, and serve at once.

Damson Cheese.

Stew Damson plums until tender, then drain off the juice and remove the skins and stones. To the pulp add half the juice, weigh it, then boil until it is a dry paste. Stir in six ounces of sugar to every pound of fruit and keep stirring until the mixture will leave the sides of the kettle and adhere to the spoon in a solid mass. If it will yield to the finger without sticking when touched it is done. Turn into glasses or china molds. This is fine for meat or game, and many prefer it to currant jelly.

Clean with Gasoline.

Boleros and blouses of velvet, and, in fact, any small articles fashioned of this material, may be easily cleaned at home by means of gasoline. The greatest care should always be exercised, however, in handling gasoline, owing to its highly inflammable nature and the necessity for seeing that it should be stored outside if possible, and must be kept tightly corked, while the cleaning operations should be carried on out of doors.

Dainty Sedspreads.

To make dainty bedspreads, cut sprays of flowers from cretonne and sew raw edge on cotton cloth of any preferred color for background. An old white sheet may be used as a background. Quilt with three rows of feather stitching. When nearly cooked on top the stove, set in the oven to finish. Then fold over and turn on to a hot platter.

Spanned Baked Apples.

Wash, quarter and core and put in baking dish.; Sprinkle over them one-half cup sugar to each four apples, add one-half cup water, cover the dish and bake till tender. If cooked slowly and longer will be prettier color.

Dessert for Children.

A wholesome dessert for children and one easily prepared is made of fairly thick slices of bread buttered and covered with molasses or maple sirup and placed in the oven for a few minutes until hot.

Wash-Tub Wisdom.

When washing a woolen shawl do not wring it or pull it out of shape. Wring it out carefully by hand, laying the sods and the grease off with warm water.

SERIAL STORY

FRIDAY THE 13TH

A Novel by

THOMAS W. LAWSON

(Copyright, 1907, Dreadnaught, Page & Co.)

There was a silence, and then I heard an indescribable fluttering rush that told as plainly as sight could have done that a woman had answered her heart's call. Looking up involuntarily, I saw a sight that for a long moment held my eyes as if I had been fascinated. It was Beb bowed forward with his face hidden in his hands and beside him, on her knees, Beulah Sands, her arms about his neck, his head drawn down to her bosom. "Bob, Bob," she said chokingly, "I cannot stand it any longer. My heart is breaking for you. You were so happy when I came into your life, and the happiness is almost more than I can bear, and all for me, a stranger. At first I thought of nothing but father and how to save him, but since that day when those men struck at your heart, I have been filled with, oh! such a longing to tell you, to tell you, Bob—"

"What? Beulah, what? For the love of God, don't stop; tell me, Beulah, tell me." He had not lifted his head. It was buried on her breast, his arms closed around her. She beat her head and laid her beautiful, soft cheek, down which the tears were now streaming, against his brown hair. "Bob, forgive me, but I love you, love you, Bob, more than I ever loved any man who has never known love before, never known anything but stern duty. Bob, night after night when all have left I have gone into your office and sat in your chair. I have laid my head on your desk and cried and cried until it seemed as though I could not live till morning without knowing you say that you loved me, and that you did not mind the ruin I had brought into your life. I have patted the back of your chair where your dear head had rested. I have covered the arms of your chair, that your strong, brave hands had gripped, with kisses. Night after night I have knelt at your desk and prayed to God to shield you, to protect you from all harm, to take away the black cloud I brought into your life. I have asked Him to do with me as He will—with my father and mother, anything, anything if only He would bring back to you the happiness I had stolen. Bob, I have suffered, suffered, as only a woman can suffer."

She was sobbing as though her heart would break, sobbing wildly, convulsively, like the little child who in its night comes to its mother's bed to tell of the bleak, goblin things it has been pursuing it. Long before she had finished speaking—and it took only a minute—I knew that—but—the words—I had broken the power of the fascination that held me, had turned away my eyes, and tried not to listen. For fear of breaking the spell, I did not dare cross the floor to reach Beulah's door or to reach the outer door of my office, which was nearer here than the door to my desk. I waited—through a silence broken only by Beulah's weeping, that seemed hourlong. Then in Bob's voice came one low sob of joy:

"Beulah, Beulah, my Beulah!"

I realized that he had risen. I rose, too, thinking that now I could close the door. But again I saw a picture that transfixed me. Bob had taken both

CAUSES OF SUICIDE

STATISTICS COLLECTED FROM MANY SOURCES.

Numerous Cases Attributable to Child-less Marriages—Rate High Among Germans, Nations—Means of Self-Destruction.

About 1,000,000 suicides of all classes, it has been found that 205 married men with children destroyed their lives; 470 married men without children; 338 widowers with, and 1,004 widowers without children.

With respect to the women, 46 married women with, and 138 without children committed suicide, while 196 widows with, and 336 without offspring, completed the list.

On the face of things it would appear to indicate that childless marriages the number of men relative to double that in women; treated. Leaving the case of double suicides out of account, it would also appear that if males suicide is more frequent than in females.

Equally interesting is that phase of the subject which deals with the causes. One table dealing with 6,782 cases shows one-seventh caused by misery, one-twentieth part by loss of fortune, and forty-third by gambling, one nineteenth by love affairs, one-ninth by domestic troubles, one-thirty-fifth by insanity, and by folk, and shifted and remorse one-seventh and one twenty-seventh respectively.

The geography of suicide is also of great interest. Westcott says the high-est proportion in Europe is shown by the Germanic races. Saxony having the highest rate of any country. In Norway the rate was very large for a time, its decrease being attributed to the greater restrictions now laid on the liquor traffic.

The Celtic races have a low rate, and this is evinced by the figures for Ireland and Wales. Mountainous regions are said to show a lower rate than lowlands. In the highlands of Scotland and Wales, and in the high-land of Switzerland, suicide is rare.

Times and seasons affect operate separately, to influence the act of self-destruction. Roughly speaking, the curve line of suicide, calculated through the year, rises from January to July, and decreases for the second half of the year. The maximum periods have been found to fall in May, June and July. I believe, indeed, June is found to show a marked predominance as a suicide month.

One reason for such preeminence in the warm season of the year is set down as represented by the onset of hot weather affecting the system and tending to disturb mental equilibrium of the subjects. In 1,593 cases boiled at, Paris, the prevailing hours of self-destruction were from six a. m. to noon and from two to three p. m.

Perhaps one of the most curious phases of this study is revealed in the fact already alluded to—namely, that different countries to show preferences for different means of commit-ting this suicide from other lands. The most common Euroepan method is by means of hanging, but in Italy this mode of self-destruction is rare. Drowning follows next in order, and three of these women as men perish, in this way each year in Europe. Shooting is frequent in Italy and Switzerland. Cut throat is common in England and Ireland; it does not seem to constitute anywhere else a frequent mode of ending life.

Poisoning is a specially Anglo-Saxon method of suicide, we are told; while suffocation by the fumes of carbonic acid gas, inhaled in a closed room, is very typical of suicide in France.

Necklace Brings Ill Luck.

An eerie story is told about a necklace which formerly belonged to the maharanee of Cooch Behar. Indian which is supposed to bring bad fortune to every one connected with it. The history of the necklace—of its theirs and torquoises, which are not usually considered to be unlucky stones—is certainly peculiar. While it was in the maharannee's possession she was robbed of a quantity of valuable jewelry and the maharajah lost sums of his best racing ponies by death and breakdowns. The advice of a pundit was sought, he reached a hundred years of ownership and a voyage across the sea in order to break the spell and the necklace was accordingly given by a lady in England. As a result the maharajah has begun to win races again and the maharanee has received the stolen property, but the story goes that the present owner of the necklace has been the victim of persistent ill fortune from the day that it came into her possession.

Queen of Siam's Jewels.

The walls of her bed chamber are literally ablaze with precious stones, while in a safe in her majesty's apartments are diamonds, rubies, pearls and emeralds fashioned into quaint neck-laces of fabulous value. One little necklace alone intended to serve as a pendant, is in the shape of a lotus flower and is valued at £15,000.

The King, however, possesses a wonderful stock of jewels, and not only is his throne, which is made of pure gold, thickly encrusted with diamonds, emeralds and rubies, but his majesty's "state mantle" is covered with jewels. To race, this alone is the most wonderful garment of the world. Digging into Jericho.

Prof. Sellin's excavations on the site of the ancient city of Jericho are yielding unexpectedly rich treasures. In his last letters to the Vienna Academy of Science the professor writes that over 100 men are digging at five different points. One of the most interesting finds is the historical city wall, built of burnt-lime bricks. It was some ten feet in thickness, rising from a stone foundation. On the western side of the city the wall was nearly 40 feet in width. At another point a private house was found built over the other house of a still earlier epoch. Other discoveries, says Pall Mall Gazette, include lamps, plates, cups, needles, weights, mortars and mills of stones and stone, some of very rough and primitive handiwork and others very finely executed. In the inner city remains of rows of houses have been uncovered. The ancient Hebrew lettering proves that the old Hebrew characters were in use. Prof. Sellin hopes to renew the excavations next winter. In the meantime he says that the work already done has opened up a wealth of material for the student of the pre-Israelite and Canaanite period.

Drainage vs. Irrigation.

The immense possibilities of drainage in making new productive land for the United States are forcefully pointed out in the latest report of the geological survey. It is estimated that no less than 80,000,000 acres of land may be reclaimed in this manner, if less than half of this work is done, and that the land values of the United States would be increased by $5,560,000,000 and that the crop values would be advanced $750,000,000 a year. This showing, says the Monitor Magazine, is expected to have a marked influence on congress in the matter of appropriations. But to forward the lesson still further, it is estimated that with the division of this new land into 40-acre farms, 1,250,000 families, or 6,000,000 persons, could be provided with homes; that each family would spend annually $1,000 in improvements, electric-blocks, and that the total expenditure in thus bettering the United States would be something like $5,500,000,000. Truly an imposing array of figures.

Ethical Code of Electrical Engineers.

One of the most gratifying incidents of the present era of ethical awakening in America was the recent agitation in favor of the adoption of an ethical code by the Institute of Electrical Engineers. It is true that at the recent annual meeting at Niagara the carefully prepared code, upon which a competent committee had for some time unanimously agreed, met with delay on many grounds of technical procedure. The postponement of consideration by no means, however, implies rejection of the measure, says Century Magazine, and the present authorities of the institute will doubtless carry the matter forward with all constitutional dispatch, for no member of this honorable profession a profession yearly increasing in responsibility and importance, would be willing to so on record as permanently opposed to so desirable a reform, and one which the press of the country has hailed with such cordial and significant approval.

John T. Tagan, a driver of the Boston fire department, who, to avoid a collision of his truck with a crowded trolley car, realizing that many of the passengers might be killed, deliberately turned the horses toward the sidewalk and was killed himself as a result, was a truer hero than most of those who died in war, because without hope of reward or glory he gave his life that others might live. Tagan was overcome with being one of the most skillful drivers in the department, and his death under these circumstances is another illustration that the danger to the firemen is not always the fires, but the going to them, and the wickedness of the false alarm.

The London Chronicle advances the proposition that literary women live long and says that, for instance, Carolina Heyrachel reached the age of 93, Harriet Lee 95, Mary Somerville 93, Hannah More 88, Maria Edgeworth and Anna Barbauld 82, Jane Porter 74, Georges Sand 72, and Mary Mitford died in her 70th year. It would be easy, however, to make a list as long or that of literary women who have died young.

The German army is to be supplied with paper bottles, a Japanese invention. Though made of pliable paper, they can be hung over a fire long enough to bring the water to a boil. Bottles can be used about eight times.

"Every man is human," says Dr. Derdiger, "in some as big as it should be when he is on the island is taken into consideration." That ought to hold them for a while. But Providence knows it best.—Chicago Daily News.

WHAT ONE MERCHANT DID

Correspondent of Home Trade League Testifies to Value of Publicity

One country merchant writes the Home Trade league as follows:

"Since I have adopted the city idea of advertising—naming new goods by their proper name and at the store making known what I desire to dispose of at or about cost to make room for new goods—my sales have increased very largely with regular customers, but I have secured many new ones. Not only this—instead of the farmers' wives spending nearly half to an hour and a half looking about the store to see what there is in stock they may want and taking the clerk's time who otherwise would have a chance to sell goods to several other customers, they come in and ask for the very articles they have seen advertised and which they have already decided they do want from seeing the advertisement in this weekly paper, and the result is I have been able to dispense with one of my clerks, to whom I was paying $400 per year."

This merchant further says that the saving of clerk hire expended in this same kind of advertising during the year will be in confident, increase the trade $5,000 or more, and that he already names 28 customers who but very recently have been buying their goods almost entirely from Chicago merchants.

This experience without doubt can be duplicated by thousands of other men in business throughout the country. It is to be feared that the eyesight, however, of many merchants is allowed himself to get into a rut, and it is one from which he must swiftly emerge if he has any desire to "stay in the game." The methods of a generation ago, it must be remembered, are not necessarily adapted to the conditions of to-day.

By the persistent and persevering use of every device for publicity the catalogue houses have built up their present enormous trade. It is not reasonable to suppose they can be dislodged from the position they occupy a position, as has frequently been pointed out, that threatens the well-being if not the existence of every small community throughout the country—unless they are opposed with something like their own weapons. A favorite phrase much in use to-day is "Get business!" and to get business you must go after it. It is reasonable to expect it will come to you unasked.

Take the experience of this Home Trade league correspondent as a guide. He had the goods. He wanted to sell them. His proceeding was simple. Through publicity, which in his case simply meant attractive and truthful advertising, he brought the attention of the people together. Results were never in doubt.

To sum up, successfully to compete with the powerful catalogue houses and the city department store, you must in a measure adopt their methods. They have won by publicity. Meet them on that ground. Match them point with point and weapon with weapon. You have the medium in your local paper. Let your advertisements say something, and mean what they say. Let the people know what you have to sell, and depend upon it, they will come to you.

IS HUMAN WEAKNESS

THE DESIRE TO GET SOMETHING FOR NOTHING.

AN IGNIS FATIUS TO AVOID

One Cause That Has Led to the Downfall of Many—Fallacy That Ever Tends Toward Evil.

A man who won the confidence, respect and admiration of the people of his state was elected to the United States senate. Soon it is discovered that he was "owned by the railroads," bought by favors and instead of representing the interests of the people he sent money to his high place in the nation's councils, preferred to represent the corporations that made it possible for him to ride over railroads valley and hill. It is only a demonstration of human inclination to get something for nothing.

The member of a state legislature was accused of showing special attention to legislation favorable to the railroads and corporations. He was charged with riding on passes; and in fact it became known that his principal supporters, who rode free over the railroads. Another illustration of the human desire to secure something for nothing.

The mayor of a city regularly occupied a front seat at the leading theater, handed out a free street car ticket to the conductor, enjoyed free drinks at the bars—another example of the unconscious weakness of human nature. He and at last his greed caused him to enter into dishonest deals that landed him in the penitentiary.

On certain days of the month at numerous department stores can trace by county and city charities, long rows of men and women can be seen awaiting their turn to get a small supply of every-day necessaries of life. Some are helpless, dejected, and their looks indicate want and misery, but there are others who have no appearance of need. Here again we find men and women leaving pride and self-respect behind because of the desire to secure something for nothing.

On special sales days in the retail districts of every large city great crowds can be seen about the entrances of the great department stores, crushing, struggling to get to the bargain counters, all bent upon getting something of value for little or nothing.

From the highest walks of life to the lowest the all-pervading and dominant trait is evidence to show the weakness of the individual in the struggle to get something for nothing. It is based upon the knowledge of this frailty of humankind that the most great business enterprises are built. Wonderful bargains are advertised, and the means rush to buy, without calm reasoning in the matter of say comparisons of value. Good business judgment is cast in the background by the madness to get something for nothing.

The get-rich-quick operator uses the same methods to lead to his trap victims with dollars as do the railroads, the big department stores and the others who have overt objects to gain. It is always the promise held out to give something for inadequate compensation, without to equal in appearance of money or labor that allows the fraud to succeed. There is magic in the "something for nothing" idea. It is a battle cry that people in every rank and walk of life. It often is the cause of the downfall of men who have all the abilities to succeed. It is a fallacy that tends toward evil. There can nothing be gained without adequate compensation. "The something for nothing is an ignis fatuus that the wise will avoid.

SHARP PRACTICES.

Schemes by Which People in Country Districts Are Defrauded.

One of the winning games that is widely played is the giving of prizes for the sale of baking powder, flavoring extracts, etc. Numerous concerns are interested in this line of business. Premiums are offered to club raisers, and an outfit for canvassing is sent for a dollar or so, or perhaps furnished free if some person will vouch for the honesty of the applicant. But a "bond" is required as security for goods sent. The offer is so attractive that many are induced to order a lot of the goods to get the premium. The goods are of the cheapest and most trashy kind. The soap, the essences, the spices are all of an inferior quality often adulterated and unwholesome. The person who orders them realizes that the lot is worth little. If they are not sold by the agent, it matters little to the concern sending them out, as the person vouching for the honesty of the agent is responsible. Information that they will be held for the price of the goods, and to save trouble, the agent will send the money due, and make the matter good. A bad bargain—it is good thing to avoid all propositions that offer much for little.

Give Charm to Town.

Attractive streets, well paved, good sidewalks, clean appearing buildings all arranged well, all go to add a charm to a town. One of the things that often attract strangers to a town is a good appearance in the loose manner in which storekeepers and others take care of the exterior of their places. Perhaps not a sign about the place is to be found to designate the character of the business carried on, and this can only be known by a peep through the open door. The windows are often arranged in such a way as to give little knowledge of the goods handled. During the summer time awning hanging low over the walks, in many places, must stoop to avoid them, are found in many places. Just a little care is needed to improve along these lines. An attractive sign does not cost much and is a good investment for the storekeeper. Cleanliness in front of business places is a good impression. In fact strangers will seldom enter a store if the outside appearance indicates slovenliness and carelessness. The upto-date merchant will always be found with a well-cared-for establishment. It is quite often you can tell the business importance of a man in the community by the appearance of his store. Make business places attractive as possible. It may cost you a little money, a little extra labor, but it will pay in the long run.

Pays to Keep the Town Neat.

The streets of a town overgrown with weeds never makes a favorable impression on the stranger. Good sidewalks, well-kept streets in the residence and business portions of a place always speak well for the habits of its residents.

New in Natural History.

Perhaps all English children are well posted on life sizes. The following "howlers" are from essays exhibited at a recent show: "The young horses have long legs, so that it might keep up to its mother when she is feeding on the low and figs are after them to devour them." "The fowl," declares still another, "when alive is used for stocking fillers and when dead for beautiful feathers." "The pig eats its wool coat off in summer. Then we get the wool of it. The pig is reckoned as a bad creature."

MEDICAL FAILURES.

An Authority Says Three-Fourths of Graduates Are Unfitted to Practice.

That 3,000 out of the 4,000 graduates turned out by the Medical Colleges each year are wholly unfitted to practice medicine and are menaces to the communities in which they settle was the assertion made by Dr. Chester Mayer, of the State Board of Medical Examiners of Kentucky at a meeting of the American Medical Association's Committee on Medical Education, held in Chicago not long since. Mayer said that only 25 to 28 per cent of the graduates are qualified. Fifty-eight per cent of the graduates examined in 26 states were plucked. Nine-tenths of few exceptions these failures took a second examination in a few weeks and only 50 per cent of them passed.

"This condition," said the physician, "is largely due to the fact that the medical colleges have been wholly subservient to those few weeks," Dr. Mayer said. "It probably shows that existing methods of medical education most would probably be and they ceased after the examination." Dr. W. T. Gott, Secretary of the Indiana Board said: "The majority of our schools now teach their students to pass examinations, not how to be good physicians."

At the session of the American Medical Association held in Atlantic City in June, Dr. M. Clayton Thrash, a professor in the Medico Chirurgical College in Philadelphia said: "Many doctors turned out by the Medical Schools are so ignorant in matters pertaining to pharmacy that they know nothing about the properties of the drugs they prescribe for their patients!" Dr. Henry Beates, Jr., President of the Pennsylvania State Board of Medical Examiners, after scrutinizing the papers of a class of candidates for licensure said: "About one quarter of the papers show a degree of illiteracy that renders the candidates for licensure incapable of understanding conditions."

A great many more physicians and chemists might be quoted in support of the astounding charge that 3,000 incompetents are being dumped into an unsuspecting public each year. What the damage done amounts to can never be estimated for these incompetents enjoy the privilege of diagnosing, prescribing or dispensing drugs regarding the properties of which they know nothing and then of signing death certificates that are not passed upon by anyone unless the coroner is called in. Probably there is not a grave-yard from one end of the country to the other that does not contain the buried evidences of the mistakes or criminal carelessness of incompetent physicians.

During the last year there have been perhaps half a dozen known cases where surgeons, after performing operations have sewed up the incisions without first removing the gauze sponges used to absorb the blood, and in some cases forceps and even surgeon's scissors have been left in the wound. How many of these cases there have been where the patient died, there is no means of knowing and comparatively few of the cases where the discovery is made in time to save the patient are generally public. Reports from Sanitariums for the treatment of the Drug Habit show that members of the medical profession are more addicted to the use of opiates and cocaine than members of any other profession, and that a majority of the patients, excluding the physicians, contract the habit in their own practice, by a careless physician.

How many criminal operations are performed by physicians is also a matter of conjecture. Operations of this class are, unfortunately, very frequent in large cities. Some graduated and licensed physicians, many of them of supposed respectability, make an exclusive practice of criminal medical and surgical treatment. Dr. Henry G. W. Rheinhart, Coroner's physician of Chicago, estimates the number of criminal operations there annually, in Chicago alone at 35,000. How many resulted fatally are unknown, but when death results, the real cause is disguised in the death certificate which the physician signs, and which no one but himself and a clerk sees.

Probably not one case of malpractice in 1,000 ever becomes the subject of a law suit but in the last year approximately 150 cases wherein the plaintiff has alleged malpractice have been reported in the newspapers, and owing to the social prominence and wealth the favored positions of many physicians that more than half the new suits started, probably, result in any newspaper publicity, but it would probably not be an exaggeration to state that the total cases of malpractice, not involving criminal operations or criminal medical practice, would amount to 150,000 or more than one case to each physician in the country. This estimate is, of course, more or less conjecture. Untimely deaths and permanent disabilities are frequent, and occur within the knowledge of almost every one, when life could have been prolonged or health restored had the physician been skillful, careful and competent.

DAVID BRINGS UP THE ARK

STORY BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

Scripture Authority: 2 Samuel chapter 6

SERMONETTE.

In prosperity David forgot not God. There is forcible suggestion in the fact that the chapter which tells of David's exaltation is followed by one chapter telling of his sinning and Nathan's devotion to God. This is not the usual order. We are prone to forget God in times of prosperity and the pastels of religious fervor are encouraged and inspired by adversities.

Such blessing followed by many investments in the divine order. "We love him because he first loved us." We give to him because he first gave to us. We find the intention of his service in the fact that he sent his only begotten son to minister unto us.

Uzzah's death troubled David and caused him to fear God with a superstitious fear. The blessing upon the house of Obedom which followed his fear and his heart with a Godly fear. There is a vast difference in the two kinds of fear. One is grounded in ignorance and darkness, the other in love. The one repels, the other attracts. For perfect love casteth out fear.

God's hand of judgment fell upon Uzzah, while his hand of blessing rested upon the house of Obedom. Why the difference? Just this: One knew God, the other did not. One was sensitive to the Divine presence; the other was not. One had due reverence for holy things; the other was of that profane nature that dares violate the sanctity of holy things and disobey the plainly spoken commands of God.

David did not let any false ideas of his own dignity and importance as king come between him and his God, in bringing up the ark he laid aside his royal robes, his crown and sceptre, and attired in the garment which betokened complete consecration to God, he danced before the Lord. That was as it should be, for the heart which would truly worship God must come into his presence with that sincere humility which springs from of everything human and that genuine reverence which exalts and glorifies God and abases self. In truly such a spirit could prevail among the worshipers who assemble in the churches of the land what a different atmosphere would permeate the service. Neither by dress nor by pompous, forbidding dignity could the rich and the distinguished be told from the lowliest worshiper of the humble station. There would be a joyful abandon to the service which would make one forget everything but the worship of his glory and majesty and power.

THE STORY.

He started out with pomp and gone out of the royal city with great rejoicing followed by 30,000 of the chosen men of Israel to bring up the ark of the Lord. The evening of the shadows were gathering he had gloomily and silently returned, followed only by his body guard and his faithful friends and without the ark. That had been left at the place where the awful judgment had fallen upon Uzzah; king and people with a superstitious fear shunning it and refusing to bring it further.

The representative men whom David had summoned from the various tribes and who had come so gladly and in such full force, were returned home again disappointed and troubled in heart. And they had taken the word everywhere of the sudden death of Uzzah, how Uzzah had been suddenly stricken before the ark and the expedition abruptly ended.

Thus it was that as the king entered the royal city at night upon his return to Jerusalem not only he but the whole nation as well were troubled by the strange and untoward things which had come to pass. Reflectedly King David looked about him as he sought the seclusion of his private apartments. All of the splendor of the cedar palace which he had built seemed to have passed away and in place of the joy and satisfaction he had found in the new surroundings there was now only disappointment and anxious foreboding.

"Why is this thing come to pass?" he asked himself, dejectedly. "Did I not in my desire to bring up the ark? How beautiful is the station in this city and how fitting is it that the ark of the Lord should rest within the tabernacle which has been reared upon the rocky entrance leading to the giving of prizes for the sale of baking powder, flavoring extracts, etc. Numerous concerns are interested in this line of business. SERIAL STORY

A Novel by

THOMAS W. LAWSON

Author of

He appealed directly to John Wilson to make an effort to stop the growing tendency to use the people as pawns to enslave themselves and their children. He said some man of undoubted probity, standing, and wealth, some one whom the people trusted, must step to the front and show them these New York Bonds, whose only thought is to roll up wealth. And he told John Wilson he was the man, since of late most remarkable prosperity got by his father and grandfather, no one would accuse him of being a hypocrite, seeking notoriety, and his standing in the community was such so old and solid that it would have to listen to him. I remember how emphatically his father said: "I tell you, John, even the discussion of such a proposition as that scoundrel Reinhart makes is degrading to an American's honor." He said it didn't make the least difference if Reinhart corrected his millions by the score, and was director in 30 or 40 great institutions, and gave a fortune every year for charity to the church—that he was a blackleg just the same. And so is any man, he said, who dares to say such will take the control of a transportation company, which represents a certain amount of money invested and double or multiply it by five and ten, simply because he can compel people to pay exorbitant freight rates and so get profits on this fraudulently increased capital.

It was the decision arrived at by father and the Wilsons at this meeting, a decision to refuse in any circumstances to allow our southern people to be bled by the Wall street system, that started Reinhart and his dollar-fiends on the war-path. You can see from what I tell you of my father the terrible ordeal we have been in now. At night, when I get to thinking of him, hoping against hope, with no one to help him, no one with the power to do more than I am, even when I think of his nobleness in devoting his time to mother and by sheer will-power concealing from her his awful suffering, it nearly drives me mad."

"Miss Sands, why will you not let me lend you the money necessary to tide your father over for awhile?" I asked.

"You are so good," Mr. Randolph, "but you don't quite understand my father in spite of what I have said. His word and honor are his bonds. He is the expense of another, not if it were a hundred times more acute. You cannot understand the old-fashioned, high-toned pride of the Sands'."

"But can you not, at least temporarily disguise from him just how you have arranged the relief?"

"Mr. Randolph, I could not deceive father. I could not tell him a lie even to save his life. It would be impossible. My father never tells a lie; he believes a man or woman who would lie the lowest of the low things on earth. He would say: 'Tell me what you have done.' I can just see him now, standing between the big white pillars at the end of the driveway. I can hear him say in his calm, deliberate, slaughter, welcome. Your mother is waiting for you in her room. Do not use a moment getting to her.' After-ward he will say: 'Tell me what you have done,' and when I tell him, he will go to show me all the familiar things, and not one word will he allow me to say about our affairs until after I have told him. Then how Uzzah had been suddenly stricken before the ark and the expedition abruptly ended.

Thus it was that as the king entered the royal city at night upon his return to Jerusalem not only he but the whole nation as well were troubled by the strange and untoward things which had come to pass. Reflectedly King David looked about him as he sought the seclusion of his private apartments. All of the splendor of the cedar palace which he had built seemed to have passed away and in place of the joy and satisfaction he had found in the new surroundings there was now only disappointment and anxious foreboding.

"Why is this thing come to pass?" he asked himself, dejectedly. "Did I not in my desire to bring up the ark? How beautiful is the station in this city and how fitting is it that the ark of the Lord should rest within the tabernacle which has been reared upon the rocky entrance leading to the Kedron. How joyful was our going forth and how sad has been our return. It may be that the ark should come hither, for who is there that dare bring it. Uzzah but touched it and is dead, and I remember hearing my father tell of the awful things which befell the Philistines when they had the ark, and after that how the men of Bethshemesh were stricken with a grievous plague when they looked within the ark. And now this awful thing has fallen upon me at a time when we would bring up the ark and who is there dare approach unto it more or to bring it up over the difficult pathway of the city. And I bowed my head in his hands.

The king sat silently and dejectedly for into the silent, and when at last he spoke in tones of deep grief to find his troubled thoughts merging into the most distressing dreams, so that little rest or refreshing came to him. And the days which followed brought little relief, for the unexplained mystery does not contribute to one's peace of mind. Day after day, as it is said in high Eastern style, he came to his work, tired brain, he went over and over again the and incidents of Uzzah's death. He tried to find some purpose in the incident in bringing up the ark. He searched his heart for answer to the many questions which arose.

Such blessing followed by many investments in the divine order. "We love him because he first loved us." We give to him because he first gave to us. We find the intention of his service in the fact that he sent his only begotten son to minister unto us.

Uzzah's death troubled David and caused him to fear God with a superstitious fear. The blessing upon the house of Obedom which followed his fear and his heart with a Godly fear. There is a vast difference in the two kinds of fear. One is grounded in ignorance and darkness, the other in love. The one repels, the other attracts. For perfect love casteth out fear.

God's hand of judgment fell upon Uzzah, while his hand of blessing rested upon the house of Obedom. Why the difference? Just this: One knew God, the other did not. One was sensitive to the Divine presence; the other was not. One had due reverence for holy things; the other was of that profane nature that dares violate the sanctity of holy things and disobey the plainly spoken commands of God.

David did not let any false ideas of his own dignity and importance as king come between him and his God, in bringing up the ark he laid aside his royal robes, his crown and sceptre, and attired in the garment which betokened complete consecration to God, he danced before the Lord. That was as it should be, for the heart which would truly worship God must come into his presence with that sincere humility which springs from of everything human and that genuine reverence which exalts and glorifies God and abases self. In truly such a spirit could prevail among the worshipers who assemble in the churches of the land what a different atmosphere would permeate the service. Neither by dress nor by pompous, forbidding dignity could the rich and the distinguished be told from the lowliest worshiper of the humble station. There would be a joyful abandon to the service which would make one forget everything but the worship of his glory and majesty and power.

THE STORY.

He started out with pomp and gone out of the royal city with great rejoicing followed by 30,000 of the chosen men of Israel to bring up the ark of the Lord. The evening of the shadows were gathering he had gloomily and silently returned, followed only by his body guard and his faithful friends and without the ark. That had been left at the place where the awful judgment had fallen upon Uzzah; king and people with a superstitious fear shunning it and refusing to bring it further.

The representative men whom David had summoned from the various tribes and who had come so gladly and in such full force, were returned home again disappointed and troubled in heart. And they had taken the word everywhere of the sudden death of Uzzah, how Uzzah had been suddenly stricken before the ark and the expedition abruptly ended.

Thus it was that as the king entered the royal city at night upon his return to Jerusalem not only he but the whole nation as well were troubled by the strange and untoward things which had come to pass. Reflectedly King David looked about him as he sought the seclusion of his private apartments. All of the splendor of the cedar palace which he had built seemed to have passed away and in place of the joy and satisfaction he had found in the new surroundings there was now only disappointment and anxious foreboding.

"Why is this thing come to pass?" he asked himself, dejectedly. "Did I not in my desire to bring up the ark? How beautiful is the station in this city and how fitting is it that the ark of the Lord should rest within the tabernacle which has been reared upon the rocky entrance leading to the Kedron. How joyful was our going forth and how sad has been our return. It may be that the ark should come hither, for who is there that dare bring it. Uzzah but touched it and is dead, and I remember hearing my father tell of the awful things which befell the Philistines when they had the ark, and after that how the men of Bethshemesh were stricken with a grievous plague when they looked within the ark. And now this awful thing has fallen upon me at a time when we would bring up the ark and who is there dare approach unto it more or to bring it up over the difficult pathway of the city. And he bowed his

The Presbyterian Sunday School picnic, one of the most enjoyable occasions the Presbyterians have had for some time, occurred Friday, Sept 13 at the lake just north of town, where the annual Sunday School picnic has been held. The scholars met at the church at 9:30 where conveyances were provided. Everything was well planned, the committee did their work splendidly and the program very pretty only ended with Sunday school scholars, but with heaps piled with things that would make an epicurean's heart glad. The day was ideal for a picnic and the crowd was certainly all that could be desired. When the picnic grounds were reached the scholars immediately proceeded to enjoy themselves on the boats and swings until dinner, as we won't attempt to describe the dinner, we will simply state that there were about fifteen dishes of fried chicken and everything else in proportion. The leading feature of the afternoon sports was the ball game between the married and unmarried ladies. The sides lined up as follows:

Mrs Hulsha	Miss Bessie Gettle
Mrs Voeliers	Miss Pearl Voeliers
Mrs Cross	Miss Margaret Gettle
Mrs Miller	Miss Gladys Hollenbeck
Mrs Gettle	Miss Alma Hollenbeck
Mrs B Fellers	Miss Sina Hanna
Mrs Kovanda	Miss Nellie Fellers
Mrs O Fellers	Miss Fannie Phillips
Mrs A Fellers	Miss Margaret Sutton

The game was interesting from start to finish—the finish of the game and also the finish of the players. The single ladies out-classed their opponents in runs, but the, married ladies made more bases. Charlie Wood was selected to run for one of the married ladies, but was put out on first and left the field in disgrace. At the close of the last inning the game stood eight to two in favor of the unmarried ladies. It was then the game terminated as it did because the score keeper was a single man. After the game by the ladies the men and boys attempted to play but it was a tame affair and finally all from took to fishing. The picnic was pronounced a success not only did the children enjoy it, but those who had reached the age of eighty years were there and enjoyed it.

Wymore Water Rots Out Bridge

Wymore, Neb., Sept. 11.—One man, unaided, at the busiest hour of the day, on the chief street of the village of Malbey, five miles north of this city, pulled off one of the most audacious bank robberies in the history of the state. As a result of the robbery, the bank of Manley, owned by J. E. Donley of Weeping Water, is minus a sum estimated at from $1,250 to $2,500 and a hundred men are engaged in the chase of the robber. At a late hour tonight though still believed to be in hiding in a cornfield near Murdock, his capture has not been effected and it is feared he has effected his escape.

The solitary bandit acted with great deliberation planned his coup to a nicety before attempting its perpetration. At about 11:30 he rode up to the bank on horseback, dismounting leisurely, left his horse at the sidewalk and entered the bank without attracting any attention from pedestrians on the street. Although the bank had done a heavy business during the morning nobody was in at the time of the arrival of the robber except cashier Dieb, who was at the counter working on the books. The robber addressed the official civilly and started to enter the enclosure in which the cashier was at work.

Demands in a Letter

"I've a letter for you" he announced handing the missive to Mr. Dieb as he approached him.

The cashier, wholly unsuspicious of the intentions started to read the letter. "I want $2,000 in currency, I want it d—d quick. Don't say a word but hand her over. If you speak I'll blow your brains out. Don't say anything to anybody after I have gone for an hour. Don't give anybody my description for four hours," the letter said.

While the cashier was reading the letter, the robber covered him with his revolver. Mr. Dieb read the letter several times, keeping his composure as well as he could and trying in this some way suitor his predicament. He failed to find inspiration however, and finally told his caller that he didn't have the desired amount at hand. The bandit demanded all he had, and the cashier after another look down the muzzle of the revolver finally pulled open the money drawer and threw the currency it contained on the counter. The robber scooped the money into his pockets warned the cashier again not to give the alarm and left the bank as leisurely as he had entered it. Once on his horse again however, he left the village at top speed attracting considerable attention as he raced the animal down the street. He was not captured.

Jacob Hope, the head of Republic plans of peacemaking school, observed said the other day:

"There are worse things than a swearing parrot, and one was brought over on a German boat last month. His owner, a sailor, swore that this traveled bird knew no profanity, and a lady bought him.

"But she had to bring him to me. The parrot, though he didn't swear, had evidently spent most of his time on shipboard in the ladies' saloon, for what he would do was this:

"For hours at a time he would cackle and gasp and hiccough as if he'd never stop, and then he'd sing out feebly, 'Onward—buzzah!'"

Dear Friends,

The first night on board the car tone of the up air births were taken as I had about all room to put my traps. At Colorado City a young Swede and his wife were assigned the berth above mine, so conciderable noise was to be expected. But while at Salt Lake City neighbors got on the job, and Mr. Olyde of St. Joseph, Mo., and several other gentlemen of them a trained nurse. Those two to Los Angeles by way of San Francisco, so will be with me all the way through. Mrs. Hyde got the fixers the girls gave me in her private car water, so they are keeping nicely and give pleasure to many. I am now on the Colorado Midland and viewing new scenery. Possibly it is not so grand as the Royal Gorge, but there could not be more varied and picturesque scenery anywhere. We last passed Castle Rock and there are such [illegible] and rocks of every shape and size all along the way, some at once as beautifully colored as those in Yellowstone Park.

We were delayed about an hour this morning by a car off the track ahead of us so are looking time and unless they can make it up, we may miss connections at Ogden. We are now in Price Canyon and the road is so winding and was so yesterday that you can see the track and engine ahead of us and view the scenery from both directions. But with a clear sky the train is going so as to get this to you in time for next week's paper. The conductor here is taking going west from Ogden wait for this, so if we should be behind time at Sacramento and he said not, they would know the reason. Helper is one of the prettiest little towns I've seen and they stopped twenty minutes for breakfast. Many passengers bought milk, coffee and other things. Have not heard yet of any difficulty in getting necessary provisions and I have everything I need except hot coffee until I get through. Yesterday was so warm that ice water was the most welcome drink, and last night was cold for a mountain country. We should be in Salt Lake about 1 p m but it will be four instead.—E E Linn

The many friends of Mrs. Elizabeth C Fellers were startled on Monday by the intelligence that she had died suddenly at 7 o'clock Sunday evening at the home of her son, Charles Wheaton, at Potlatch, Idaho. The information was conveyed in a telegram to her son-in-law, Ira Thomas, Mrs. Fellers with Table Rock some weeks ago, and visited her son Wheaton at Alliance, about a month she left Alliance to go to Charles at Potlatch; her health has not been good for sometime, but she seemed to improve while at Alliance and the improvement kept up when she first went to Potlatch, but a few days before her death she grew worse, fell into a stupor with only occasional lapses of consciousness until her death. It is expected that Charley and his wife will arrive here with the body tomorrow morning and the funeral will then be held in the afternoon at the Presbyterian church. Mrs. Fellers was twice married, being united to Ralph Wheaton April 29, 1860, three children from this marriage surviving her; in 1890 she was married to Andrew Fellers since whose death she has been a widow. She had a wide circle of friends, and was for many years a leading spirit in all good work, and will be greatly missed in church and other circles.

Mr. Barnes fell under the buggy and only almost by superhuman efforts, was he able to keep his head above water, as it was, he had two ribs fractured and was otherwise bruised, his brother was plan hurt, but not so badly as Mr Barnes. Since his return home he has been under the doctors care and has improved some.

This is the first campaign in Nebraska in which political bosses cut no figure. The people will nominate the candidates and afterwards elect them. You are one of the people and should take an active interest in these primaries and elections hereafter. Politics from now on means a square deal for the masses; lower passenger rates, lower freight rates, less extortion by trusts and combinations. These things can only be accomplished by every honest voter making it a part of his business. The people can only know what is really going on by reading the newspapers. But you ought to read a newspaper that can print the truth about all the candidates; a paper that has no self-interest in politics; whose owners are not office holders nor office seekers. The publishers think the STATE JOURNAL is such a paper and in order to prove it to you, make the special offer of only 50c from now until after election; 75c if you want the Sunday also. The earlier you send in your order the more you get for your money. Lincoln is the best market.

CHILDREN OFF THE STAGE.

Labor Commissioner Ryder Serves Notice on Theater Managers.

No more children will be permitted to perform on the stage in Nebraska, John T. Ryder, deputy commissioner of labor, who under the law is empowered to enforce the child labor law, notified managers of Lincoln theaters that hereafter any stunts with children in them would have to be cut from the bill. He is advising that the managers of other theaters take notice, for he intends to enforce the law in the future. All this came about by reason of Mr. Ryder's visit to a Lincoln play house, where he witnessed a skit in which a little child, probably 4 years old was one of the bits.

GIRL TOO MUCH FOR ROBBER.

Fremont Young Woman Puts Would-Be Thief to Flight.

Miss Maud Johnson, a young woman employed as a domestic at the home of Mr. H. S. Hodgen, Fremont, proved too much for a would-be burglar, and saved the family silverware by putting up a fight with a butcher knife which put the fellow to flight in short order.

Miss Johnson was alone in the house at the time she discovered the robber, but the fact was to an advantage to the latter. The thief, a young man, obtained entrance to the house by representing himself as an employe of the gas company who had come to read the gas meter. Miss Johnson showed him the way to the cellar and went about her duties, supposing he was what he represented himself to be. A few moments later, however, she came on him in the dining room with several pieces of silver in his hands. She at once grabbed a big butcher knife from the table, and ordered him to drop the silver, and then drove him out of the house.

After the departure of the visitor Miss Johnson turned the butcher knife on the potatoes for dinner, doing great execution.

He will fill out a term of two months intervening between the expiration of his appointive tenure and the time for him to begin serving regularly.

Is Nearly Electrocuted.

George Joiner, an employe of the Morton printing company, Nebraska City, came near being electrocuted. He found a loose telephone wire laying in the alley back of the office and picked it up and it was alive being crossed with one of the high voltage wires from the electric light station. He fell screaming to the earth and none dared approach him because a light rain was falling and contact with it very dangerous. People stood around and saw the flesh burning from his hands. He would have been killed but for the fact that Manager Kaspar, of the electric lighting plant heard the screams and telephoned the power house and the current was cut off. The young man will recover, known as the K. W. ranch. The deal was made through J. W. Payne. Some time ago it was reported that the Burlington intended to build a new house near North Platte, but this land is now in litigation. It is pretty generally believed, however, that on the land just purchased the Burlington will build a station and start a town.

The Lincoln Development company, which recently filed articles of incorporation, with Ed Signoll at the head, has purchased 7,000 acres of land east of North Platte, known as the K. W. ranch. The deal was made through J. W. Payne. Some time ago it was reported that the Burlington intended to build a new house near North Platte, but this land is now in litigation. It is pretty generally believed, however, that on the land just purchased the Burlington will build a station and start a town.

MAKES NEW MARK

TIME RECORD BROKEN BY LUSITANIA ACROSS ATLANTIC.

A TRIFLE OVER FIVE DAYS

Deutschland Still Ahead in Speed Performance—Fraction of a Knot to Her Credit Over the New Ocean Greyhound.

A few days ago there was a celebration of the hundredth anniversary of that proud occasion when Robert Fulton's 90-foot steamer Clermont went puffing up the Hudson river at five miles an hour. Friday New Yorkers turned out to welcome a steam craft, the passengers of which breakfasted in Queenstown, Ireland, Sunday, and lunched in New York on the 13th. Both experiments, equally successful, were epoch-making in the way of propulsive power, the Clermont with her side paddles and the new Cunarder with the quadruple turbines.

The voyage of the Lusitania, so happily completed, was most important in that it was a test of the most modern propulsive power. This is the view taken by her owners, who are satisfied that the practicability of the turbine for fast ships has been demonstrated and that this new departure in English shipbuilding has been justified.

The fact that the Lusitania was able to cross the Atlantic in five days and fifty-four minutes and was able on her maiden trip nearly to equal the best trans-Atlantic record is held to be of secondary importance. Officials of the line said that the Lusitania had done all that was expected of her without her having been pushed to make a record, and they were confident that she would be able when called upon to add to her achievements the fastest voyage across the Atlantic.

Heretofore, it was pointed out, ships have been constructed for moderate speed, but on he Lusitania and her sister ship, Mauretania, built with the greatest government subsidy ever paid, was staked the British hope that turbine-driven vessels would prove not only the most complete, but the swiftest liners afloat.

Ernest Cunard, director of the line, who was a passenger on the Lusitania, said:

"I came over to watch the working of the ship in order to see if we could improve the Mauretania, now nearing completion. I find that I shall have no suggestions to make."

From the time that the Lusitania sailed from Queenstown at noon Sunday until she came through the new Ambrose channel and reached her new pier at the foot of West Thirteenth street, North river, at noon Friday, the steamer behaved excellently.

TO ENUMERATE CRIPPLES.

Senator Burkett Takes Up the Question With Census Director.

Senator Burkett has been having some correspondence with the director of census with reference to an enumeration of crippled and deformed children. As a result of the correspondence the director of census has advised him that he will bring the subject to the attention of the census committee of congress at the next session. It is believed by the friends of this movement that there should be an enumeration of the various state of crippled and deformed children so that the various state legislatures might be reliably and fully informed as to the importance of the matter. Nebraska is only one of the three states that so far have taken up the matter of establishing an institution where crippled children may be treated scientifically. While it is not the intention of those moving in this matter that the federal government shall undertake to build any hospitals, nevertheless it is thought that the federal government can will afford to make the enumeration to show the importance of it to the various state legislatures.

WAR DECLARED ON ORIENTALS

Vancouver, B. C., Citizens and Japanese and Chinese Clash.

There is renewed apprehension of further anti-asiatic rioting at Vancouver, B. C., following the attack on the Japanese and Chinese quarters by a mob of whites and Hindoos who crowded the local fire stops to buy firearms and ammunition. They declare they will defend their lives and property, in case the original quarrel is again attacked, it is feared that there will be bloodshed, for the Japanese and Chinese are thoroughly aroused and are convinced that the police are powerless to protect them. The police notified the gun stores to cease selling firearms to anyone till such time as the possibility of further outbreaks had passed. Before the order had been issued, several hundred of Chinese and Japanese had armed themselves.

Two hundred special policemen have been sworn in and there is talk of calling out the militia. There is little doubt that this will be done in case the rioting is renewed. Feeling all over the city runs high, and another attack is likely to come at any time. So far there have been no fatalities, although several injured in Saturday night's riot are in a serious condition.

WEALTHY GIRL WEDS GREEK.

Miss Evelyna Palmer Becomes Bride of Sikelianos, the Poet.

Miss Evelyna Palmer, daughter of Mrs. Robert Abbe, of New York, was married at Bar Harbor, Me., to Angelo Sikelianos, a Greek, who has won recognition in this country for his poems and lectures on Greek writings.

The marriage is causing interest, not only because of the union of the young American girl to the Greek poet, but because of the social prominence of the bride's family and her own unconventional ideas in the matter of dress.

Possessed of an independent fortune, from her own right, Miss Palmer has traveled much. On the last voyage, she returned from Europe August 31 abroad the Lorraine and was the most observed person in the crowded first class cabin because her attire was that of a maid of the time when Greece was the home of art and literature. Clad in a loose robe of Tyrian purple, fastened fast above the hips with a golden girdle, and sandaled with turbine-driven rebuilt would prove not only the most complete, but the swiftest liners afloat.

ROADS RAISE RATE

COST OF LUMBER DOUBLED FROM POINT OF SHIPMENT.

FREIGHT CHARES TOO HIGH

A Spokane, Wash., September 10, dispatch says: Investigations by a commission of the bureau of corporations of the United States department of commerce have disclosed the fact that too excessive freight rates from Puget Sound and the Spokane country to points in the middle western, eastern and southern states is directly traceable to the present high price of lumber, also that the freight charges by railroads greatly exceed the first cost of the lumber. The commission is acting under instructions of a resolution adopted by the last congress, and the results of the investigations in the west and northwest are surprising. The Hill and Harriman lines, whose set earnings last year nearly equalled their operating expenses have, it is shown, practically throttled the people, compelling them to pay exorbitant prices for building material and totally ignoring all appeals for fair rates. The lumberman for even a slight reduction in freight rates in the interest of stimulating trade. These appeals have been frequent and have invariably been turned down, and in addition to refusing to the business of the people, these roads have announced another increase in rates of ten cents a 100 pounds, effective October 1, which will add $2.20 per 1,000 feet to the cost of lumber in all the territory east of the Rocky mountains, excepting Nebraska and Kansas where the additional rate and consequent increase in cost of lumber will be about 5 per cent. This latest grip on the pocketbooks of the public is based on the assertion that the haul of empty cars is proving expensive to the railroads.

Under the new rates the additional cost of construction of an ordinary house in the eastern, middle western and northwestern states will be $66. Senator Heyburn, of Idaho, chairman of the republican national committee, and Senator Borah, of Idaho, have been retained by the Inland Empire Lumbermen's association to represent the lumber interests before the commission.

ROADS WILL IGNORE ORDER

Paying No Attention to 2-Cent Fare Demand in Kansas.

At a conference held in Chicago the Kansas railroads decided to ignore the railroad commission of that state and refused to obey the order requiring a 2-cent passenger rate. The railroads were represented by their general counsels and their executive officers in charge of the traffic. The decision is accredited to the absolute unfairness of the situation brought about by the action of the commission which required 2-cent fares beginning October 5. The railroads insist that the action is of the commission and not of the people. They declared that they had appealed to the sense of justice of the commission without avail and that if a 2-cent rate is to come to Kansas it must come by the return of the law.

Governor Hoch stated, on being informed of the action of the railroads in Chicago in deciding to ignore the Kansas 2-cent rate, that the governor would go to the limit of his executive power to enforce the order. He would not say flatly whether or not he would call a special session of the legislature.

BANDIT ROBS BANK.

Lone Highwayman Gets $2,000 in Cash and Escapes.

One man, mounted on the busiest hour of the day, on the chief street of the village of Manley, five miles north of Weeping Water, Neb., pulled off one of the most audacious bank robberies in the history of the state. As a result of the robbery of the bank, owned by J. A. Donelan of Weeping Water, a stock company estimated at from $1,200 to $2,500, and a hundred men are engaged in the chase of the robber.

The solitary bandit acted with great deliberation, having apparently planned his coup to a nicety before attempting its perpetration. At about 11:30 he rode up to the bank on horseback, dismounted leisurely, left his horse at the sidewalk and entered the bank without attracting any attention from pedestrians on the streets. Although the bank had done a heavy business during the morning, nobody was in it at the time of the arrival of the robber, except Cashier Bligh, who was at the vault working on the books. The robber addressed the official civilly and started to enter the enclosure in which the cashier was at work.

"I've a letter for you," he announced, handing the missive to Mr. Bligh as he approached him.

The cashier, thoroughly suspicious of the intentions, started to read the letter. "I want $3,000 in currency," the letter said. "I want it d——d quick. Do you want a word but hand her over. If you attempt to slip me a trick on me. Don't say anything to anybody after I have gone for an hour. Don't give anybody my description for four hours."

While the cashier was reading the letter, the robber covered him with his revolver. Mr. Bligh read the missive several times, keeping his composure as well as he could and carrying to think some way out of his predicament. He failed to find inspiration, however, and finally told his caller that he didn't have the desired amount at hand. The bandit demanded all he had, and the cashier, after another look down the muzzle of the revolver, finally pulled open the money drawer and threw the currency it contained on the counter. The robber scooped the money into his pockets, turned the cashier again, not to give the alarm, and left the bank as leisurely as he had entered it. Once his horse again, however, he left the village at a breakneck pace, considerable attention as he raced the animal down the street.

Cashier Bligh gave the alarm and a posse started in pursuit. The robber abandoned his horse at a farm near Murdock, in Cass county, and took to the corn fields. The posse is a large one and it is believed the bandit will be captured in the cornfield in which the posse had him cornered.

MEN OF THE LINE

RAILROAD EMPLOYES AND THEIR OCCUPATION.

Great Opportunities Always Open to the Ambitious and Hard-Working—Companies Keep in Touch with Their Helpers.

Though offering small wages with hard and risky work, to the beginner in "railroading," which means assistant-freight brakeman, the great railroads have been able to build up a splendid esprit de corps in their hundreds of thousands of employes.

The civil service system of promotion was known and practiced by railroads long before the government or municipality took it up. Though the man of preponderating ability will "jump," the man of average ability is reasonably certain of slow but steady progress up the ladder.

Inasmuch as the Pennsylvania system alone has 110,000 employes, who with their families would populate two cities the size of St. Louis, it is easy to conceive what a great proportion railroad men are to the country's population. Accordingly, the futility of such a short space demands that a succeeding article be given over to the great work in the service of the lines in the west and northwest are surprising. The Hill and Harriman lines, whose set earnings last year nearly equalled their operating expenses have, it is shown, practically throttled the people, compelling them to pay exorbitant prices for building material and totally ignoring all appeals for fair rates. The lumberman for even a slight reduction in freight rates in the interest of stimulating trade. STRAIN ON THE RAILS.

They Undergo Much Severer Tension Than Bridge Steel.

Saving armor plates and projectiles, "there is no material in the whole field of steel manufacture which is subject to such severe, such absolutely brutal treatment as the steel rail," says Dexter Marshall in McClure's. It must endure every imaginable kind of stress. It is alternately bent, twisted and hammered; it must be hard enough to resist crushing and abrasion; it must be tough enough to resist fracture. It must undergo much severer tension than bridge steel; in fact, the rails of a line form practically one continuous bridge from terminal to terminal, and each rail must bear the terrific strain of direct contact with the wheels of locomotives and cars; yet, said a prominent railroad manager, "the rails are made with much less attention to quality than the different parts of a bridge. Bridge steel is made with all possible care, and the unfortunate failures of the railroads offering bridge contracts being carried out to the letter by the bridge steel manufacturers, who use only the best material."

In making steel rails by the Bessemer process, the iron is first recovered from the ore by smelting; second, all the sulphur and much of the other impurities as possible are blown out by streams of air in a converter; third, the percentage of carbon desired is introduced into the "blown" metal, fourth the heated metal, now Bessemer steel is cast into an ingot.

Second of all, the ingot is rolled down into the finished steel rail. It is possible by the Bessemer process to control perfectly the carbon in the original hardening element in the rail—but not the phosphorus, which makes the rails brittle, cannot be removed by this process, whatever percentage of phosphorus exists in the ore will persist in the rail. An ideal rail should contain .65 hundredths of one per cent. of carbon, not more than .08 hundredths of one per cent. of phosphorus, and 1.1 to 1.3 per cent. of manganese.

Rails of such composition wear marvelously well, and are known to last a dozen years under the most exacting traffic. According to the Scientific American the standard of rail specifications adopted by the manufacturers themselves and now in use by them is as follows: Carbon, half of one per cent.; phosphorous, not to exceed one-tenth per cent.; manganese, eight-tenths to one and one-tenth per cent. It will be seen that there is a 60 per cent. increase in phosphorous rails of to-day as compared with the ideal rail mentioned above. It is rails containing this excess of phosphorous that have been breaking so frequently.

Railroad President Shuts Up.

Frederick Douglass Underwood, president of the Erie railroad, is very popular with the rank and file of employes. Nearly all of them refer to him as "F. D.," and but few of them know him personally. Mr. Underwood, always interested not only in the big problems but the little ones that confront the Erie, was a witness recently which had slipped an eccentric or otherwise became temporarily disabled. He went forward to the engine to discover the cause of the stop. He found the engineer lying on his back under the locomotive, doing his best to repair the damage as quickly as possible.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"Nothin' much; you'll be movin' in a few minutes," said the man under the engine.

"But what has broken and how are you fixing it? I want to know," said the Erie president.

"Oh, you do, do you?" growled the engineer, struggling with a monkey wrench and a refractory nut. "Then I'll tell you that you'll go on wanting, because I'm paid to move the public as quickly and as safely as I can, but I don't know how, and not to stand around and answer d—n fool questions."

Aids Train Caller.

HERITAGE OF CIVIL WAR.

Thousands of Soldiers Contracted Chronic Kidney Trouble While in the Service.

The experience of Capt. John L. Ely, of Co. E, 17th Ohio, now living at 500 East Second street, Newton, Kansas, will interest the thousands of veterans who came back from the Civil War suffering tortures with kidney complaint. Capt. Ely says: "I contracted kidney trouble during the Civil War, and the occasional attacks finally developed into a chronic case. At one time I had to use a crutch and cane to get about. My back was lame and weak, and besides the aching, there was a distressing retention of the kidney secretions. I was in a bad way, but began using Doan's Kidney Pills in 1901; but the remedy cured me, and I have been well ever since."

"GONE TO THE DEVIL."

London Inn Responsible for Origin of Common Saying.

The old inns of England have been responsible for the origin of many common sayings. An instance of this is the proverbial phrase "He has gone to the devil." Just out of old London, near Temple Bar, was once a tavern which was known by the strictest old-fashioned name, "The Devil and Saint Dunstan." It was famous for its good dinners and excellent wines, and received a large patronage from the lawyers of Temple Bar.

It was familiarly known as "The Devil," and when a lawyer left his office to go there he usually left a notice on his door, "Gone to the Devil!" There were some who patronized the tavern to the neglect of their business, and the notice was so regularly exhibited on their doors that it finally came to be used to characterize the man who was losing his grip and going to destruction.—The Sunday Magazine.

The Peaceful Joy of the River.

An ingenious Spaniard says that "rivers and the inhabitants of the watery element were made for each other to contemplate and fools to pass by without consideration." And though I will not rank myself in the number of philosophers, I have been so fortunate myself from the last, by offering to you a short contemplation, first of rivers, and then of fish; concerning which I doubt not to give you many observations that will appear very considerable; I am sure they have appeared so to me, and made many an hour pass away with pleasantry, as I have been divided on a flowery bank by a calm river.—Isaac Walton.

He Set a Date.

A merchant in a Wisconsin town who had a Swedish clerk sent him out to do some collecting. When he returned from an unsuccessful trip he reported:

"Yim Yonson say he vill pay ven he sells his hogs. Yim Olesen, he vill pay ven he sell him wheat, and Bill Pack he vill pay ven he sell his corn."

"Well," said the boss, "that's the first time Bill ever set a date to pay. Did he really say he would pay 'in January?'"

"Vell, aye tank so," said the clerk. "He say dat it ban a dam cold day ven you ket that money. I tank that ban in January."—Harper's Weekly.

Her Sad Break.

"Yer kindness, ma'am, he said, "should be a sufficient excuse for yer ignorance; but ye oughter know I don't wear no sack coat with this here silk hat."

Her Idea of a Wooden Leg.

Hewitt—Is your wife a woman of practical ideas?

Jewett—Why, I could imagine that if I lost a leg she would think that the vacancy could be filled by taking one of the legs out of a pine table that was no longer used.—Judge.

FOUND OUT.

A Trained Nurse Made Discovery.

No one is in better position to know the value of food and drink than a trained nurse.

Speaking of coffee, a nurse of Wilkesbarre, Pa., writes: "I used to drink strong coffee myself, and suffered greatly from headaches and indigestion. When on a visit to my brothers I had a good chance to try Postum Food Coffee, for they drank it altogether in place of ordinary coffee. In two weeks after using Postum I found I was much benefited and finally my headaches disappeared and also the indigestion.

"Naturally I have since used Postum among my patients, and have noted a marked benefit where coffee has been left off and Postum used.

"I observed a curious fact about Postum when used among mothers: they greatly helps the flow of milk in cases where coffee is inclined to dry it up, and where tea causes wrongness.

"I find trouble in drinking Postum to make Postum properly. Directions to most always serve it boiled long enough (15 to 20 minutes) and served with plenty of cream."

"There's a reason."

WHY HE WANTED LAW.

Man Had to Be Forced Into Paths of Righteousness.

Congressman James E. Watson of the Sixth Indiana district told a story while in town recently, anent the operation of the pure food law, and intended to illustrate his expressed theory that more people would be good if they had to be.

"It was while we were wrestling with the pure food bill at Washington," he said, "that I got a letter from home, written by a man from whom I bought a big quantity of maple sirup each year. He urged me to fight for the pure food bill. Now, I couldn't help remembering, to save my life, that this man bought five barrels of brown sugar at the opening of the maple molasses season. So I wrote him a note suggesting that advocacy of a pure food measure seemed odd from a man who bought five barrels of brown sugar before beginning the manufacture of his pure maple sirup.

"Never fessed him. He turned my letter over and wrote on the back: 'I know it, but I want the law to make me do right.'"—Indianapolis News.

THREE BOYS HAD ECZEMA.

Were Treated at Dispensary—Did Not Improve—Suffered Five Months —Perfect Cure by Cuticura.

"My three children had eczema for five months. A little sore would appear on the head and seemed very itchy, increasing day after day. The baby had had it about a week when the second boy took the disease and a few sores developed, then the third boy took it. For the first three months I took them to the N—— Dispensary, but they did not seem to improve. Then I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and in a few weeks they had improved, and when their heads were well you could see nothing of the sores. Mrs. Kate Kelly, 913 West 29th St., New York, N. Y., Nov. 1, 5 and 7, 1906."

No Grace.

Four-year-old Anna was invited to take luncheon with the family of one of her little friends. Before they began, the head of the house asked a blessing upon the food, during which time Anna chattered constantly. Not wishing to reprove the child, her hostess said, "I suppose you don't have grace at your house."

"Oh, no," the little girl replied, "we have Bessie."—Harper's Magazine.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

OFFICIAL CANVAS MADE OF THE DIRECT PRIMARY RETURNS.

ALBERT LOSES NOMINATION

The official canvas complete with the exception of signing the record was finished that George L. Loomis is nominated for supreme judge by both the democratic and populist parties, providing an error of 386 votes in the race of Lincoln county is corrected by the board. If this error is made it will save I. L. Albert of Columbus, the populist candidate the embarrassment of a withdrawal from the populist ticket to give way for Mr. Loomis. Both men were on both the democratic and populist tickets and the first reports indicated that each was nominated by the respective parties. The state canvassing board has no official knowledge of the error in the abstract from Lincoln county, and cannot make the correction without some authority.

On the face of the returns the mistake in Lincoln county was apparent. It was discovered when the state board was canvassing the vote being closed doors.

The official count gives Loomis 2,158 populist votes and Albert 2,577 populist votes. The returns from Lincoln county gives Albert 400 populist votes and Loomis 10 populist votes. Although the number 400 for Albert was given in both words and figures it was apparent from the total vote cast in the county and the vote given other candidates that an error had been made. Chairman Kelley of North Platte was called up by phone and in reply said he would examine his office record of the county canvass. He found it showed 4 populist votes instead of 400 for Albert in that county. Deducting the difference, 396 from the total vote received by Albert or the other twelve him seven short of 2,158 received by Loomis, thus making the latter the nominee of both the democratic and populist parties.

The Lincoln county abstract on file in the office of Secretary of State Junkin shows that the total vote cast in the county was 4,124; Albert, democrat, received 561; Loomis, democrat, 37; Meier, 13; Albert, populist, 400; Loomis, populist, 10; Meier, populist, 3; Reese, republican, 693; Sedgwick, republican, 30; Graves, prohibition, 71; Stebbins, socialist, 24. The county has a total of 1,530, while the official total vote reported is only 1,124, showing that Albert's populist vote ought to have been 4 instead of 400.

The Official Count.

No change of any importance was made by the official canvass in the case of any other candidates. Clarke still leads Caldwell for railway commissioner by 238. The following are the totals that have been verified by Secretary of State Junkin:

Falls From Top of Car.

On a freight train pulling into Falls City was the crew of Robert Malone, of Lincoln, a railroad contractor. Among them was John Stumpers, aged 23 years of age, who took turns of sleeping on the running board on top of a box car. As the train was coming to a stop it jerked and to roll him off. His head struck rails and he was rendered unconscious. He died the following hours from his injuries.

NEBRASKAN TO CONGRESS.

S. L. Fulton Elected to National Body From Oklahoma.

Nebraska furnished one of Oklahoma's new congressmen, S. L. Fulton who has just been elected, was a student in the university of Nebraska about twenty years ago, hailing from Pawnee county. He left his studies to go on the comic opera stage, his first matrimony landing in the Lilian Russel company where he remained four years. Later he returned to Pawnee, and for a short time was in charge of the music as his principal recreation. He conducted little operas in the southern part of the State and even wrote an opera that received some praise. Three or four years ago he removed to Oklahoma. Mr. Fulton became a silver republican in 1896, and was at one time a candidate for lieutenant governor. Like many of the silver republicans he graduated into the democratic party and now goes to congress as a democrat. He is a brother of Senator Fulton of Oregon, who also came from this state.

Forest Reserve Appointment.

State Superintendent McBrien has just made his first apportionment under the forest reserve fund. The apportionment is made on the acreage in the reserves, .001847 cents being accredited to each acre. The total acreage in the Nebraska reserves is 338,240.96 acres and there was divided $790.87, and the amount to each is decided as follows: Blaine, $8.83; Thomas, $103.29; McPherson, $282.39; Grant, $200.72, and Cherry, $165.44. The fifth of the money is divided equally between the school districts, one-fifth to the public road fund and three-fifths is divided according to the enumeration of school children. The forest reserves in Nebraska are divided as follows: Dismal River reserve, Blaine county, 5,873.76 acres; Thomas county, 77,031.06 acres; total $2,394.36 acres. North Platte reserve, McPherson county, 232,802.73 acres; Grant county, 149,668.85 acres; total, 382,471.58 acres. Niobrara reserve, Cherry county, 133,297.10 acres.

New Cream Rates.

An order effective after November 1, changing the rates on cream and milk has been issued by the state railway commission. The new rates are practically the same now charged by the Burlington road, but the rates are abolished and distance rates established. This increases the rates to Lincoln and Omaha, but it is understood that the increase is not sufficient to prevent the central creameries from continuing to ship from long distances. For the present, the cheaper rate is given and this may institute co-operative creameries to ship from points heretofore not reached on account of high freight rates.

Run Down By a Thresher.

T. Y. Smith, one of the prominent farmers and stockmen of the county, met with a fatal accident. Mr. Smith and son Frank started to move their threshing outfit from one job to another; in going down a steep hill the pin holding the tongue connecting the separator to the engine dropped out allowing the separator to run up onto the engine. The driving man called to his father notifying him of the danger and then jumped from the engine. The elder Smith, instead of jumping also, tried to swerve the engine from the front of the separator and was caught between the two heavy machines when the crash came.

Judge Reese's Appointment.

Judge Reese returned last week to Lincoln and learned of his appointment as supreme court commissioner to succeed N. D. Hasbrouck, resigned. He has not yet filed his acceptance and in some quarters doubts were expressed about his taking the position. He said he had given considerable matter, that he had a great deal of private business to look after and was too busy to give it proper consideration; that is said it will be difficult for him to dispose of his business in time to take up the work of a court commissioner by October 1, the date of the resignation of Mr. Jackson is to take effect.

Inspection of Oil.

Attorney General Thompson has given State Oil Inspector A. B. Allen an opinion that he must inspect every particle of oil used in the state. A refiner living near the Kansas line, wrote to Mr. Allen asking if he could use oil shipped to him from across the border without inspection. It was cheaper than Nebraska oil. The attorney general said that the Kansas product could not be used in Nebraska without inspection.

Preparing for Terminal Assessment.

George Bennett, secretary of the state board of assessment, is working on the forms to be sent out to county assessors who are to assess the terminal property of railroads in cities and villages. This form will be the first of the kind ever made up in the state and as much depends upon the form, Mr. Bennett is taking considerable pains with the work.

STATE TO BE DRY

OKLAHOMA DECLARES IN FAVOR OF PROHIBITION.

CONSTITUTION IS ADOPTED

Thought to Have Been Given a Great Majority—Haskell, Democrat, for Governor, Believed to Be In the Lead.

An Oklahoma City, Okla., September 18 dispatch, says: Oklahoma's constitution has been adopted by a majority all the way from 50,000 to 70,000. State-wide prohibition has carried and C. N. Haskell, democrat, has been elected governor of the new state, according to the limited reports received up to 1:30 o'clock this (Wednesday) morning. In every voting precinct there were three ballots for the voter to mark. In Oklahoma City there were four, and the counting process has been extremely slow.

The telegraphers' strike and the lack of telephone facilities has prevented the forwarding of returns to either of the political state headquarters here. The ratification of the constitution is conceded, although the majority was not as large as was expected.

The new state elected five congressmen. In the First and Second districts the republicans expected to elect ex-Delegate to Congress B. S. McGuire and ex-Territorial Governor T. B. Ferguson, respectively. The Third, Fourth and Fifth districts had been conceded to the democrats, whose candidates in the respective districts were James Davenport, C. D. Carter and Scott Ferris.

The convention that framed the state constitution was heavily democratic and the constitution as completed was obnoxious to the republicans. Because of the strong desire for statehood, however, the republican party did not attempt to defeat the constitution. The new state must await the constitution's endorsement by President Roosevelt, who will either confirm or reject it upon his judgment as to whether or not is conforms to the enabling act of congress and the constitution of the United States.

ABARREN MEETING

PEACE CONFERENCE AT HAGUE ALMOST A FAILURE.

LITTLE BENEFIT TO WORLD

Small Headway Toward Permanent Arbitration—United States Signed For Coming Unprepared to Push Reforms Wanted.

A dispatch from The Hague dated September 23, says: After having been in session over three months and with adjourment probably a month in the distance, it is recognized generally, and even by the most optimistic in the peace movement, that the second International peace conference has been and will be at its conclusion barren of results leading to permanent measures of benefit to the peace world. Even the propelling force of future meeting of the conference, which was unanimously adopted on Saturday, has been so altered as to suppress its most important part, namely, the periodicity of the meetings, providing for the call of a trade conference, but establishing nothing with regard to convening of the future conference. The prevailing opinion, as expressed by one of the leading delegates, is that the absence of results in the conference on the great questions was due to the lack of preparation by all the countries represented. This, he said, was especially striking in the case of the American delegation, which was supposed to have come here in complete accord with the Latin-American countries.

This accord, however, neither existed, nor had it been reached during the conference. Indeed, what is to be decided, it is declared, is that the chief result will be a growing feeling of indifference on the part of the South Americans toward Washington, as, rightly or wrongly, they accuse the United States of having neglected them and of caring only to be worth-while in accord with Great Britain and Germany, thinking that union with these great powers would be sufficient to carry out any project, while the facts proved to be the contrary. As in the case of the permanent court of arbitration, which was a victory for Brazil over the compact formed between America, Great Britain and Germany.

It is generally remarked that the United States should have come to the conference, with a definite object of having the support of all.

THINK IT A MURDER.

Box Car Burned and Man's Remains in Ashes.

A man who gave his name as Frank Collins and told conflicting stories, is believed by the Grand Island, Neb., police to be Frank Brady. He was arrested on suspicion and treated for burns on his hands. The night previous a freight car on the Burlington loaded with oil was found to be afire. After the fire a man was seen running into the ravine from his hut, and badly burned. Later the remains of another man were found in the ashes of the car, only the trunk and some of the other bones being left. It is believed the man was murdered and the car set afire to hide the crime. Brady, or Collins, first told the physician on whom he called at Grand Island that he was burned at the local shops. Questioned further he could not give the name of his foreman.

No accident occurred anywhere, the wounds not being dressed by any Physician McGrath, but the man would answer no questions further than to say that there was just a little accident. He would be held. The sheriff of Buffalo county is now investigating the matter.

DYNAMITERS AT JOPLIN, MO.

Mining Plant Blown Up, With a Loss of Many Dollars.

A special from Joplin, Mo., says: The mining plant of the Tennessee company, East Joplin, was blown up by dynamite, the loss being estimated at several thousand dollars. One charge was placed on top of the one hundred-horse power boiler, another near the hub of the fly wheel of the engine and a third in a intricate portion of the pump machinery.

A week ago the News-Herald plant in Joplin was wrecked by dynamite. The same night a mining plant belonging to the Granby Mining company was blown up. Recently Patrick Hennessey, a Joplin councilman, found an unexploded stick of dynamite under his front porch.

Dead From Poison.

Josephine Peacock, the fifteen-year-old adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Peacock, who live five miles from Plattsmouth, Neb., died as a result of laudanum poisoning. The hired man found her lying beside a trunk suffering terrible agony. An empty bottle which had contained laudanum was on the floor. She said she had taken the poison supposing the bottle contained Peruna. The theory of suicide has been advanced, but the general opinion is that the girl told truth and that death was due to an accident.

GREAT LOCKOUT IN ENGLAND.

Between Forty and Fifty Thousand Boilermakers to Be Idle.

Between forty and fifty thousand members of the boilermakers' society will be locked out October 5, says a London, Eng., dispatch. The men affected are employed chiefly on the east coast ports at Barrow and on the Clyde. The chief grievance of the employes is that the executive committee of the employers' society has no real power and cannot force the men to observe any agreement which may be adopted.

With the prospect of a strike of the members of the amalgamated society of railway servants, which, unless prevented, will be one of the most serious ever known in the United Kingdom, the labor situation in England is becoming most critical. Leaders of the railway men, however, are making every effort to conciliate the companies, and it is hoped that arbitration or some other plan will be found to solve the problem.

A comparison of the cases of the boilermakers and the railway men shows a remarkable circumstance. The grievance at present of the railway men is that the companies refuse to recognise their executive, while on the other hand the shipbuilders have recognised the leaders of the boilermakers' society and come to an agreement with them, but the men themselves refuse to be bound by this understanding.

Scores Reported Drowned.

An unconfirmed report has reached Seattle, Wash., to the effect that 300 Chinese have been drowned in Bristol Bay, Alaska. No confirmation had been received, but it is thought to have some connection with the rumored that an unknown ship was lost in Bristol bay.

Accused of a Conspiracy.

A warrant had been issued at Boise, Idaho, for the arrest of Summer G. Moon and James L. Barber of Eau Clara, Wis., millionaire officers of the Barber Lumber company, and Horace S. Rand of Burlington, Conn., indicted for conspiracy to defraud the government. They were indicted with Senator Borah and others. They will be taken to Boise at once to answer the charges.

Jews Are Leaving Russia.

The Jewish emigration bureau at St. Petersburg published statistics showing that over 500,000 Jews have emigrated from Russia since 1899, the number having increased from 24,875 in that year to 200,000 in 1906.

FALL DOWN SHAFT

AWFUL PLUNGE OF A MINE CAGE FOR 700 FEET.

THE BRAKE FAILS TO HOLD

Cable Unwinds From Drum Like Thread On Bobbin—Life Crushed Out of Eleven Men, and Seven Are Fatally Injured.

By a cage plunging 750 feet down the shaft of the Jones & Laughlin Steel company mine at Negaunee, Mich., eleven men were killed and seven injured. The cage with its human freight was being lowered on its first trip for the day when the brake on the hoisting drum suddenly failed to hold. Two other men sprang to the assistance of the one at the brake wheel, but their combined efforts did not avail, and the wire cable continued to unreel from the drum like thread from a bobbin. The cage shot down a couple of hundred feet before a kink in the too rapidly paying out cable caused it to part and from that point the cage fell a steep drop to the bottom of the shaft. The cable to which it was equipped failed to operate. The surging of the cable in its mad flight tore out part of the side of the engine house and ripped out the machinery in and about the shaft house. Workmen at the bottom of the mine immediately set about the task of removing the dead.

The bodies lay in one pile, a mass of terribly mangled blood. The work of identifying the bodies was shattered that the men when they fell were piled on top of each other like so many pelts of leather. Seven men were found still alive. They were fatally hurt.

Thousands of people soon congregated about the mine shaft. In the crowd were the wives and children of the two hundred men who are employed in the mine. Each thought that a husband or parent or son was in the cage. There was no way of relieving the suspense, as the fallen cage effected the exit. It was fully two hours before the cable was adjusted so that the cage could be raised to the surface. During this time women with babies in their arms cried hysterically or fainted.

When all the miners came from under the ground and many anxious wives and others failed to find members of their family who worked in the mine, the news was plainly learned and ministers moved among the people consoling them and begging them to be calm.

Mrs. Edilian White Grant, a kindergarten teacher in the Otago public public schools, was found dead in her home at 5520 Madison avenue, her neck broken by a piece of linen cloth twisted about her throat. BREAKFAST DAINTIES

APPETIZING DISHES FOR THE MORNING MEAL.

To Get the Best Results with Biscuits —Cornbread and Sour Milk —Corn Cake—Soft Gingerbread is Nice.

While the acidity of milk varies, requiring judgment on the part of the cook, a safe general rule to follow is a level teaspoonful soda to one pint sour milk, that has stood two or three days, and a scant teaspoonful soda to a pint of sour milk that has just turned to a jelly-like consistency. The mistake that many cooks make is to add too much soda. Just enough is required to counteract the acidity of the milk. Sour milk that has stood long enough to acquire a bitter or moldy taste is unfit for use and must be thrown away.

For the biscuit, sift together two cupfuls flour, one-half teaspoonful salt, a level teaspoonful sugar and a rounding teaspoonful baking powder. Put into a bowl a half cup each sour cream and milk, then beat into it half teaspoonful soda dissolved in a tablespoonful hot water, then add the combined efforts did not avail, and the wire cable continued to unreel from the drum like thread from a bobbin. The cage shot down a couple of hundred feet before a kink in the too rapidly paying out cable caused it to part and from that point the cage fell a steep drop to the bottom of the shaft. The cable to which it was equipped failed to operate. The surging of the cable in its mad flight tore out part of the side of the engine house and ripped out the machinery in and about the shaft house. Workmen at the bottom of the mine immediately set about the task of removing the dead.

A MISSOURI WOMAN

Mrs. J. D. Johnson, of 605 West Hickman St., Columbia, Mo., says:

"Following an operation two years ago, dropsy set in, and my left side was so swollen the doctor said he would have to tap out the water. There was constant pain, with a numb sensation around my heart, and I could not raise my arm above my head. The kidney action was disordered and passages of the secretions too frequent. On the advice of my husband I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Since using two boxes my trouble has not reappeared. This is wonderful, after suffering two years."

TEA FROM THE FLOWERS.

This Product Little Known in the United States.

Tea, not from leaves, but from the flowers alone of the plant, is rarely encountered in commerce. The petals, stamens, etc., are sun dried, and the resulting tea is of a rich, deep brown hue of peculiarly delicate odor, and gives a pale amber-colored infusion rather more astringent in taste than that from the average fair grade leaf. The taste for it is an acquired one, and even if this tea could be made economically, it is doubtful if it would ever become popular.

The American tea trade could advantageously take a suggestion from the brick tea trade of Russia. In that country, the tea dust, some of which is good quality, is not properly utilized. In Europe it is a regular article of trade, is advertised and sold as tea dust. In America it is sold to thousands of cheap restaurants, who make from it the mixture of tannic acid, dirt and sand with which they sell as "tea." If, as in the orient, this dust was compressed into bricks, good tea could be made from it.

Hindoo Defines Billiards.

John Horgan, the champion pool player, told at a dinner in St. Louis a billiard story.

"Billiards is a tame amusement beside pool," Mr. Horgan began. "Two Hindoos were once discussing the game in Calcutta, and I think that their idea of it was pretty near the right one.

"'What is this white man's game of billiards I hear so much about?' said the first Hindoo.

"'Why, you know!' said the second.

"'No. Tell me.'

"'Well,' said the second Hindoo, 'billiards is a very simple game. Two men are armed with cues. They hit a ball on a green table, and one says, "a sin" while the other says "hard lines."'

PUTS THE "GINGER" IN.

The Kind of Food Used by Athletes.

A former college athlete, one of the long distance runners, began to lose his power of endurance. His experience with a change in food is interesting.

"While I was in training on the track athletic team, my daily 'fare' became a staple article. I was put on Grape-Nuts food for two meals a day. After using the Food for two weeks I felt like a new man. My digestion was perfect, nerves steady and I was full of energy.

"I trained for the mile and the half mile runs (those events which require the most endurance) and like to put on daily 'fare,' which before had been such a task, were clipped off with ease. I won both events.

"The Grape-Nuts food put me in perfect condition and gave me my 'ginger.' Not only was my physical condition made perfect, and my weight increased, but my mind was made clear and vigorous so that I could get on with my studies in about half the time formerly required. Now most all of the University men use Grape-Nuts for they have learned its value, but I think my testimony will not be amiss and may perhaps help some one to learn how the best results can be obtained."

There's a reason for the effect of Grape-Nuts food on the human body and brain. The certain elements in Grape-Nuts are selected with special reference to their power for rebuilding the brain and nerve centres. The product is then carefully and scientifically prepared so as to make it easy of digestion. The physical and mental results are so apparent after two or three weeks use as to produce a profound impression. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

A Strenuous Hint.

It was growing very late, but the young man in the parlor scene showed no signs of making a home run.

"You evidently have a very vivid imagination, Mr. Borem," said the dear girl, as she made an unsuccessful attempt to strangle a yawn.

"Why do you think so?" queried the unsuspecting Borem.

"I thought perhaps you imagined yourself in the Arctic regions, where the nights are six months long," she explained.

And 29 seconds later he had faded into the glumpsome gloom.

Laundry work at home would be much more satisfactory if the right Starch were used. In order to get the desired stiffness, it is usually necessary to use so much starch that the beauty and fineness of the fabric is hidden behind a paste of varying thickness, which not only destroys the appearance, but also affects the wearing quality of the goods. This trouble can be entirely overcome by using Defiance Starch, as it can be applied much more thinly because of its great er strength than other makes.

Dugald's Explanation.

Staying at an inn in Scotland a shooting party found their sport much interfered with by rain. Still, wet or fine, the old-fashioned barometer that hung in the hall persistently pointed to "set fair." At length one of the party drew the landlord's attention to the glass, saying: "Don't you think you'd better change the weather, my man? It's not right with your glass!" "No, sir," replied Dugald, with dignity; "she's a guid glass and a powerful glass, but she's no' moved wi' trifles."

TUMORS CONQUERED

The growth of a tumor is so insidious that frequently its presence is wholly unsuspected until it is well advanced.

So called "wandering pains" may come from the early stages or the presence of danger may be made manifest by excessive monthly periods accompanied by unusual pain, from the abdomen through the groin and thigh.

If you have mysterious pains, if there are indications of inflammation or displacements, secure a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, right away, and be-day ask a well woman.

The following letters should convince every suffering woman of its virtues, and that it actually does conquer tumors.

Mrs. May Fry, of 326 W. Colfax Ave., South Bend, Ind., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"It gives great pleasure in writing to thank you for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had a tumor and the doctors said the only hope was to have an operation. I was sick five years before I began to take the Compound. I now recommend Lydia E Pinkham's Vegetable Compound far and near."

Such testimony as above is convincing evidence that Lydia E. A good enthusiastic Woman Suffrage county convention was held in the M E church of Table Rock, Sept. 30, at 2 p. m. Vice President Mrs. Morris called the convention to order.

Mrs Selsam was appointed secretary pro tem.

Good reports from the county board and local club were read by Corresponding Secretary Mrs. Kovanda, followed by a good encouraging talk from Editor Taylor. Mrs Selsam read an able paper on "Barbarism vs Statism." The following officers were elected for the coming year:

President, Mrs Kovanda
Vice President, Mrs Andrews
Recording Secretary, Mrs Fisher
Corresponding Sec. Mrs Seybolt
Treasurer, Mrs Woods
Auditors, Mrs Allen, Mrs Zink

The committee on plan of work presented the following recommendations:

1. We recommend to follow as closely as possible the plans outlined by the National and State committees.

2. To have papers and books bearing on Suffrage in all reading rooms and county library.

3. To have professors and teachers in rural districts and high schools to arrange for at least one debate during the year.

4. That we hold one Suffrage meeting in each precinct in the county during the year.

Committee: Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Marble, Mrs. Zink.

The state president, Mrs Marble read the following resolutions and recommended their adoption, which was heartily approved of by the convention:

Whereas, The Constitution of the United States provides a republican form of government, and

Whereas, Taxation without representation is tyranny, and, whereas

Women pay in every state of this republic a rapidly increasing amount of taxes, therefore, Resolved,

That justice demands that their present political disability be removed, and that they be enfranchised upon the same terms as the men.

In the States in which they live.

Resolved, That we assembled in Pro Suffrage County Convention at Table Rock, Sept. 30, 1907, representing a large membership of both men and women, ask for the prompt passage by Your Honorable Body of a Sixteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution to be submitted to the Legislature the several States for ratification, prohibiting the disfranchisement of United States citizens on account of Sex; and

Resolved, That the Secretary of this meeting be requested to forward a copy of these resolutions to the president, and to the senators from this state, and to the congressmen from this district.

Whereas, In 1906 the National American Woman Suffrage Association will celebrate its Sixth anniversary at the first Woman's Rights meeting held in Seneca Falls, New York, and

Whereas, It is the earnest desire of the National Association to increase its paid up membership to 40,000 in honor of that occasion, therefore,

Resolved, That will urge each member of our local and county societies to pledge herself to secure one new member to either the local or state association during the coming year.

The following resolutions were passed on the death of County President Mrs. Lizzie O. Fellers.

Whereas, The Great Ruler of the universe has, in His infinite wisdom, removed from our midst our co-laborer, Mrs Lizzie C Fellers, therefore,

Resolved, That the friendly relations held during a long number of years with the members of this Association makes it fitting that a record our appreciation of her labors in behalf of the cause of Woman Suffrage, and

Resolved, That in her death we have lost a friend whose counsel and advice we shall sorely miss, and whose place will be greatly realized by all members of the local and its friends; therefore,

Resolved, That with deep sympathy with the afflicted relatives and friends of the deceased, we express an earnest hope that even so great a bereavement may be overruled for their highest good, and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this expression of feeling be sent to the relatives of the deceased, and a copy spread on our records, and also a copy sent to the press of Pawnee county for publication.

Committee: Mesdames Kovanda, Nettleton and Allen.

The convention expressed their sincere thanks to the Pastor and trustees for opening their church for our use, and to all who helped in making the convention a success. We further extend our thanks to the press of Pawnee county for all courtesies received. Anna Kovanda, Cor. Sec.

LAND LAND LAND

Land that grows 15 to 25 tons of sugar beets to the acre, 200 to 400 bushels of potatoes, 60 to 100 bushels of oats, 35 to 80 bushels of corn to the acre, and all kinds of fruit berries and melons in abundance. Blah, viz go soil; that grows immense crops like magic, when the water that the U. S. government provides at cost is flowed along it. There is no such thing as crop failure under irrigation. The farmer plants his crop and absolutely controls the amount of water his crops need at exactly the proper time, and as he can grow more profitable crops than he can grow in any natural rainfall country, such as sugar beets and alfalfa. Government statistics show that irrigated land will produce from one third to one-half more crops than any natural rainfall country. Officials of the U. S. Reclamation Service say that the North Platte project, which will irrigate the land we are selling, is best adapted to irrigation of any land in the country, and the supply of water is unlimited.

Reason, Why pay from $2.50 $10 an acre rent for land when you can get 160 acres of this irrigated land for about the same money you are paying for one year's rent of an eastern farm?

Come to the New Land and own a fine farm that will grow larger crops than the high-priced land you are renting. Uncle Sam will supply crops than the high-priced land you are renting. Uncle Sam will supply you with water to irrigate 160 acres of fine, rich, productive land in the country at cost. I can secure you a fine 160 acre, irrigable farm for from $1 to $5 per acre,

Don't Wait! It won't last long. Thousands of people are flocking to this country, and the sooner you come the better bargain I can get you. Don't waste your life renting somebody else's farm at a high price. Come to the rich and fertile North Platte Valley and make a home and fortune for yourself and family. Don't neglect this splendid opportunity. There's big money in it. This land that you can now secure for practically nothing will be worth from $100 to $500 per acre as soon as irrigated and improved. It is better land than Colorado land that is now selling for as much. You can hire all the work done on sugar beets for $45 an acre, and at the average yield of 12 tons an acre, you can clear $35 an acre and do no work on it yourself.

Farm Owners, Why farm $400 eastern land when you can buy irrigated land here from one-tenth to one-fourth the money, and get land that will produce larger crops and increase rapidly in value? Sell out and come to the rich North Platte valley. We are not pioneering. There are no hardships in this country—towns, railroads, schools and churches are close at hand. The Platte Valley is centrally located and convenient to all markets. Railroad communications are unexcelled to all good shipping points. Railroad commissions are unexcelled to all good shipping points. All kinds of produce, cattle, hogs and sheep command a high price. The Burlington R. R. now runs through the valley and the Union Pacific is rapidly pushing work on a through line to the coast, which line also runs through the valley. Thousands and thousands of tons of hay are cut in the river bottoms every year.

Investors: We can sell you deeded land that is increasing rapidly in value and will continue to increase in value for years to come. Irrigated land is not subject to the depression in land values that there are with a period of crop failures in any natural rainfall country. No matter what the weather you can grow a crop every year under irrigation. I control the sale of thousands of acres of irrigated and dry lands, hay land and ranches. I can secure you any kind of land at a price that will make money quickly for you.

Write today for further information. Local real estate dealers correspond; we can make some money for you.

LAND LEEKERS AND INVESTORS AGENT

Well, the last night on the road we seemed to be stopping more than going. And one time we seemed to be set out in the desert miles from anything resembling HABITATION for about three hours. I asked my neighbor across aisle what we were sidetracked here for, she said we are not, the way is simply blocked; the whole train is stopped and we are running into danger signals all the time; travel is so congested. Thus it made us 12 hours late into Sacramento and we had to wait until into a. m. Sunday before we could get out. The depot doors and windows were all open and a cruelly wind blowing so most of the waiting ones kept exercising to keep warm. The only seats where one could lie down were occupied by sleeping men, and an occasional sister furnished some amusement for the wakeful ones. About seven o'clock I went into the depot lunch room and was served to a cup of hot chocolate and a generous slice of beautifully brown toast and good butter for the very "moderate" sum of fifteen cents. I had more good lunch in my basket than I had eaten on the road so generously had the girls provided for my wants, but I needed something hot so got it. After that I plucked up courage enough to interview some of the officials regarding the train and found the car destined for Galt and points south was standing on the track not far from the depot and as I did not succeed in finding man or boy whose business it was to assist passengers in getting located, and there was plenty of time, I got a fellow passenger to assist in mouning my grips, and others going the same way were very glad to change from the depot to the car as it was not only warmer, but was more comfortable, as at last. About eleven we arrived in Galt and before the train stopped I saw Lurlı plunging through the crowd peering anxiously at every opening, and though near the door I was not in sight so stepped out by a gate and was soon caught in a hearty hug. Will and his father's folks were all there with warm greetings, and explains my puzzling, and one thing we seemed to be set out in the desert miles from anything resembling HABITATION for about three hours. The only seats where one could lie down were occupied by sleeping men, and an occasional sister furnished some amusement for the wakeful ones. About seven o'clock I went into the depot lunch room and was served to a cup of hot chocolate and a generous slice of beautifully brown toast and good butter for the very "moderate" sum of fifteen cents. I had more good lunch in my basket than I had eaten on the road so generously had the girls provided for my wants, but I needed something hot so got it. After that I plucked up courage enough to interview some of the officials regarding the train and found the car destined for Galt and points south was standing on the track not far from the depot and as I did not succeed in finding man or boy whose business it was to assist passengers in getting located, and there was plenty of time, I got a fellow passenger to assist in mouning my grips, and others going the same way were very glad to change from the depot to the car as it was not only warmer, but was more comfortable, as at last. About eleven we arrived in Galt and before the train stopped I saw Lurlı plunging through the crowd peering anxiously at every opening, and though near the door I was not in sight so stepped out by a gate and was soon

Thursday night burglars entered the barber shop of B W Layman, and stole a dozen razors, strops, combs, brushes, etc., depriving Bert of his tools; they took his drum sticks which were in a music roll. Entrance was made to the shop by breaking the window in the rear of the building. On Saturday Mr. Layman and Constable Norris went to Wymore to see a fellow the police think had run in and see if they could identify some razors the fellow was offering for sale as goods stolen from the shop but Bert could not identify him and the fellow was turned loose. As yet no clue has been found as to the burglars, but a few small articles had been found in the rear of the building but nothing of value has been found.

The platform of the socialist party of the state of Nebraska is the result of one man who met himself as the representative of that party at Lincoln, elected himself chairman and secretary and filed the instrument with the secretary of state as required by law. Elizabeth O Holt was born October 17th 1840, at New Preston, town of Washington, Litchfield county, Conn She graduated at an early age and taught school in Newton, Conn., and in New York, was married to Ralph I Wharton, of the same town April 26th, 1860. Of this union three children were born, Charles M, of Pollatch, Idaho; Walter S, of Allisales, Neb., and Lillian M, now Mrs. Ira Thomas, of Table Rock. She also leaves an sister, Mrs. Jennie Eckerson of Bridgeton, Conn. In 1882 the family moved to Table Rock, which has been her residence since. Left a widow, she was married to Andrew Fellers, whom she survived 14 years. Died September 10, '07 at Pollatch, Idaho, after an illness of three weeks. She united with the Congregational church in early childhood, and has been a faithful, earnest and consistent christian ever since. The body arrived here Friday night, accompanied by her sons, Charlie from Pollatch, and Walter, of Allisade, and was taken to her home.

The funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at the Presbyterian church, conducted by her pastor, Rev H W Coulter. Mrs. Fellers will be greatly missed, not only by the older people of our community, but the young people, who always found in her a wise counselor and a willing friend.

We desire to express our sincere thanks to the many friends of Table Rock for the kindness extended to us during the funeral of our mother and, especially for the floral contributions and grave decorations.

Representatives of the various political parties in Nebraska met in Lincoln on Tuesday and adopted platforms, chose committees and the fires battle after the first primary is now on. The republican platform refers to the promises of the last platform and their fulfillment by the men elected upon it, and promises further reform measures. It also favors Wm. Taft for president, and the will meet the approval of a vast majority of the republican voters of the state. The nominees of the party were present and made speeches. Judge Sedgewick made a speech which made him very popular with those who heard it, pledging his support to the nominees and speaking in highest terms of Judge Reese. W J Bryan addressed the democratic platform bunkers, and the platform speaks eulogistically of his record as a democrat, but does not decidedly endorse his candidacy for the presidency.

FOOL THE PEOPLE

MOTTO OF "GET-RICH-QUICK" MEN AND FAKIRS.

HOW SCHEMES ARE WORKED

Desire to Get "Something for Nothing" Is Played Upon—Exercise of Common Sense Would End Graft.

"You can fool some of the people part of the time; but you can fool old-ans all the time," seems to be a motto of the get-rich-quick men and "gold brick" operators. Pages of the daily and weekly press may be filled with warnings to readers to be on the look-out for swindlers, yet many who are credited with intelligence will keep right on biting at the baits thrown out by various concerns who sell "cats in bags."

Psychologists say that every person has a weak spot somewhere in his or her brain. It seems that this softness is commonly manifested in false reasoning that frequently one can get something for nothing. Understanding this desire on part of the majority, the fakirs bait their hooks accordingly. There are large concerns which have built up a great reputation by representing to the people that with each bill of goods purchased the buyers get "something for nothing."

In just this "graft" like this that will draw $1,500 worth of soap orders in a single month from a town of 10,000 people! But this is just within the bounds of reason, the past few months. Just think of wives of grocers and dry goods merchants in large cities joining "soap clubs" and paying a dollar a month for the privilege of buying soap and the premium, too! Yet such is the drawing power of "this something for nothing" argument. If the Creator gave these women common sense, they little know how to utilize it.

Some means should be devised to tax directly or indirectly the concerns in foreign cities that seek to do business directly with consumers through the mails. At present they are protected by the interstate commerce law. By these concerns make their money by dealing with the people of some community, where they pay no taxes direct or income taxes.

The merchants of this town are taxed upon the business they do. Is this proposition a fair one? The foreign insurance companies doing business in this state pay a license fee for so doing. Why not compel the foreign mercantile concern to do the same? Our national laws should be so constructed as to provide that there be a tax on the amount of business transacted in a state by any mercantile concern in another state. Unless our business be protected by concerns which pay taxes within the state for the doing of such business.

D. M. CARR.

FOR GREATER ECONOMY.

Manufacturing Drifting Closer to Fields Where Raw Material Is Produced.

Economy in every industry is becoming more pronounced year after year. Manufacturing centers are drifting toward locations where the raw materials can be secured at lower cost. During the past ten years cotton manufacturing in the south has increased more than a hundred per cent, and there has been a decrease in the production of textile manufacturing centers in the New England states in proportion to the increased consumption. A score of years ago the great flour manufacturing centers were in New York and other eastern states. To-day the west controls manufactures of flour and cereal foods. When mills are located in centers of wheat and corn production in large number sufficient to utilize the crops of local territory, it will work a benefit to the farmers of the land in the saving of what is now paid in freight rates or raw products to manufacturing centers, and the distribution cost to consumers of the land. Every farmer can help better conditions materially himself by giving his support to local manufacturing enterprises.

An Advertising Trick.

Every reader of newspapers who has the power of observation knows the deception practiced in advertising. Often a fine picture of a stove or some other article is given in large figures a price given which is a third of what the real worth of the article is, and the rest of the advertisement is artfully worked so as to give the impression that it is the article illustrated that is sent for the low price. This is for the purpose of securing an order for an article which, when received is found to be far different from what the person who sent the order expects to receive. How would the home merchant fare should he advertise in the same manner? Would he not be placed on the list of tricksters?

Building Up Trusts.

During the past ten years billions of dollars have been sent to the large cities by the residents of rural communities, and these billions have been used in building up trusts that work against the best interests of the masses who reside in agricultural sections. Is it not time to awaken to the danger of sending money away from the home towns?

PROPRIETARY REMEDIES VS. PHYSICIANS' PRESCRIPTIONS

Statistician Shows, of the Deaths from Illness Given Treatment, Only Three Per Cent Were Due to Patent Medicines, According to Figures Issued at Medical Certificates.

The press committee of the Proprietary Association of America will present at the next meeting of that body a report showing the number of accidental deaths caused by patent medicines in the two years ending June 30, 1907, as compared with deaths from other causes.

Almost immediately after the beginning of the latest crusade against proprietary medicines this committee was instructed to collect data. This work was done through the clipping bureaus, which furnished accounts of all deaths, excluding of suicide, due to the misuse of medicines, drugs or poisons. The result showed that only three per cent could be traced directly to the products made by the members of the association.

The figures have to be taken with a grain of salt, and the home paper is the means of keeping them informed of things going on immediately about them. If the average metropolitan newspaper would give substantial support to the home paper and does the farmer, the editor would not only be enabled to give the farmer a better paper, especially its interests better, but the merchant would receive a benefit in seeing his town improve and its business increased, and all his environments improved.

Millions Are Lost Annually.

Fifty millions of dollars annually is a conservative estimate of the amount that the people of the United States are swindled out of through the operation of fraudulent investment and insurance concerns.

How easily people are influenced to make investments in questionable concerns, has been recently strongly illustrated through the operations of the different alleged cooperative mercantile, home-building and investment schemes which have been promoted fraudulent by the postal authorities. It is during the times of prosperity that the schemers find the richest field. People who never had the handling of much money, and who find in their possession a few hundreds of dollars, just have enough for the "taste" of wealth so that they are easy victims for the sharpers who operate "fake" enterprises which hold out alluring promises of great returns on small investments. State laws for the control of such concerns should be stringent, and severe punishment meted to those who operate with impunity."

HOME NEWSPAPERS.

Are Factors in the Enlightenment of the People.

This is an era when the business man who would succeed must place the right value upon publicity. This is the most enlightened era the world has ever known. Only a small percentage of the people, particularly among the English speaking, cannot read and write, and the fact is a rare thing to find an illiterate person in any American community.

The old-style farmer is fast passing, and there is a general admission that intelligence, in fact scientific training is needed on the farm as well as in the business house and factory. With telephones, daily rural delivery service and every innovation of civilization, the American farmer is fast becoming noted among the educated and advanced classes. They are readers, thinkers and logicians. Growing generations in agricultural communities have all the advantages that the youth of cities have, and few of the disadvantages. They surely breathe a healthier moral atmosphere. The farmers are the main support of the country press. They feel interested in all local affairs, and the home paper is the means of keeping them informed of things going on immediately about them. If the average metropolitan newspaper would give substantial support to the home paper and does the farmer, the editor would not only be enabled to give the farmer a better paper, especially its interests better, but the merchant would receive a benefit in seeing his town improve and its business increased, and all his environments improved.

KIDNEY TROUBLE

Suffered Two Years—Relieved in Three Months.

C. B. FIZER.

MR. C. B. FIZER, Mt. Sterling, Ky., writes:

"I have suffered with Kidney and other trouble for ten years past.

"Last March I commenced using Peruna and continued for three months. I have not used it since, nor have I felt a pain.

"I believe that I am well and I therefore give my highest commendation to the curative qualities of Peruna."

—Peruna For Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Geo. H. Simser, Grand, Ontario, Can., writes:

"I had not been well for about four years. I had terrible trouble, and, in fact, felt badly nearly all the time.

"This summer I got so very bad I thought I would die. I wrote to you for advice, and began at once to take Peruna and Manalin.

"It took only two bottles of Peruna and one of Manalin, and now I feel better than I have for some time.

"I feel that Peruna and Manalin cured me, and I cheerfully give you permission to use my letter in any other one thing, as I am a firm believer in Peruna.

It is to the kidneys to remove from the blood all poisonous materials. They must be active all the time, else the system suffers. They are sometimes when they need a little assistance.

Peruna is exactly the sort of a remedy. It has saved many people from disaster by rendering the kidneys service at a time when they were not able to bear their own burdens.

DANCE WITH LIVE SNAKES.

An Indian Custom That Is Supposed to Bring Good Crops.

Groups of three are now formed by the snake men, each group consisting of a carrier priest, an attendant and a gatherer, and these with their turn in front of the kisi, where the snakes are handed to the carrier priest. Soon all the dancers are furnished with reptiles, and holding the squirming snakes in their teeth, they dance slowly and with closed eyes around the plaza.

The carrier priest is followed by the attendant, who holds a snake whip with which he distracts the snake and also diverts the attention from the man who carries it, and the gatherer is always ready to snatch up the snakes when they are dropped to the ground.

I have often noticed rattlesnakes held closer to the rattles than to the head, so they could easily run their heads into the eyes and hair of the carrier priest. I was never at work watching them, for it often appeared as if nothing could prevent a fatal strike, but the priests never resigned to be unnerved or disconcerted in the least, and the programme is never changed.

After the plaza has been circled twice with the snakes, it is dropped to the ground, the shock of the fall being violent enough usually to cause the rattler to coil and shake its rattles. Then the gatherer sends a few strokes of his feather whip, reduces it to submission, picks it up and hands it to one of the antelope men priests.

When all the snakes have been danced with, each one receiving the same treatment, the head snake priest sprinkles meal over the floor of the kisi, and the snake priests all gather around it. Then at a given signal, all the snakes are thrown within the circle, where they are sprinkled with sacred meal by numbers of Hopi maidens.

Then another signal is given, and the snake priests swoop down, grab up as many snakes as they can carry and rush down the sides of the steep mesa to the plains below to release the snakes in certain sacred places, so that they may carry the prayers from the living to the dead, and the ancestors of the Hopi may intercede for them with the nature gods that there may be plenty of rain and no danger of the crops being destroyed by drought.—The Craftsman.

Eyes Are Hereditary.

The British Association is asking the public to co-operate in hunting down a secret of which some fascinating hints have just been discovered. The difficulty of investigation is no more than noting down the color of the eyes of the family. In the light of science there are only two sorts of eyes—blue and not blue. Hence appears a strange law of heredity. It is asserted that where both parents have blue eyes, all the children have blue eyes; where both parents have brown eyes, they all children have brown eyes; but it is where the parents differ that this alleged law of heredity is most surprising. In this case brown eyes are said to be dominant, and blue eyes recessive, so that the children of mixed parents three of every four will have brown eyes and one blue.

First U. S. Treasurer.

Each of the new $10 treasury notes has a portrait of Michael Hillegas upon it, labeled "First Treasurer of the United States." This recognition of a man whose personal worth and service to his country have been too long obscured," says a writer, "must be credited to a descendant, the Rev. Michael Lee Minich, a Lutheran pastor, and to Secretaries John Hay and Leslie M. Shaw, who, from the archives of state and treasury departments, got proof of the many prior claims to a post hitherto credited either to Robert Morris or Samuel Meredith. Hillegas was a pre-revolutionary Philadelphian, a merchant, manufacturer of iron and merchant, whose credit was at George Washington's command whenever the great military leader needed funds. He collared historical research and was a musician of note.

King Edward's Wealth.

While the king of England is granted about $4,000,000 a year by the British parliament in what is termed the civil list, this forms only a fraction of his majesty's real wealth, as the crown actually owns property valued at close to $100,000,000. As a matter of fact, the king of England must be considered as wealthier than an individual with a hundred millions of money. Moreover, the king has his money all invested in real estate, and owns more real estate than any other single English-speaking person, save perhaps William Waldorf Astor, the elder, who owns blocks and blocks of New York real property, although he has become a naturalized subject of the English monarch.

Chihuahua Dog.

Although the Chihuahua dog 25 years ago was common in Mexico, it is said to be rapidly becoming extinct. It is a curious little creature. Its weight is sometimes not more than a pound and a half, and it has a disproportionately large head, bulging eyes and long ears. The body is usually scanty, showing the pink skin underneath, and from this characteristic it has been known as the Mexican hairless dog. It is seldom above the knees in height, and the motto: "Nemo me impune lacessit," or "No one provokes me with impunity."

SERIAL STORY

FRIDAY THE 13TH

"I agree with you, Ike. If I had the clearing of this killing, I don't think I would take any chance of tempting them to dump and grab the profits by putting it much over 200. But you can't tell what 'Cam' and those four-eyed dentists at 26 Broadway will do. Yes, put der iss anudder ting, Bo, dat makes me sit up unt plink 'bout her goin' over two hundred. To-day's Friday der t'irteenth."

"Of course, Ike, that is something to be reckoned with, and every man in the floor and in the street as well will be eye on it. Friday, the 13th, would break the best market ever known. You and I know that, Ike, and the dope shows it, too, but you've got to stack this up against it that this old Friday, the 13th, means better than Barry Conant. He has worked it to the queen's taste many a time. Why, Barry would not eat today for fear the food would get stuck in his windpipe. He's never left the job for a minute; but suppose, Ike, Barry Conant should be off his feed, the boys will let go their fliers, and get of them will take one on the short side over to-night for a superstition that any substitute Friday, or 'Cam' has told him to take 'em all into camp and give her a super-scraper at the opening, where he did old Friday, that is, last one to-morrow's dope-sheets? Bring up the average, wouldn't it, for five years to come? I tell you, Ike, she's too deep for me. I'll tell you, Ike, what I'm going to do. I'm going to stand pat on the turkey out loan commissions or stick to plain turkey food."

"Yams help. Cho. Say, Cho, haf you sliced Pop Frownlee to-tay? He has been to deli fringe off dat Sugar and see t'ough some von hat nipped it is trying to fathom Barry Conant's movements," but for what purpose puzzled me. The hands of the ticker clock on the wall showed that trading had been 39 minutes under way, and still Barry Conant was pushing up the price. His voice had just rung out "25 for any part of 5,000" when, like an echo, it sounded through the hall: "25 for 5,000." It was Bob. He had worked his way to the center of the crowd, and stood in front of Barry Conant. He was not the Bob who had taken Barry Conant's part that afternoon a thousand years ago. He was much cooler, calmer, more self-possessed. He was the incarnation of confident power. A cold, cynical smile played around the corners of his mouth as he looked down upon his opponent.

The effect upon Barry Conant was different from that of Bob's last bid on the day when, with hands' hopes went skyward in dust. It did not rouse him the wild, furious desire for the onslaught that he showed then, but a cold, quiet, subtle fury, as prolific mind to exercise all its cunning. I think that in that one moment Barry Conant recalled his suspicions of the day before, when he had wondered what Bob's presence in the crowd meant, and that he saw again the picture of Bob on the day when he himself had ditched Bob's treasure-train. He hesitated for just the fraction of a second, while he waved with lightning-like rapidity a set of fingers signals to his lieutenants. Then he squared himself for the encounter. "25 for 5,000," Cold, cold as the voice of a condemning Judge rang Bob's bid. "25 for 5,000." "Sold." "25 for 5,000." "Sold." "25 for 5,000." "Sold." Their eyes were fixed upon each other, in Barry's a defiant glare, in Bob's mingled pity and contempt. The rest of the brokers hushed their cries and offers until it could have truthfully been said that the floor of the stock exchange was quiet, an almost unheard-of thing in like circumstances. Again Barry Conant's voice, "25 for 5,000." "Sold." "25 for 5,000." "Sold." Barry Conant had met his master.

MEANS MUCH MONEY

ENORMOUS COST OF RAILROAD SAFETY APPLIANCES.

Automatic Systems, Though They Call for the Expenditure of Large Sums, Are Cheapest in the Long Run.

It is impossible to state with any degree of accuracy just what it is going to cost to render railroad travel in this country as free from accidents as it is in Europe. It will cost the railroads very large sums to abolish or protect all their grade crossings, even if the expense is shared by the local authorities.

It would be a comparatively easy matter to determine the cost of the extension of the block system to the 190,000 miles of railroad in this country not at present employing it, were it not for the fact that there are 40 many different varieties of block systems.

In considering the installation of automatic block signals, the first financial question," says the International Commerce magazine, "is the original cost of the signals, apparatus, fittings and appliances. The cost of maintenance, while a considerable item, is decidedly smaller than the cost of operation of the non-automatic systems, in which the item of wages is large. Automatic block signals have involved expenditures of from $1,500 to $3,000 a mile of double track road, the precise figure varying according to the type of signal, the number of crossing switches to be connected, and the frequency of the signals or length of the block sections. The maintenance of these signals costs variously from $75 to $125 per signal, per year."

The real question at issue, however, is not how much capital is required to put an end to preventable railroad accidents, but rather how much of that capital will prove to be a non-remunerative investment. This distinction is of fundamental importance, for, in so far as safety appliances prove paying investments, to that extent the human lives saved by them are secured without cost to the state.

As part of the expense incident to the carrying out of each and all of the proposed reforms, and in some cases a very large proportion of them, must be a foreword of the coming harvest of the bulls and the slaughter of the bears.

Others than Ike Bloomenstein remarked upon the fact that Bob Brownley had hung close to the Sugar-pole all day, but when the close had come and gone without his having anything to do with the Sugar skyrockets, he dropped out of his fellow-brokers' minds. Wall street has no use for any but the "doer." The poet and the mooner would be no more secure from interruption in the center of the Sahara than in Wall street between ten and three o'clock. Something was said that the human mind, like the well-bucket, can carry only its fill. The Wall street mind always has its fill of budding dollars. In consequence, there is never room for those other interests that enter the normal mind.

Friday, the 13th of November, drifted over Manhattan island in a dread drizzle of marrow-chilling haze, which just enough to be disagreeable to New York days that give a hesitating suicide renewed courage to cut the mortal coil. By ten o'clock it had settled down on the stock exchange and its surrounding infernos with a clamminess that damped the spirits of the most rampant bulls. No class in the world is so susceptible to atmospheric conditions as stock-gamblers. Many a stout-hearted one has been known to postpone the inauguration of a long-planned coup merely because the air filled his blood with the dank chill of superstition. Because of the expected Sugar pyrotechnics, stock exchange members were up unusually early. Even brokers' offices were overcrowded before ten; the morning papers, not only in New York but in Boston, Philadelphia and other centers, were filled with stories of the big rise that was to take place in Sugar. The morning ones saw the ear-marks of the "artists" in evidence in the front stories; and they knew that this industrious institution had not sat up the night before in vain conjuration. All the signs pointed to a killing, and a terrific one—pointed so plainly that the bears and Sugar shorts found no hope in the atmosphere or the date.

Bob had not been near the office the afternoon before, and as he had not come in by five minutes to ten, I decided to go over to his office and see if he were going to mix up in the batting of the Sugar bears. I had no specific reasons for thinking he would be susceptible to atmospheric conditions as stock-gamblers. I was not surprised to see Bob's tall form wedged in the crowd about two-thirds of the way from the center of the active floor member Sugar was there, too. Even Ike Bloomenstein and Joe Barnes, who seldom went into the big crowds, were on hand. Bob was in for this killing. Bob was not trading, although on the day before he never took his eye off Barry Conant. I said to myself: He

KEEPS SNOW FROM RAILS.

Enormous Shed Excites Admiration of the Tourist.

On the crest of the Continental divide on the Moffat road is one of the largest snowsheds in the world. It is erected for the purpose of keeping the drifts of winter from the rails that stretch their shining lengths over the Continental divide at an elevation of 11,660 feet. This elevation is calculated to provide snow about six months of very rare and is generally able to keep the trains moving in all but three of the hottest months of summer.

It is in the giant snowshed at the crest of the great range that the tourist who go over the Moffat road have their best outings. The engines that move to and fro in the giant shade are used daily by the tourists for the purpose of having pictures taken to send back to their friends in the east. They want to have their pictures taken showing them standing or seated on a cowcatcher or steam chests of the engines. These engines are the largest in use in the United States. They are built of a special type and of wonderful traction power. One of them is almost as large as a freight car. They are compounds and is constructed at the cost of a small fortune.

These are the engines that are used to take up the heavy tourist cars over the Moffat road. They pull easily 11 coaches from Denver to Tolland and take nearly half that load up the heavy grade to the summit of the top of the divide. The engines are marvels to the tourists of the east, who are accustomed to the small type of locomotive of the level roads of the eastern states.

It is only with the help of these majestic engines that the Moffat road is kept open during the severest of the winters. These gigantic engines are used on the snow plows and at this work small engines would prove worth less.

Saith American Railways.

Although it is the scenic American exponents of that project there has seemed a discouraging lack of interest in the Pan-American railway scheme on the part of South American railroad men, there has really been no cessation of the activity of the latter in pushing development in their more immediate spheres.

"Let us build the lines the country needs, they say, and don't ask us to go out of our way to further a scheme which, however desirable from an engineering point of view, would not pay us dividends in this century, and possibly not in the next."

"We know that we might benefit indirectly through the increased stability of government that would follow the building of an interoceanic railway, but that benefit is too remote to interest us at a time when we have an ample opportunity for expanding all our available funds in the construction of lines that will yield returns in the degree of safety demanded, at the same time there is no denying the fact that an expenditure of many millions will be required.—Carl S. Vrooman in August McClure's.

Vaccinating Railroad Ties.

If Railway sleepers are vaccinated in the principle, by the use of a preservation prolongs their life three or four times over.

"You see, the soft wood of these ties, unprotected, is a quick prey to the innumerable fierce hosts of ants and worms and other tropical insects. They go for an unvaccinated sleeper as a tramp goes for a pie, and in a few weeks it is reduced to dust.

"But we vaccinate the sleepers. We inject into them creosote, or sulphate of copper, or some other 'antiseptic.' Then, thanks to the toxic poison in the insects' attacks, they last as long as they would on the Pennsylvania or the Erie lines."

Wolf Killed by Locomotive.

When John Lewis, the engineer on a Union Pacific passenger train, climbed from his engine at the Union depot recently he carried in one hand a full-grown wolf—dead, says the Kansas City Times. Lewis says his engine struck the animal near Wamego early in the morning, and that he supposed it had gone under the wheels of the engine. When he was sitting around at the next stop he found the wolf dead on the plot. He took it into the engine cab and brought it to Kansas City.

The wolf's nose touched the plat-form as Lewis held it suspended at arm's length by the tail.

climb it. The curve in the track is 46 feet radius; the car passes over this curve at a speed of 15 miles an hour, lurching. The cars used to have a rigid wheel base of 5 feet 10 inches; track is standard gauge.

It is said the car requires no more power to start or travel the curve than on straight track. If desired, the center rail can also be used as an electric third rail.

The office dictionary is kept on that table. Brownlow was turning the leaves idly when Marse Henry Watterson came along.

Marse Henry does not see very well. He made out a figure at the table and said: "Who's that?"

"Brownlow, Mr. Watterson."

"What are you doing, Brownlow?"

"I'm reading the dictionary."

"Well, skip the adjectives, skip the adjectives, for I'm the only one on this paper who can use them."—Saturday Evening Post.

She Wanted That.

"I shall make you love me yet," declared Mr. Stiltop, determinedly. "I shall leave no stone unturned."

"Ah! that sounds something like!" exclaimed the fair girl. "I like stone weighs not less than a Karat and is pure white You may interest me."—Philadelphia Record.

Consolidation of Railroads.

Japan Buys Railroads.

In the effort to nationalize the railroad systems of Japan, six companies having 1,500 miles of track, were acquired last year by the government. The amount invested was 120,000,000 yen.

MAKE DUTY BURDEN

SOME PEOPLE HAVE TOO MUCH CONSCIENCE.

Mr. Blitzpop Pursues the Subject for a Little, with a Concrete Illustration—Eye Seen to Be Perfectly Balanced.

"Duty sits light on some, but," said Mr. Blitzpop, "how hard on others.

"Now, you take Mrs. Blitzpop, what do you think she said to me the other day? That she was afraid she wouldn't have everything cleaned up when she died!

"She don't mean, you know, that she wouldn't leave everything clean; but what she meant was that she was afraid she wouldn't leave everything in order and all the mending done and all that, so that it all could be carried along easily without her; that she wouldn't leave everything all cleaned up.

"What do you think of that for an exaggerated, burdensome sense of duty?

"I've tried to reason with Mrs. Blitzpop about this, but it's no use. She's kind of worn out with it herself, and her light her duty is plain; it is to work, work, not for herself but for others.

"She is very lenient with everybody else, but she never spares herself. Whatever work there is to be done she considers it her duty to do, and so she labors morning, noon and night and day after day. I've told her over and over that I'd like her to take it easy, downright slack; that she ought to let things go by default anyway, and rest a little; but she says that would never do; that if she once let things go she'd never catch up. And as it is, I'm sure, she's afraid she won't leave everything cleaned up when she dies!

"And so she works on; never satisfied unless everything is done just so, and always at it, self-denying always, but with that sense of duty always wearing on her, implying her always to work, work, work. And I suppose there are 15,000,000 other women at work in just the same way, though I am not so sure, either, than any one of them works harder than Mrs. Blitzpop does, so unselfishly and so devotedly.

"I would give $14.50, or more, if I could stop her, but she says we are poor, and economy must be practiced, though I know it would be just the same if we were rich, that her sense of duty would still oppress her, for she's built that way. Duty sits hard on her.

"A grand thing it would be for all of us if we could really know our duty and then do it, thoroughly to the full, and yet not let it impose upon us undue burdens, not let our sense of duty harry us.

"There are people now and then to be met—by me, I mean—who know their duty and performing it faithfully and fully, nor failing ever to take up cheerfully others burdens when they should. I've met them, I say, and I suppose there are 15,000,000 other women of them, some, I suppose, who, unselfishly and so devotedly

GRADES OF RANK IN JAPAN.

Society There Is Divided Into Many Orders Of Distinction.

A traveler just returned from Japan tells some things which perhaps all the world does not know. Says he: Of rank, there are eight classes after the mikado and the Zikgoon, namely: (1) the princes; (2) the nobles who have feudal service to the mikado; (3) the samurai; (4) the priests; (5) the soldiers. These four form the higher orders and enjoy the privilege of wearing two swords, and petticoat trousers; (6) inferior officials and doctors, called respectable, allowed to wear one sword, with the trousers; (7) merchants and tradesmen, whose rank they are soldier the trousers, though by stealth, as distinctive of rank they may wear the privilege of wearing one sword; these are the only people by whom wealth can be accumulated; (8) artists, actors and petty shop-keepers; (9) day laborers and peasants. Tradesmen who get rich rise a rank, but are not raised from classification. They are called upon but not kan ima. Yet other men they live in villages, or [illegible]

FIGHT WITH SAVAGE LION.

Adventurous Hunter Paid for Sport With His Life.

From the Sudan comes the report of a fierce fight between a mounted lion and a government engineer, which ended in the death of the latter, an Englishman named C. H. Salmon, Salmon, while on board the steamer Nasoman, in the White Nile, discovered a lion among the bushes on the shore. Taking a gun, he went ashore seeking sport, but not to follow him. He fired at the lion in the one bullet took effect in the lion's shoulder and the other in the abdomen. After a struggle of a few minutes, which seemed to be to death agony, the lion lay motionless. Salmon approached and the lion pounced upon him, and threw him to the ground and began to maul him. The engineer held the lion's neck and endeavored to draw his knife, but before he succeeded the lion had bitten his thigh and crushed his left arm. He was the beast's wish in the face. This infuriated the animal, which snapped at the man's hand, but, becoming and smashing it. The lion then left Salmon, however, and went to pounce on the animal and he started to retreat. The crew of the steamer now arrived upon the scene. They fired at the enraged lion with success, difficulty and carried the unfortunate hunter to the boat, which then sailed with all possible speed to Kasboda, where he was taken to the hospital and received medical attention, only to die two days later from [illegible]

Witch's Bridle.

An inheritable but most cruel object of punishment may be found in the town hall at Porter, which is generally known as the "Witch's Bridle." This is a kind of cage made of flat iron bars, into which the head of the unhappy sorceress was forced, a lock at the back securing and keeping it in position. The mouthpiece in this instance is made of iron plate, studded with sharp points, which caused great suffering to the woman if she tried to speak. As soon as the victim had been condemned to death by witchcraft this bridle was riveted over the face and she was led through the town by a short chain, to be mocked and made the butt of all who saw her, after which she would be publicly strangled and burned. The last record of an execution of a supposed witch at Forfar, in Scotland, was in the year 1662.

Not Too Simple.

John Simple, 14 years old, of Dadson, Ala., is not as simple as you might think from his name. He saw a fellow laughing around the town and getting in a suspicious manner, and got a big heart trap where he thought he would do the most good and then told Boxmorning to find that he had been caught in the trap. Boxmorning found the man in question and John Simple is going to get the money. It's not what a boy is named, but what he does, that counts.

The Worm Turns.

His wife having spoken her mind to him for the fifty thousandth time, and having ordered him as he valued his life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness to wear the pale green tie with embroidered yellow violets which she had selected for him at a two-cent bargain counter, Mr. William Henry Peck, acted meekly to the little out-of-the-way trunk-and-satchel-cluttered room that was euphoniously termed his "den," and for an hour labored upon an epistle, which he addressed to "The Peace Committee, The Hague." This he mailed, muttering: "There! I'll show her there is a limit to endurance."

The Limit of Athletics.

"Of course," began the idealistic girl, "I can accomplish many acrobatic feats by now. I can climb a greased pole, dangle from the portals, ring, handle the dumb bells and turn a double somersault without landing on my head over the top, and wheel my flying to go over on chest a surface, or without flying, walk along the top of a fence post without falling off, and I can ride it gracefully, before the baseball and gigantic forms of the car starting — and find me in the [illegible]

THE MORAL OF ROY ROYAL.

Something We Can Learn from the Teachings of History.

It is possible to crush and destroy that which we esteem in the mind of God to be a power for good in the church? Is it possible, on the other hand, for holy and noble souls to make mistakes and to be overmuch governed in the estimate of any aspect of truth, so far forget that the whole is greater than the part, and that the whole body must be duly framed and fitly joined together through that which every joint supplieth, if the body is to grow unto edification and be built up in love. There is nothing in all history which we more neglect than the teachings of history; there is nothing which will at once so cheer and so warn us as those teachings. In a book the value of which is out of all proportion to its size, an ancient philosophy of organized history has told us how to use these teachings. The dreaming tendencies of spiritual thought alike spring from the teaching of our Lord himself. They are not philosophic but complimentary, they are both necessary to the church. When shall we learn this lesson for all time? When shall we keep the Christian creed whole and undefiled recognizing that there always must be divergencies? The Puritan, the Catholic, each in his own way, has but caught a glimpse of the mystic and the disciplinarian, will always be found side by side in the Catholic church. The work of Roy Royal is the story of these divergencies in thought—Jesuit and Port Royalist represented two tendencies. The latter in seventeenth century was not ripe for reformation. Port Royal was crushed and banished because it stood for what was unworthy as against the worldly world.—From "The Story of Port Royal," by Ethel Romanes.

Table Implements That Had to Be Made to Order.

Six hundred and forty forks, silver plated and each 8 feet long, formed a part of the baggage of E. Kennedy, purser, who left Philadelphia recently for Point Barrow, Alaska, says the Philadelphia Record. Each of the forks weighed 2 pound and a half and the whole 1,600 pounds weighed nearly half a ton. The forks were in packages of 10 each, 64 packages in all, and the whole divided into two cases, which left Philadelphia by rail. WISDOM FROM THE BENCH.

Prussian Judges Deliver Strange But Sensible Decisions.

The court at Schoneso was sitting to hear bastardy cases, and especially pleas by the local saloonkeepers for an extension of the closing hour from 11 to 12:30. The saloonkeepers were supported by a great number of witnesses who testified that the whole town was for the change to the later hour. The judges retired to consider, and when they appeared their chief said: "We shall take great pleasure in granting the extension, but the plea must be supported by the signatures of at least ten married women." The saloonkeepers and their other friends have since been engaged in a fruitless search for these ten ladies. At Dortmund there was a girl with her baby before the court claiming support from a man whom she alleged was its father. The man denied the paternity and in a valuable manner, in reply to the questions of the court, pointed out the differences between his own features and those of the infant. "You're the father right enough," said the judge. "If you were not you would know nothing of the baby's looks. Twenty marks ($5) a month."

AIR FAMINE AND ITS EFFECTS

People Slow in Recognizing Importance of Pure Air.

As buildings are now constructed and overheated, many people have to spend at least a part of their waking hours in a fetid atmosphere, says a writer in The Delineator, but there is no excuse for sleeping in such an atmosphere. We spend one-third of our lives in sleep; we also breathe more deeply when asleep than when awake, and we should sleep in the open air, or as near to it as possible. Walk through a residence street at night and look at the bedrooms; where they are all tightly closed. Occasionally one is a stingy three or four inches down from the top. This is done by some advanced individual to let out the bad air. If all the bad air went out of that room there would be no air left. There should be no bad air in a bedroom. Every window and door of the bedroom should stand wide open every night in the year. The air should be the same inside as outside. While asleep the lungs should be connected with outside air just as they are when we walk the street. Sufficient covering should be used to keep the body warm at night just as we put on sufficient clothing to keep it warm when we go outside. Only the face is exposed under this condition.

HIT BY A PITCHED BALL

Attempted to Dodge a Wild Pitch But Ball Curved and Hit Him Behind the Ear.—Other State News.

John Heyse, a young man who has been managing an elevator business at Ushling was killed in a baseball game when Art Warner, pitcher for the Oakland team, hit him above the ear with a pitched ball. Heyse was at bat at the time. Pitcher Wagner threw wild and he attempted to dodge, but the curve fooled him and the ball struck him.

Heyse fell to the ground and lay there a minute, but was able to get up and trot down to first base. There he became ill and asked for someone to relieve him. He walked five blocks to his home and went to bed. Local physicians who examined him found his skull fractured. They telephoned to Omaha to get surgeons to perform an operation. Before his surgeons arrived Heyse had expired.

The young man was well known in the vicinity of Ushling, having lived with his father, who owns a big stock farm in the Iowa was established a couple of years ago. He was about twenty-two years of age.

STATE WANTS PENSION MONEY

Desires Old Soldiers Receiving More Than $12 a Month to Pay.

The board of public lands and buildings is considering the adoption of a rule that will compel members of the soldiers' homes who receive more than $12 a month to pay a percentage of their pension to the state funds of the homes. Until recently very few soldiers received more than $12 a month pension, but now many receive more. The notice of the board says if pensioners who receive $12 a month to retain all the pension money, but to pay to the home all in excess of that amount. As few received more than $12 a month the change in the rules have been very small. Governor Shelton was not entirely in favor of the proposed rule, but it received considerable support from Land Commissioner Eaton, Secretary of State Junkin, Attorney General Thompson and Treasurer Brian. The rule which appeared to meet with favor from a majority is as follows:

"All who are members of the home at the time of the adoption of these rules, or who may hereafter become such, who are receiving or who may hereafter receive a pension in excess of $12 and not more than $19 shall pay to the home each month from the

SCHOOL NOTES

The new boiler has at last arrived and is being placed ready for use next week.

John McClain and Clark Widdifield visited the High School Monday afternoon.

The high school is contemplating the purchase of a new piano in the future. To raise funds for this purpose a series of programs will be given in the Assembly room by students of the high school. The first of these will be given Friday evening, October 11th by the Senior class. An admission fee of 10c will be charged. Plan to attend. See program elsewhere.

The pupils of the third grade wrote compositions the other day, making up the story from a picture. The one written by Bessie Shorter was adjudged the best and is given herewith.

Once upon a time there were some children came home from school and asked their mamma if they could pop corn. She told them they might, so Mary shelled the corn and Raymond popped it on the fire place. After the corn was popped, Mary got her doll and they sat down and ate the corn. Then they played and they had a little play dinner. They had pop corn, nuts and apples.

Wayne Broyles, Theophil Broder and John Stevens have begun work in the eight grade. This class now numbers 30.

Arrangements have been made to heat the reading room open through out the day. A high school pupil has charge of the library during the each period.

While at work making some repairs on the fence on his place north of town late Saturday afternoon, Albert Leeper, one of the best known farmers and stock men in this section was the victim of a very dangerous and peculiar accident. In driving a staple he accidentally made a miss tick with the hammer and the steel head of the tool came against his leg with great force. Besides painfully bruising the member it severed the artery and the blood flew from the vein in a stream. He started to limp to the house but became faint from loss of blood before he had proceeded very far and finally dropped unconscious to the ground. He was found sometime later in this serious condition and was taken to his home. A physician was summoned and the vein was closed. The victim of the accident is now much better but realizes that he had a close call for his life.—Advo to Republican.

The Republican gracefully apologizes for having forgotten to float the name of David K Miller for state senator in the ticket at the head of its columns and then adds:

"And now The Republican invites the special attention of the Argus to the fact that the primary election held on September 3rd. the republicans of Pawnee county nominated Hon C W Collins for coroner."

We regret the omission of Dr. Collins' name and thank the Republican for calling our attention to it. It appears this week however, in it's proper place in the list of names of the other candidates on the ticket.

LAND LAND LAND

Land that grows 18 to 25 tons of sugar beets to the acre, 200 to 400 bushels of potatoes, 40 to 100 bushels of oats, 25 to 60 bushels of corn to the acre, and all kinds of fruit, berries and melons in abundance. Rich, virgin soil, that grows immense crops like magic, when the water that the U. S. government provides at cost, is flowed upon it. There is no such thing as crop failure under irrigation. The farmer plants his crop and absolutely controls the amount of water his crops need at exactly the proper time, and he can grow more profitable crops than he can grow in any natural rainfall country, such as sugar beets and alfalfa. Government statistics show that irrigated land will produce from one-third to one-half more crops than any natural rainfall country. Officials of the U. S. Reclamation Service say that the North Platte project, which will irrigate the land we are selling, is best adapted to irrigation of any land in the country, and the supply of water is unlimited.

Reuters, Why pay from $5 to $10 an acre rent, for land when you can get 160 acres of fine irrigated land for about the same money you are paying for one year's rent of an eastern farm?

Come to the New Land and get a free farm that will grow larger crops than the high priced land you are renting. Uncle Sam will irrigate you with water to irrigate 160 acres of the most productive land in the country at cost. I can secure you a fine 160 acre, irrigable farm for from $1 to $5 per acre.

Don't Wait! It won't last long. Thousands of people are flocking to this country, and the sooner you come the better bargain you can get. Don't waste your life renting somebody else's farm, at a high price. Come to the rich and fertile North Platte valley, and make a home and fortune for yourself and family. Don't neglect this splendid opportunity. There's big money in it. This land that you can now secure for practically nothing, will be worth from $100 to $300 per acre as soon as irrigated and improved. It is better land than Colorado land, that is now selling for as much. You can hire all the work done on sugar beets for $45 an acre, and at the average yield of 20 tons an acre, you can clear $55 an acre and do no work on it yourself.

Farm Owners, Why farm $400 eastern land when you can buy irrigated land here from one-tenth to one-fourth the money, and get land that will produce larger crops and increase rapidly in value? Sell out and come to the rich North Platte valley. We are not pioneering. There are no hardships in this country—town, railroads, schools and churches are close at hand. The Platte Valley is centrally located and convenient to all markets. Railroad communications are unexcelled to all good shipping points. All kinds of produce, cattle, hogs and sheep command a high price. The Burlington R. R. now runs through the valley and the Union Pacific is rapidly pushing work on a through line to the coast, which line also runs through the valley. Thousands and thousands of tons of hay are cut in the river bottoms every year.

Investors, We can sell you deeded land that is increasing rapidly in value and will continue to increase in value for years to come. Irrigated land is not subject to to the depression in land values that always go with a period of crop failures in any natural rainfall country. No matter what the weather you can grow a crop every year under irrigation. I control the sale of thousands of acres of irrigated and dry lands, hay land and ranches. I can secure you any kind of land at a price that will make money quickly for you.

Write today for further information. Local real estate dealers correspond; we can make some money for you.

Through the agency of Colwell & Covert a deal was consummated whereby Mr. L. L. Walker took possession of the Murphy hotel on Monday. Mr. Walker comes to us from Lincoln and he has been on the road for a great many years, knows the wants of the public for a good hotel and will endeavor to meet that want. Mr. Murphy has lived here for more than fifteen years, and has owned the hotel property for seven of eight years, remodeling and fitting it up until it is one of the best hotel properties in the state. We do not know what Mr. Murphy's plans are for the future are, but he has many friends here who wish him success wherever he goes. He will retain the ownership of the building having sold only the fixtures and furniture and leasing the building to Mr. Walker.

The State Conventions

REPUBLICAN AND DEMOCRATIC DELEGATES MEET UNDER NEW CONDITIONS AND ADOPT PLATFORMS

Under the new primary law all parties held state conventions in Lincoln September 24. The different meetings were harmonious, and everything was expedited. The new law provides that state conventions shall be composed of one delegate from each county. In the republican convention two-thirds of the counties were represented, in the democratic meeting about half, and twenty-six counties had delegates in the populist convention. The general opinion was that the new way would prove satisfactory.

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

Have a Businesslike Session and Completes Task Early.

The Nebraska republican state convention met in Representative hall Tuesday, Sept. 24 and was presided over by Governor George Lawson Sheldon. It adopted a platform that contains an endorsement of Secretary of War Taft, endorses the present state administration, commends the legislature for its fulfillment of republican pledges, approves the state railway commission and calls for an amendment to the national judiciary law that will deprive the courts of the present efficient jurisdiction of corporations. The platform calls upon the state railway commission to investigate whether it only gives equitable rates "but also principle of their line," are on the list of pass holders. The platform was drafted by a committee made up of two members from each congressional district with Ross Hammond of Fremont chairman.

A state committee was selected and provisions were made by resolution for it to meet within ten days before the adjournment of the convention.

In assuming the chair, Governor Sheldon said:

Fellow Members of the Convention: I thank you sincerely for the great honor you have bestowed upon me. It is the most appreciated honor that comes to me entirely unsolicited. We are here to formulate a platform of principles for the greatest party in the country. The republican party is the people's party. Its principles are those which promote in the highest degree the welfare of the people of this commonwealth and of the nation. I will not encroach upon your time to make an extended speech. I thank you again for the honor, and trusting that you will keep faith with the people of the state in the principles that you adopt. I ask you, what is your further pleasure.

A. H. Kidd of Beatrice was made secretary.

Following are some excerpts from the platform:

"The platform pledges of political parties mean something only when read in the light of the record of achievement. In our rare privilege to call attention anew to the platform promulgated by Nebraska republicans a year ago, whose every promise has been carried out in scrupulous good faith, we point proudly to the record of the people of this state the following reforms:

"1. A state-wide direct primary.

"2. Abolition of the free pass evil.

"3. Comprehensive powers for the state railway commission.

"4. More equitable rates for transportation of passengers and freight.

"5. Equal taxation of railroad property for public purposes.

"6. Abolition of fellow servant law and full employer's liability.

"7. A pure food and dairy law.

"8. Rigid economy in appropriations.

"Every one of these pledges has been redeemed.

"We express our satisfaction with the operation of the new primary law. It gives to the individual the same equal rights in the selection of all candidates that is given in the election that follows.

"We endorse the work of the state railway commission and expect it to continue to be a serviceable instrument in enforcing the laws without fear or favor and to deal speedily, impartially and justly with all complaints against the roads. And we especially commend the present efforts of the commission to effect a reasonable additional reduction in grain rates.

"We believe the federal judiciary law should be amended to define the difference between corporations for the purposes of jurisdiction of federal courts by providing that for the purpose of jurisdiction of federal courts corporations organized under the laws of any state shall be deemed citizens of such state where it has filed or is required by law of that state to file in the manner required of domestic corporations, a duly certified copy of its charter. And in addition thereto that every foreign corporation, or its successors, assignee, lessees, exercising or claiming the right to exercise the right of eminent domain, under a state law, shall be deemed a citizen of that state for the purposes of jurisdiction of federal courts.

"We favor the enactment of a federal law and if necessary an amendment to the federal constitution which will forbid the federal courts from issuing writs of injunction against state officers charged by law with the enforcement of state statutes.

"We regard with high favor the nomination of the ticket and invite all voters who believe in official probity and efficiency to join in electing them."

GETS PART OF BACK SALARY.

Governor Folk Awarded $2,052 Instead of $6,833.

A decision was rendered in St. Louis by Circuit Judge Kinsey in the suit of Governor Folk to obtain back salary at the rate of $5,000 a year he contended was due him for his term as circuit attorney. The decision holds that as circuit attorney the salary due Governor Folk should be fixed at $4,000. Under the charter Governor Folk will receive in back pay from the city of St. Louis $2,052, instead of $6,833 for which he sued.

ACROSS OCEAN BY WIRELESS.

Marconi Says It Will Be Possible in Three Weeks.

Declaring that he intended to stay in Glace Bay until wireless communication with Europe had been placed on a commercial basis, Guglielmo Marconi, who is at Glace Bay, N. S., said to the Associated Press:

"We have finally overcome all obstacles and in a short three weeks will commence a commercial transatlantic wireless service."

He stated that bad weather would not affect the service, provided the masts and poles used in the wireless system remained undamaged; that the average speed used in sending messages would be twenty words a minute, and that the rate would be 10 cents a word for ordinary commercial messages and 5 cents a word for press dispatches. This rate, he said, would be cut in two later.

WAYLAY, BUT FAIL TO ROB.

Treasurer of Company at Waterloo, Iowa, Escapes Thieves.

A special from Waterloo, Iowa, says: Frederick B. Hallen, secretary and treasurer of the Haughan Manufacturing company, was waylaid by robbers late in the evening and shot because he refused to surrender $1,000 in currency, which he was carrying to the factory for the company. Despite a severe wound in the face, he drove rapidly to the factory, thus escaping with the money. He will recover. The highwaymen fled to the river and escaped in a boat to a dense wooded glen. A posse is in pursuit.

CAN JOIN NATIONAL GUARD.

Postoffice Department Believes in Fostering the Organization.

An order of the postmaster general setting forth the future attitude of the postoffice department concerning employes in the postal service who are members of the national guard has been made public. Leaves of absence with pay, authorized by law, will be granted to postal employes who are members of the guard, when called upon to perform military duty by competent authorities. The order says:

"Postmasters should indicate that the national guard should be encouraged in every way."

THINK BETTER OF IT NOW.

Railroads Decide to Give Kansas the 2-Cent Fare.

At an all-day conference in Chicago Monday between presidents of the Kansas railroads and their general counsel it was decided to put the 2-cent rate into effect. The decision was rendered by the commission of that state recently, provided it can be done, and still preserve the right of the roads to contest in the courts. When the commission order was promulgated the railroad presidents declared they would not comply, but would permit October 4, the date fixed by the commission for the new rates to go into effect, to pass unnoticed.

Before, with Jefferson, in "the support of the state governments in all their rights and the most competent administrations for our domestic concerns and the most bulwark against anti-republican tendencies; and in "the preservation of the general government in the whole constitutional vigor, as the sheet anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad;" we are opposed to the centralization implied in the suggestions now frequently made, that the powers of the general government should be extended by judicial construction. While we favor the exercise by the general government of all its constitutional authority for the prevention of monopoly and for the regulation of interstate commerce, we insist that federal remedies shall be added to, and not substituted for state remedies.

We insist upon the recognition of the distinction between a natural person and the artificial person, called a corporation, and we favor the enactment of such laws as may be necessary to compel foreign corporations to submit their legal disputes to the courts of the states in which they do business, and thus place themselves upon the same footing as domestic corporations.

Incidentally the railroad commission which was created by an amendment to the constitution has no power to fix rates, therefore we demand that the governor shall call an extra session of the legislature and that that body shall establish maximum rates upon grain, live stock, fruit, vegetables, building material, fuel, and such kindred products as enter into the necessities of life.

Besides these, the platform favors election of senators by direct vote, declares a private monopoly indefensible and intolerable, favors an income tax; welcomes Oklahoma to the sisterhood of states; favors separate statehood for Arizona and New Mexico and the speedy completion of the Panama canal; favors a generous pension policy, and condemns impeachment; favors state and national boards of arbitration and opposes government by injunction, and favors the immediate revision of the tariff.

Unwritten Law a Defense.

Amdor C. Campbell, a wealthy lumber merchant of Antigo, Wis., who killed Dr. Benjamin F. Harris in the stock exchange building in Chicago last winter, and whose defense was "the unwritten law," found mercy at the hands of a jury, which found him guilty of manslaughter in Judge Windes's court, Chicago. Accompanying the verdict was a recommendation by the jury that the punishment be fixed at one year in the penitentiary, the minimum penalty allowed by law. The finding was reached after eight hours of discussion in the jury room.

$60,000 OUTFIT FOR SHABBY MISS LIBERTY

NEW YORK.—Miss Liberty of Bedloe's island served notice a short time since that the inside fortification and surrounding her really must be graded and sloped, and the same must be done for the exterior walls, steps and wharf if she was expected to stand perpetually on the island. So James H. Ferguson of this city has got the contract to do this, getting $14,145 for the first job and $2,945 for the second. Then Miss Liberty gets new footgear, the McHarg-Barton company having agreed to furnish the pedestal with a granite facing to the outside steps, the pavements and terraplein for $22,400.

The pedestal is to be repaired and the interior of the lady put in shape for $7,800, while a new bronze dress will cost $1,800.

Then an elevator concern is to install a fast elevator to run through Miss Liberty's huge right arm for $10,890, and a spiral stairway to her shoulders, so that Miss Liberty can at last "she will like that, Dear me! When they construct spiral stairways inside one, with care and things, what is the world coming to? It will only mean so many more people climbing around your ribs or shooting up through your spinal column.

That's what she thinks, for she has confided her views on the matter to the seagulls, which talk at every one, and to the skippers of the great ocean liners going out and the five-day boats plowing in over the top from Europe. If it had not been that the captains, the pilots, the sailormen and the gulls signified to her in their various ways that they liked to see their "best girl" decked out as finely as possible she might not have cared a bit. But Miss Liberty is not sure that she will not think more of that

Nuts as the dietrigh of the would-be food reformer opens quite of all sorts, says a writer in McClure's. These pious-eyed specimens with specific for and withdrawn by those who regard all foods of animal origin as "tainted meaty," besmirched by the foul crime of murder. Nuts, we are told, are foodstuffs par excellence, and nuts, Brazil nuts, pecans, peanuts—of a high degree of toothsomeness and attractiveness, not excessive in cost "grade," and containing a larger per centage of bone protein and fat. Analysis made in the laboratory absolutely confirm the truth of the statement. Nuts and potatoes are both present in large amounts and in readily digestible form; and yet practically no "unemancipated" specimen of the human race—except the Shawnee Indian in advisory mit time—will attempt to make a meal on nuts, regarding them simply as a bonne bouche, to be taken after the serious business of the meal is over, merely as a dessert. The tacit phrase of the waiters and the wise expresses precisely where they are in the scale of the normal diet list.

OLD WALL USED AS A SAFE.

...Vermonter Finds Purse and Coin Hid ... ...Nearly a Century Ago.

While Louis Granelle of Bridgewater, Vt., was tearing down an old wall at the Bridgewater town farm he unearthed a purse hidden in a small vault built for the purpose between two stones. The leather was rotten with age and fell apart as soon as handled, but the several coins which it contained were as bright and fresh as on the day they left the mint. One of the newest coin in the lot was struck off 70 years ago and the structure was built about 1825. It is believed that the purse was left in the vault three quarters of a century. The money found in the old wallet included 15 silver half dollars, ranging in date from 1813 to 1835, and another coins probably an English fourpence, dated 1776. There were also three dimes issued in the year. Mr. Granelle would not part with his souvenirs at any price.

Giants of Other Days.

According to accounts in an old... ...gold book, 1752, the ancient giant reached the enormous height of 7 feet 31 says: "Facellus relates, and from this Cluverius, that 1547 in the town Pasenmun, in Sicily, the body of a giant was dug up about 18 cubits, or 27 feet tall. The same author relates that A. D. 1516, near Misenum, in Sicily, there was found the body of a giant 20 cubits, or 30 feet, tall. Further, that A. D. 1546, near Syracuse, was dug up another body of the same dimensions. Fabius Columna tells us that in Sicily was dug up a body 53 feet high and whose skulls was about 10 feet in circumference. These is described the corpse of a giant of great size, found standing in a vast cave near Depranum, in Sicily, A. D. 1249, whose stature was like the mast of a ship, and the bones of whose skull would contain a Sicilian bushel, which is about a third of an American bushel.

What He Wanted.

An Indiana merchant ordered the story of a Portland street hardware and seed dealer, says the Boston Record, and in big broken English asked the clerk: "John, you got to do me chine make—a hurry sole." The clerk tried hard to understand what the customer wanted, but was unable until he started taking them around the store and pointed out individually every conceivable apparatus pertaining to heating in the store. Finally the Hebrew asked if everything had been demanded in the upper shelf with the indicator displayed. "John—I see die—a one," he said, "but de sam ex plain, you summer makes—a hot—a feel. You got one?" He wanted a thermometer.

Benediction.

They were sloping, and the stern parent was supposed to be in pursuit but he wasn't. On the contrary, a telegram awaited them at the next town. In it fearfulness of the situation was made so he handed it to the angelic one. She read it through and burst into tears. "Come, come, sweetheart, don't do that," he said, "it's all right now, and I offer congratulations." That meaty action meets with our approval. We can now carry out a plan that we have long contemplated, and have not mentioned only because we had you with us. In other words, we are about to break up housekeeping and go into a hotel.

She had just returned from Europe, and had been met at the pier by a New York friend who was bearing her off to the seashore. En route to the ferry she was regaled with the news—social, personal, and what not—and among other things the dinner given by Newrich to Consul, the chimpanzee. "I'm," she meditated; "well, you know we are told that water will find its level." "I wonder," retorted her escort, "what the chimpanzee found."

What the Teacher Did.

Part of Physiognomy Embarrassing to Bashful Young Man.

Here is a story that is being told on a New York man who teaches a Sunday school class in North Baltimore. It has been told on other young men before, and there is a strong probability that it never happened at all in this particular young man, but for friendly ears attached the story to him, and when Jo his discomfiture, he must bear it in the first place, he is very bashful, and the readiest made by the Sunday school superintendent that he take a class of young ladies, who had just lost their previous teacher, was thunderous enough. The previous teacher had been a charming woman, and her loss was due to marriage with a Washington man. The class of 12 charming young ladies waited while the young man was being brought from the other side of the room, where he had been the presiding genius of a class of small boys. "This is my class, ladies," announced the superintendent, as his man consented to become your teacher, and I am sure he will find it a pleasant one." Gulped the young man.

Slowly, surely crushed Mr. Y. I shall be charmed, perfectly charmed, and then as the superintendent moved away, fearing his bashful one might be scared, he rushed into his duties at once—and now, ladies, if you will tell me what your former teacher always did first we will try and start in the same program." There was a few moments silence, then a pert looking young miss, casting down her glances from the entirely perplexed young man, really went to do that way. Miss Grace always kissed us good morning." This may or may not be true, but the young man declared the people who are telling it are mean.

52,000 TONS OF CURRANTS.

Britons Seem to Be Exceptionally Fond of This Fruit.

Our great-grandmothers, although they had to pay a very high price for dried currants, considered them quite indispensable to the compounding of those big, fruitless and farinaceous puddings which were the pride of every housewife. Domestic catering must have been as arduous undertaking in those days, for currants and other dried fruits were not to be procured out of London except once a year, at the annual fair of the local market town. The royal dish of plum porridge, without which it was no Christmas, was composed largely of currants, the fruit being stewed in strong beef soup enriched with red wine and red sack. Now that the order has changed and simplicity is the keynote of the high-class cookery we Britons have credited our appreciation of the home and wholesome currants; and although forestimes add plum porridge is plenty of the year, no less than 52,000 tons of currants go every year to the making of bread cakes, pastries and puddings to tempt the British appetite.—Ladies' Pictorial.

On the Death of Salmon.

There can be but austere and serious thoughts in all hearts when a human soul enters the mysterious trance that, another life, when one of these beings who have long soared above the crowd on the visible wings of genius, spreading all at once their wings, which we did not see, plumes swiftly into the unknown; no, it is not night, it is light. It is not the end, it is the beginning; it is not extinction, it is eternity. Is it not true, such tombs as this demonstrate immortality in the presence of the illustrious dead we feel most distinctly the divine destiny of that intelligence which traverses the earth to suffer and to purify itself—which we call man.—Victor Hugo.

Explanation Was Necessary.

As the Prairie dog was at last detached from the trousers leg of the new milkman by Mr. Pratt's vigorous efforts the victim of his misfortune began to express his mind with considerable freedom. "I wouldn't keep a dog like that," he said, indignantly, but Mr. Pratt broke in before he had time to say any more. "He's only playful, that's all," he insisted, and at the same time he pressed something into the new milkman's hand. The man glanced at the wad of green, and then, as he transferred it to a safe pocket, his expression changed. "I guess I can take a little fun as well as anybody," he said, dryly. "But till you explained it, I had a notion that dog was in earnest when he bit that piece out of my trousers."—Youth's Companion.

Beak Too Much for Her.

Minnie was a nice, well-behaved little girl, but she was "awfully particular" about what she ate. Of course her mother tried every means to break her of this habit. So when she saw Minnie eyeing the egg before her disdainfully she said, rather sharply: "There's nothing the matter with the egg, my child; you must eat all of it." Minnie said not a word, but reverently commenced to rest the top plain of the egg. Presently she appealed to her mother. "Mamma," said she, "must I really eat the beak, too?"

The Truth About Digestion

Did it ever occur to you that the digestive apparatus of the two different classes of farm animals are entirely different and that they naturally require entirely different feeds? For example, cattle, sheep and cattle are good for foods that would be poison to poultry and hogs. Poultry and hogs require feeds entirely different from cattle, sheep and horses. Gold Coin Tonics are adapted to these different digestive apparatus. Gold Coin Cattle Tonic is for cattle, "Gold Coin Hog Tonic" for hogs and, "Gold Coin Poultry Tonic" for poultry.

PRIMARY FIGHT IN COURTS

Mandamus Case Started in Dakota to Place Name on Ticket.

Thomas Sullivan, jr., of Jackson, a former county commissioner of Dakota county and for years prominent in Dakota City democratic politics is in the county seat attorney, Paul Piper, of Dakota City, has filed his application in the district court asking for a writ of mandamus to compel W. L. Ross, county clerk, to place the following names on the official ballot to be voted at the coming November election: Treasurer, John Krueger; clerk, Milo Baker; judge, J. J. Maddigan; clerk of district court, Paul Piper; commissioner, Charles Ostmyer; assessor, Carl Larsen. At the recent primary election the democratic voters had but two candidates—sheriff and county superintendent of schools—who complied with the provisions of the new primary law in filing their nominating petitions with the county clerk and having the prescribed fee with the treasurer. The democrats of St. John's precinct, in which Jackson is located, and which is the strong democratic precinct of the county, evidently caucussed together and at the primary election wrote the above names on the tickets they voted to the number of 200 more than were cast. The matter is now in the hands of the courts and made warm friends. This is the first time the Smith family has been together for twenty-two years. Mrs. C. North, who presided, provided the method was legal. County Clerk Ross refused the demand of Mr. Sullivan to place the names so voted for on the November election ballot as the democratic nominees, and it is now sought to compel him to do so by the courts. The matter is set for hearing October 7, before District Judge A. A. Welch, who is officiating as judge in place of Judge Guy T. Graves, upon request.

Parlins versus the Missouri Pacific company and has again affirmed a judgment of $7,468.09, obtained by the plaintiff in the district court of Sarpy county. While there still remained 26,816 yards to be delivered, the defendant decided that the gravel which was being delivered was not suitable for ballast and declined to receive any more.

ESCAPE IS CUT OFF

POT OF LIQUID METAL UPSET

Four Men Killed and Twenty Others Fatally Hurt.—Were Given No Warning.—No Chance to Escape After Accident.

A Butler, Pa., October 6 dispatch says: An explosion, caused by the upsetting of the metal pot in the number 1 cupola of the Standard Steel company tonight caused the death of four men, fatally injured twenty and seriously injured twenty others. Nearly all the men were foreigners.

The large wheel plant was demolished, causing a loss estimated at $100,000. The dead: Nick Dorna, Nicholas Blotar, John Sterock, and an unidentified man.

The condition of the thirty men injured is pitiable. Although still alive, the features of a majority are mutilated beyond recognition. The hot metal was showered over them, causing horrible injuries. Arms, fingers and ears were torn off while a number of the men lost eyes, burned out. Several men are in the hospital with their legs burned to a crisp.

The explosion was caused by the upsetting of a pot in the cupola which contained 6,000 pounds of olten metal ready for casting.

A span in the pot broke, allowing the liquid iron to spill over the wet sand. An explosion followed so quickly that none of the workmen in the building had a chance to escape. Streams of the burning metal poured out on the workmen, some of whom were smothered to death in the sand. Others were engulfed and literally cooked. Twenty men near the cupola had every shred of clothing blown off by the explosion. Many were buried under the wreckage and were not rescued for an hour after the catastrophe. Buildings in the vicinity felt the force of the explosion, quivered as if shaken by an earthquake and people rushed from their homes panic-stricken. When the alarm was sent from the burning car works, 10,000 persons rushed to the scene, blocking streets and interfering with fire companies and ambulances. Through lack of room, many of the injured were compelled to lie naked for an hour on cots in the street cars before reaching the hospital. At the gate of the car plant men and women struggled frantically to secure admission and were kept out only by the assistance of a force of policemen. In the rush many women were injured and their cries of pain and anguish could be heard blocks away. The car wheel plant employed last year a force of $200,000. The wrecked cupola alone cost $30,000. The car works proper costing $2,000,000, was in danger of destruction but the fire department soon had the blaze under control.

SUPPRESSION OF WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC INSISTED ON.

THE GOVERNMENT TO MOVE

Secretary Straus Informed of Increasing Importation of Women of Ill Nationalities for Immoral Purposes.

Secretary Straus of the department of commerce and labor and Frank P. Sargent, commissioner of immigration, have determined to eliminate the "white slave" traffic from the United States post haste. On his recent trip through the northwestern and Pacific coast states, Secretary Straus's attention was directed to the increasing importation of women for immoral purposes. The Japanese and Korean exclusion league informed him that hundreds of Japanese women were being brought to America surreptitiously, and held in practical slavery, and sold by their importers.

Secretary Straus ordered a rigid investigation and it was developed that the "white slave" traffic was far more widespread than had been suspected, involving the importation into America not only of Japanese women, but of women from France, Austria, Russia and Italy.

It is proposed to have a careful inquiry instituted in all of the large cities, particularly at a report of immoral alien women will be made. Those who have not been in the country three years and are found to have been brought here illegally will be arrested and deported. Before they are returned to their native lands, however, they will be required to furnish evidence against those who brought them here and prosecutions will be begun against those responsible for the traffic.

It is proposed to make an example of such men and women by sending them to prison.

SENATOR BORAH NOT GUILTY.

Tells His Story to Court and Acquitted of Conspiracy Charge.

At Boise, Idaho, United States Senator William E. Borah was acquitted of the charge of conspiracy to defraud the government of valuable Idaho timber lands. The case was submitted without argument on the part of the defense and the jury was out just long enough to take one ballot. The verdict was greeted by cheers and applause which the court officers made no effort to restrain. This demonstration in the court room served only as a beginning. As soon as the news reached the outside, bells were rung and the fire department made a spectacular run through the principal streets stopping eventually at the Idaho hotel where Senator Borah surrounded by several hundreds of his fellow citizens was escorted.

To those who gathered about him after the trial Senator Borah said it was not the proper time for him to express an opinion of the events of the last three months. "I have felt the humiliation deeply," he continued, "especially as some of the manner in which the name of my dead friend Frank Steunenberg has been brought into the case. I am glad to say I have had the support of many of my stauncnest friends during the trial here come from the other side. The only reason I was indicted appears to have been that I was a friend of Frank Steunenberg. Again I can say to you I am proud of the honor of that friendship. But there are always some hyenas about who feed on the dead, which is the defamation of the dead."

Big Hay Crop in The Hills.

The largest crop of hay that the Black Hills and adjoining valleys and country has known in many years, is the bounty of food for a severe winter. Heretofore hay has been short but this year ranchers had splendid crops and received top prices as the quality was good. The ranges are in first class condition with a good thick crop of wild grass and the cattle are looking well and will be able to weather any amount of rough storms. While not disappointing, shipments this year will not come up to those of last year. Stacking is the rule and hay for shipment next year so the ranges will winter more than the average amount of stock.

LEEWAY FOR STATE COURTS

Action Taken at St. Louis That May Have a Far-reaching Effect On Anti-Trust Prosecutions.

A St. Louis, Missouri, October 1 dispatch says: Action that will have far-reaching effect in anti-trust and corporation litigation, and which will bear fruit in almost every state in the union, was taken by the convention of attorneys general in its final session here today. A committee was appointed to draft a scheme of anti-trust legislation to be sent to all attorneys general and as a climax for the entire meeting the attorneys general assembled adopted a resolution which is expected to remove a thorn in the flesh of state officers—the interference by federal circuit courts with the operation of state laws. Permanent organization was also effected under the name of the "national conference of attorneys general of the United States," and a united front will be presented in legal actions brought by different states against the same corporation or trust.

The resolution is in the shape of a memorial to congress and was framed by a committee composed of Attorney E. T. Young of Minnesota, Dan Malone of Massachusetts, W. M. Garber of Alabama, W. T. Thompson of Nebraska, William H. Dickson of Colorado and H. S. Hadley of Missouri.

The memorial is as follows:

"Resolved, By the convention of attorneys general of the several states here assembled, that we earnestly recommend to the favorable consideration of the president and the congress of the United States the enactment of a federal law providing that no circuit court of the United States and any judge exercising powers of such circuit courts shall have jurisdiction in any case brought to restrain any officers of a state or any administration board of a state from instituting in a state court any suit or other appropriate proceedings to enforce the laws of such state, or to enforce any order made by such administrative board, but allowing any person or corporation asserting in any such action in a state court that any statute under the constitution of any laws of the United States to have the decision of the highest court of such state reviewed by the supreme court of the United States as now provided by law.

"We also recommend that suits in federal circuit courts by persons interested in corporations to restrain such corporations from obeying the laws of state in which they are doing business be prohibited."

USES FOR OLD RAGS.

Rags and Ends Can Be Turned to Good Account.

Old ballbringan underwear and outer wash flannel may be used for wiper rags, but better still is the waste woven mop cloth which can be bought at any furniture shop. Mop-cloth is hard on cloths, and it pays to buy something woven for the purpose.

Old silk skirts and waists can be cut up and washed for dusters. Nothing except perhaps chamois is better for a piano case than soft old silk. For taking finger marks and spots off a piano case use a chamois and cold water. Polish dry with chamois or old silk. Old silk is also good for dusting bric-a-brac.

Old black stockings may be made into mitts with which to rub dust out of silk skirts. Put a mitt on either hand and rub the silk on both right and wrong side. These mitts do better work than any clothes brush made, especially if mud or clay is thickly encrusted in the silk.

Do not throw old stockings for soldiers to be used around the stove unless you cover them with ticking. Better even than stockings to fill holders is cotton waste and rags.

The best dish rags are made from cheese cloth doubled and sewed with seams turned inside. Next to cheese cloth comes old glove fabric, doubled. Either of these fabrics is so porous that grease and grime wash out easily.

Boil your rags in a washing powder and household ammonia. Do not let them get hopelessly and irremediably dirty. And have handy hooks and tacks on which to hang them where air and sunlight will strike them.

TO PICKLE SMALL CUCUMBERS.

Instructions That if Followed Will Give Best Results.

Take a hundred small cucumbers, dry-picked and fresh from the vines, wash the sand from them and wipe them dry. Place them in a large earthen jar or wooden vessel, and on top of them a pint of salt, a piece of alum size of small nutmeg and cover with boiling water. Cover with a close fitting lid or several thicknesses of paraffin paper over the top and let stand 36 hours. Take out the cucumbers, wipe them dry, place them in a clean jar in alternate layers, with following spices: Take one tablespoonful of mustard seed, one of allspice, a foot of horseradish grated or cut in thin strips, a few small red peppers and sufficient vinegar to fill the jars, which must be only two-thirds full of cucumbers. When cold cover with lids and let stand for ten days. Pour the vinegar over the pickles while boiling hot.

Frozen Maple Sirup Souffle.

One pint maple sirup, one cup of sugar, one-half cup of gelatine, one-half cup of cold water, yolks of eight eggs, one quart of cream. Mix the sugar and sirup together, cover the gelatine with cold water and soak one half hour; then add one pint of boiling water and stir until dissolved. Beat the yolks of the eggs and stir in the sirup and gelatine. Freeze. When about frozen stir in quickly the cream, which must be whipped stiff. Set aside, well packed in ice for two hours before serving. This is nice served in sherbet cups. There are innumerable reigns for these dainty cups, and they look very pretty when served with a cherry in the center of each serve. A slice of fingers of delicate frosted cake with this souffle.

Bran Gems.

This recipe is for bran gems, and delicious are they that anyone might find eating them a gastronomic delight. Take two cups of bran, which has been sifted to remove any coarse pieces, two cups of sour milk, one cupful flour, two cupfuls of sweet milk, one teaspoonful soda, a pinch of salt. Bake in gem pans in hot oven. One-third of a cupful of raisins may be added, if desired, and to be found extremely nice.

Acorn Portiere.

A new idea for the girl who has a use for odd curtailings is a portiere of acorns. It is very rich to make, gather quantities of acorns in different stages of ripening, from glossy to greens. In your leisure moments, when the blossoms open, clear a spot to color, and string them as fancy dictates—different tones to the string or one shade to one color. The effect will be better if the nuts are at the top. When fastened them on a light rod or that fits your door.

A Tasty Salad.

An attractive and tasty a salad as has been seen for many a day was served at a luncheon recently. Green pears cut into halves and bananas in halves had been covered with oil and ordered sugar and allowed to stand the ice for a couple of hours. Whipped cream topped each salad when it was sent to the table.

Shake well in a bottle and take a teaspoonful dose after each meal and at bedtime.

The above is considered by an eminent authority, who writes in a New York daily paper, as the finest prescription to relieve Backache, Kidney Trouble, Weak Bladder and all forms of Urinary difficulties. This mixture acts promptly on the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys, enabling them to filter and strain the uric acid and other waste matter from the blood which causes Rheumatism.

Any person who suffer with the afflictions may not feel inclined to place much confidence in this simple mixture, yet those who have tried it say the results are simply surprising, the relief being effected without the slightest injury to the stomach or other organs.

TO PICKLE SMALL CUCUMBERS.

Instructions That if Followed Will Give Best Results.

Take a hundred small cucumbers, dry-picked and fresh from the vines, wash the sand from them and wipe them dry. Place them in a large earthen jar or wooden vessel, and on top of them a pint of salt, a piece of alum size of small nutmeg and cover with boiling water. Cover with a close fitting lid or several thicknesses of paraffin paper over the top and let stand 36 hours. Take out the cucumbers, wipe them dry, place them in a clean jar in alternate layers, with following spices: Take one tablespoonful of mustard seed, one of allspice, a foot of horseradish grated or cut in thin strips, a few small red peppers and sufficient vinegar to fill the jars, which must be only two-thirds full of cucumbers. When cold cover with lids and let stand for ten days. Pour the vinegar over the pickles while boiling hot.

COINED A BIG WORD.

Little One Wanted to Pick the "Undershirtdrenable" Flowers.

When the first little granddaughter was big enough to want to pick the garden flowers, the grandparents tried every gulleful means to save their petunias from devastation. A truce was reached when it was agreed that Elsie might select the garden plants alone and pick only "children's flowers," a descriptive name bestowed at once by Elsie upon dandelions, buttercups, daisies and clovers. After this there was peace in the family. One day Samantha, the newest granddaughter, was contentedly pulling grasses while grandmother snipped on blossoms from the forget-me-nots. Katherine remembered that fresh flowers had always been gathered for the dinner table. She ran over to grandmother and promptly coined one of the longest words of four-year-old ever used. "Grandmother," she begged, "must I pick the underchildrenable flowers for dinner?"

Mary's Important Testimony.

Justice Brewer, of the United States supreme court is said to be the author of this story: A witness testified in a certain case that a person named Mary was present, when in particular conversation took place and the question was asked: "What did Mary say?" This was objected to and after some discussion the court ruled out the question. An exception to this decision was immediately taken and on appeal the higher court reversed the verdict and ordered a new trial on the ground that the question should have been answered. At the second trial the same inquiry was propounded and elicited the information that "Mary said nothing."

Remarkable Photography.

Photography has caught the fastest express train in motion by means of the cinematograph, and that's about the growth of a flower. A bud which burst into bloom in three days, is exposed to a camera every 15 minutes during the 16 days, and when the pictures developed from the films are animated by the cinematograph moving picture machine, the observer may see, to his delight, all in a minute or two, the gradual breaking of the bud—the blossom open, close by night and reopen in the morning, the leaves grow under the eye, the stem shoot up from covert, and, finally, the full-blown flower.

Sea Trout Fattened.

A sea trout was caught at Aberdeen recently, which swam 120 miles in 48 days, and doubled its weight on the way. It was marked and put into the Dee at Banchory, Kincardine, and when recaught at Aberdeen, its length was not increased, its rapid gain in weight being due to corpulence.

TRANSFORMATIONS.

Curious Results When Coffee Drinking is Abandoned.

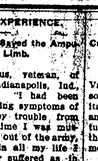
It is almost as hard for an old coffee toper to quit the use of coffee as it is for a whisky or tobacco fiend to break off, except that the coffee user can quit coffee and take up Postum without any feeling of a loss of the morning beverage, for when Postum is well boiled and served with cream that is really better in point of flavor than most of the coffee served nowadays, and the taste of coffee is entirely lost in the delightful flavor of fine, mild cereal.

A most transformation takes place in the body within ten days or two weeks after coffee is left off and Postum used, for the reason that the poison to the nerves—caffein—has been discontinued, and in its place is taken a liquid food that contains the most powerful elements of nourishment.

It is easy to make this test and prove these statements by changing from coffee to Postum—start "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

A TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

How a Veteran Was Saved the Amputation of a Limb.



B. Frank Doremus, veteran, of Roosevelt avenue, Indianapolis, Ind., says: "I had been growing symptoms of kidney trouble from the time I was mustered out of the army, but as all my life I never suffered as the 1897. Headaches, dizziness and sleeplessness, first, and then dropsy. I was weak and helpless, having run down from 180 to 125 pounds. I was having terrible pain in the kidneys, and the secretions passed almost involuntarily. My left leg swelled until it was 24 inches around, and the doctor tapped it night and morning until I could no longer stand it, and then he advised amputation. I refused, and began using Doan's Kidney Pills. The swelling subsided gradually, the urine became natural, and all my pains and aches disappeared. I have been well now for nine years since using Doan's Kidney Pills."

ON A MACKEREL SCHOONER.

The routine life on a mackerel schooner is not strenuous. The crew consists of 14 men, a skipper and cook. Two men constitute a watch, one aloft as a lookout, the other at the wheel, so that each man has two hours on duty, and then 15 hours off, before his turn comes around again. During this period he may be called on to shorten sail, wash the deck or to perform other work. Half of the crew hate their bunks forward with the cook, who is king of the forecastle, and the rest sleep aft with the captain. We were assigned to a double bunk aft, where we were not troubled with galley smells, but had to be on our good behavior. All the toilet and bevels were forward. The crew ate in two shifts, the older men with the skipper.—Travel Magazine.

SLEEP BROKEN BY ITCHING.

Eczema Covered Whole Body for a Year—No Relief Until Cuticura Remedies Prove a Success.

"For a year I have had what they call eczema. I had an itching all over my body, and would rather die for the night it would keep me awake half the night, and the more I would scratch the more it would itch. I tried all kinds of remedies, but could get no relief.

"I used one cake of Cuticura Soap, one box of Cuticura, and two vials of Cuticura Resolvent Pills, which cost me a dollar and twenty-five cents in all, and am very glad I tried them, for I was completely cured. Walter W. Pagitsch, 207 N. Robey St., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 8 and 16, 1906."

Billions in New Securities.

Close to a billion dollars of new bonds and shares were issued in Wall street from January 1st last July. The railroads, which have been the greatest borrowers, issued the great bulk of these securities. In taking its lines from Jersey City to Long Island the Pennsylvania company has been spending $100,000,000.—Boston Globe.

All Explained.

There is a little story going round the house of commons about a certain member who abstained from voting on the Scottish church question. Questioned by one of his friends as to the reason for his abstention, he replied: "Well, my dear fellow, it's just like Jeremy Diddler's wife in John Bull."

HIS MEMORY WAS GOOD.

Commodore Vanderbilt Had Not Forgotten Old Days.

The coming of age of Miss Gladys Vanderbilt and the payment to her of some twelve millions of dollars inheritance has brought out a new crop of anecdotes about the Vanderbilt fortune. One of the latest illustrates the democratic spirit of the old commodore.

Sitting on the porch of a fashionable hotel at a fashionable resort on one occasion, it is related, the commodore saw a lady approaching with whom he was acquainted. His wife and daughter, who recognized her, could scarcely contain their anger when he arose and politely addressed her.

"Don't you know," said the daughter after she had gone, "that horrid woman used to sell poultry to us?"

"Yes," responded the old millionaire, "and I remember when your mother sold root beer and I peddled oysters in New Jersey."

The Shah on His Travels.

How the shah of Persia left Teheran in his journey to Europe in 1900 is described by the author of "Through Persia in a Motor Car." The imperial baggage consisted of what were sacks of corn and barley, a school globe and a colossal musical box—as four hours rolling through Teheran in the midst, on a diminutive donkey, came a little man with a gray beard and spectacles, who carried an enormous wallet, out of which he took a pocket clockwork article, among others a huge open telescope. This was his sacred majesty's astrologer.

Laundry Work at Home.

Laundry work at home would be much more satisfactory if the right starch were used. In order to get the desired stiffness, it is usually necessary to use so much starch that the beauty and fineness of the fabric is hidden behind a pasty coating of varying thickness, which not only destroys the appearance, but also affects the wearing quality of the goods. This trouble can be entirely overcome by using Defiance Starch, as it will be applied much more thinly because of its greater strength than other makes.

A Ventilation Test.

It is very hard to make an impression on those people who defend their possessions on all occasions. A lady was explaining to a visitor the many advantages of concrete hollow-block construction, of which the walls of her new home were built.

"The air spaces in the walls afford insulation against heat in summer and cold in winter," she explained. "Besides, such walls afford ventilation and insure a more healthful house."

The visitor reflected a moment, and replied:

"Our frame house must be quite as well built. Every night we look the cat in the cellar, and have to let her out of the attic in the morning."—Youth's Companion.

Starch.

Starch, like everything else, is being constantly improved, the patent Starches put on the market 25 years ago are very different and inferior to those of the present day. The latest discovery—Defiance Starch—all injurious chemicals are omitted, while the addition of another ingredient, invented for the Starch in 1903, gives it strength and smoothness never approached by other brands.

Nearly every week this paper has a ridiculous knock against people sending home from town for stuff that they could purchase right here from our own merchants. Now we had that one possibly two of those business men may get part of their printing done at home. We do not call it a square deal. We buy our stuff at home and that's right, but it isn't right if the printer buys one stuff of the merchant and the merchant sends his printing business away. What a heart full of sympathy we will have for you when we write your obituary.

District court is in session at Pawnee City this week with Judge B. B. Harper on the bench. C. O'Norris and C. O'Driscoll are in attendance as jurors. L. D. Snyder and C. C. Cook will be drawn on the panel, being released from service. The docket is said to be the largest and most important one Pawnee county has had for years and includes two murder charges. On the 18th of August last in a fight at DuBois Sol Arbaugh was killed by Frank Doran; the latter was arrested and his trial is set to be held today, but that will be the opening. On the morning of April 25, the body of Mrs Edith Frank was found dead at the home northeast of town with a bullet wound in the head which had caused her death. The coroner's jury found that death was due to suicide; with this verdict there was much dissent, and a grand jury indicted Miss young husband, Ernest Frank, charging him with her murder and this case is to come up at this term of court. W. D. Doran and Col. L. W. Colby are attorneys for the defense and it has been given out that the legality of the indictment because of flaws in the calling of the grand jury, has been called in question by the defense; County Attorney Story will be assisted in the prosecution by Frank Hewitt of Falls City. There are several minor cases in which public interest is largely centered, but the murder cases are the most important.

POLEY'S HONEY AND TAR

Cures Coughs, Prevents Pneumonia

The home on his farm of Capt. C. F Nye, and occupied by his son Quincy Nye and family six and one half miles southeast of Pawnee City, was burned to the ground together with practically all the contents Wednesday, Oct. 5, near the noon hour. Mr. Nye was at home alone at the time and had started a fire in the kitchen stove, after which he went to the barnyard to look after some chores. He shortly discovered the house on fire, but had gained such headway that he was unable to save the contents. His neighbors, attracted by the smoke, came to his assistance, but were driven out by the flames. The fire is believed to have started from a defective flue. The building was insured, but the loss on the household goods is complete.—Pawnee Republican.

LAND LAND LAND

Land that grows 15 to 25 tons of sugar beets to the acre, 200 to 400 bushels of potatoes, 60 to 100 bushels of oats, 60 to 80 bushels of corn, 30 tons alfalfa, and all kinds of fruit, berries and melons in abundance. Rich, rolling land, that grows immense crops like magic, when the water that the U. S. government provides at cost is flowed upon it. There is no such thing as crop failure under irrigation. The farmer plants his crop and cultivates it, controls the amount of water his crops need as exactly the proper time and he can grow more profitable crops than he can grow in any natural rainfall country, such as sugar beets and alfalfa. Government statistics show that irrigated land will produce from one third to one-half more crops than any natural rainfall country. Officials of the U. S. Reclamation Service say that the North Platte project, which will irrigate the land we are selling, is best adapted to irrigation of any land in the country, and the supply of water is unlimited.

Renters, Why pay from $5 to $10 an acre rent for land when you can get 160 acres of U. S. irrigated land for what the same money you are paying for one year's rent of an outside farm?

Come to the New Land and own a fine farm that will grow larger crops than the high-priced land you are renting. Uncle Sam will supply you with water to irrigate 160 acres of fine clean, productive land in the country at cost. I can secure you a fine 160-acre irrigable farm for from $1 to $5 per acre.

Don't Wait! It won't last long. Thousands of people are flocking to this country, and the sooner you come the better bargain I can get you. Don't see a poor life renting some one else's farm at high price. Come to the high and fertile North Platte Valley, and make a home and fortune for yourself and family. Don't neglect this splendid opportunity. There's no hardships in this country—levies, railroads, schools and churches are close at hand. The Platte Valley is centrally located and convenient to all markets. Railroad communications are the unexcelled to all good shipping points. All kinds of produce, cattle, hogs and sheep command a high price. The Burlington & R. R. now runs through the valley and the Union Pacific is rapidly pushing work on a through line to the ocean, which line also runs through the valley. Thousands and thousands of tons of hay are cut in the river bottoms every year.

Investors: We can tell you, dodded land that is increasing rapidly in value and will continue to increase in value for years to come. Irrigated land is the best bet for us to [illegible] in land values. That always go with a period of crop failures to any natural rainfall country. No matter what the weather you can raise a crop every year under irrigation. Control the sale of thousands of acres of irrigated and dry lands, buy land and ranches. I can secure you any kind of land, at a price that will make money quickly for you.

Write today for further information. Local real estate dealers co-operate; we can make some money for you.

The land purchased from Mr. Lane adjoins that of the plant and is easily accessible.

Compass Points and Health.

A certain theory is that of a French physician, who holds that the four points of the compass have an influence on human health and temperament. Travelling west, asserts this authority, induces melancholy; travelling eastward brings a cheerfulness; southward, calmness. It is a question of practical interest, and the influence is felt not only when travelling, but also when at home. The best position for working is to face either north or east. In these positions you receive positive waves of electricity, the negative currents coming from the other two points, south and west. From the sleep is improved, it seems, if the foot of the bed be turned to the north or east. To sleep in the contrary position induces nightmare and general uneasiness.

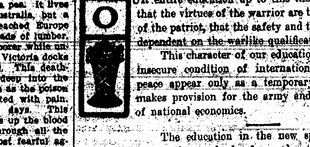
TO LOSE ROCKEFELLER PLOT FOR GARDEN USE



NEW YORK—The 150-odd small children, who for over two months ago considered themselves the happiest in the city when the little plots were awarded in the garden presented to the school children by John D. Rockefeller on the ground in front of the Rockefeller institute, at Sixty-sixth street and Avenue A, are bewailing the fate of their treasured beets and radishes, for it is rumored that next year the ground will be needed for a proposed addition to the institute.

But the fear that they are going to lose their little gardens has only increased the children's interest in the cultivation and harvest of this year's crops.

The other day was harvesting day with the small planters, and the crops gathered astonished many old market gardeners who were on hand to watch the operation.

Each of the children has a piece of ground four feet wide by ten feet long, but they have all managed to squeeze into this small space a row of beets, turnips and lettuce, and some beans and cucumbers. The turnip crop was the best, for the land is particularly suited to turnips.

There were a few of the children who did not have a big harvest. Some of the plots are not as fertile as others, and some of them have not been as well cared for. Then there are a few of the plots which have suffered from the depredations of urchins who have no gardens, but nevertheless have a tooth for radishes and whose families like fresh vegetables as well as the relatives of those who have plots.

These unfortunates who found no radishes to pull and no broad green leaves where turnips ought to have been looked on disconsolately at the busy harvesting going on around them.

A few of the more generous children were inclined to divide with them, but parental admonitions from the other side of the fence promptly put a stop to all philanthropy.

When the ground was offered by Mr. Rockefeller it was prepared with the greatest care. The land on which the garden is situated is naturaddy very sandy and unfertile. Many carloads of rich loam and fertilizer were dumped into the garden, and it was plowed many times. When it was finally in readiness and divided off into long rows of plots, the day was fixed for the assigning of the gardens.

There were scores of applicants for every plot assigned and many among the disappointed ones harbored revenge, and for many nights after the first planting several of the plots were torn up. This was stopped by the board of education by putting a watchman at the garden day and night, and his vigilance has only ceased with the harvesting of the crops.

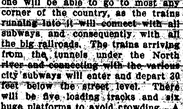
NEW HUDSON TUNNEL BUILDING A WHOPPER

THE Hudson Tunnel company's new terminal building, which is being rushed to completion, is literally a whopper. It covers two blocks and will be 22 stories high, providing floor space for the offices which will accommodate 10,000 souls.

From this can be drawn the comparison that the building will be populated in an equal number with such cities as Kenosha, Wis.; Hoboken, N. J., or Middletown, Conn., and still exceed in population the largest towns in four states—Arizona, Idaho, New Mexico and Nevada.

There will be 39 elevators in the building and it is estimated that about 150,000 persons will pass through the building in entering or leaving trains in the course of a year. The new Grand Central station is designed to handle 100,000,000 persons a year and the new Pennsylvania station of Thirty-third street will be able to accommodate 146,000,000. The South station in Boston only takes care of 30,000,000 a year and the Broad street depot in Philadelphia handles 20,000,000.

From this new terminal building one will be able to go to most any corner of the country, as the trains running into it will connect with all railroads and consequently with all the big railroads. The trains arriving from the tunnels under the North river and connecting with the various railroad subways will enter and depart 20 feet below the street level. There will be five loading tracks and six huge platforms to avoid crowding. A great deal of attention has been paid to safety and elaborate plans have been laid to eliminate any possibility of a tieup. Careful provisions have been made for the possibility of fire. All the cars of the trains will be of steel and the terminal building is so constructed that should a fire start in any one room of the building it will be hardly likely to spread to another.



A REFUGE FOR "VAG" DOGS AND STRAY CATS

IN philanthropic work in this great city the dumb brutes are not forgotten. The latest move looking to their comfort is the establishment of a refuge for strays both of the canine and the feline persuasion.

Misses Stella and Madeline Mills, wealthy young women of the Bronx, whose home is on Kingsbridge terrace, have just completed at a cost of about $10,000 a kennel which will be used almost exclusively for dogs found wandering friendless and homeless.

The young women are among the most active workers in the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and for several years any "tramp" dog or cat that happened along would find a home with them. Recently their kennel was overcrowded with "vag" canines and felines, and they then determined to fit out a new kennel.

One section of the kennel will be devoted to prize winning dogs, of which they own 2. The rest of the kennel is so arranged that it will accommodate 100 or more dogs and cats. Any cur that wants a good home with plenty of good food, can have it for the asking.

The Mills sisters' home is on a hill which is used by teamsters during every hour of the day. One of the sisters can usually be found on the hill, ready to offer cash to teamsters with light wagons to give a pull to the men with heavy loads.

The sisters inherited a comfortable estate.

A Severe Discrimination.

"Which kind?" responded Senator Sorghum. "Friends, you know, are divided into two great classes; those whom you need and those who need you."

MOST TERRIBLE OF DEATHS

Spider's Bite Probably the Worst Known to Scientists.

What is the most terrible death in the world? The following are a few of the most terrible known to mortal man. But as to which of those given is the worst it would probably be hard to say.

One of the most agonizing deaths known is caused by a small black spider half the size of a pea. It lives in Peru and South Australia, but a few specimens have reached Europe and America in ship loads of lumber. Not long ago a dock laborer while unloading a vessel in the Victoria docks felt one upon his hand. This death-dealer dug its fangs deep into the man's flesh, and as soon as the poison began to work he fainted with pain. He was dead in three days. This spider's venom scorches up the blood vessels and spreads through all the tissues, causing the most fearful agony a human being can have to bear. The worst of it is that the victim lives at least two days. The spider is generally known as the "speck-y." When a man who knows what the "speck-y" bite means becomes ill with he generally blows out his brains.

Another fearful death is caused by eating a grain called "obat." This sometimes gets mixed with rice, which it resembles. The plant grows in the far east, and a few grains of it will drive a person into a state of violent mania. Those who become victims at first are afterwards hilarious; then he goes raving mad, tears himself to pieces with his fingers and bites mouthfuls out of his flesh. The victim is found only in the remotest parts of the east, but both white men and natives are killed by it occasionally.

The plant grows in the form of a crop, and there is no way of telling them apart, except when the grain is dried it comes out in a sort of brick-red color.

There is a South American plant, or vine, called the "knotter," which fastens about any living thing that comes within reach, twining its long tentacles about a man as a devilish might. These tentacles sear and burn into the flesh like white-hot wires, and the victim is dragged into the heart of the foliage, and his life slowly drained as the spider sucks the blood of the fly. Those who have strong fruitage of cruelty sometimes force a dog or other animal into the grip of the "knotter" to watch the effects, which are too horrible to describe in detail.

Child Misunderstood.

When Lord Elphiston was in America a couple of years ago he was entertained at dinner by a family the head of which was to accompany his lordship on his hunting trip through the wilds of the northwest. A child of about five years, named Ethel, during the dinner was tongue-tied and ill at ease with the unfamiliar. In fact, completely overawed by the presence of the distinguished foreigner. Ethel heard her mother and father now and then say, "Lord Elphiston," "his lordship," or, "Will you have some of this, my lord, or some of that?" the dinner being a purely informal one. Finally, when the dinner was interested in the conversation of another guest, Ethel noticed that milord was gazing interestedly at a dish of relish quite out of his reach. The child thought she saw a chance to please Lord Elphiston, and in a firm, clear voice, exclaimed: "Mama, God wants some pickles."—San Francisco Argonaut.

New York's Highest Building.

"How high is it?" This question at once directs thought to the Singer building on Lower Broadway. The question is asked by thousands of persons crossing from the Jersey shore. It was asked the other day of a tall, scholarly-looking man standing on one of the big railroads. The trains arriving from the tunnels under the North river are connecting with the various railroad subways will enter and depart 20 feet below the street level. There will be five loading tracks and six huge platforms to avoid crowding. A great deal of attention has been paid to safety and elaborate plans have been laid to eliminate any possibility of a tieup. Careful provisions have been made for the possibility of fire. All the cars of the trains will be of steel and the terminal building is so constructed that should a fire start in any one room of the building it will be hardly likely to spread to another.

How Bears Play.

In a recently published work a naturalist gives some interesting facts concerning the playtime of animals. The bear is supposed by many to be a rather solemn animal, but he is given to jokes at times, and even indulges in antics that closely resemble games played by children. The naturalist observed three cubs repeatedly playing a game very much like tag. A cub would chase the others, until he cuffed one with his paw; then the one hit took up the chase. It may be that the writer's imagination put more system into the play than actually was there. However, bears in zoological gardens have been known to turn somersaults, and they take to tackling so readily that it is easy to train them to take certain steps.

She Wasn't.

"No, but her allowance is."—Pittsburg Press.

Peace Spirit Must Permeate Educational System

By DR. ERNST RICHARD.
Columbia University.

OUR entire education up to this time is based on the old view that the virtues of the warrior are the most important qualities of the patriot, that the safety and the welfare of the nation are dependent on the warlike qualifications of her citizens.

This character of our education is easily explained by the insecure condition of international relations, which makes peace appear only as a temporary interruption of war and makes provision for the army and navy the principal object of national economics.

The education in the new spirit must naturally begin with those who set the standards of our educational ideals either as teachers, writers or artists. There seems to be above all an urgent need to form a higher conception of peace itself. We are used to look upon peace only in its negative sense, as absence of war, as freedom from disturbance, while in reality it is the nurse of culture and civilization, the great comprehensive power which brings the nations closer to each other. Those human activities which we call the "Arts of Peace" are not only instruments of human progress, but also furnish the impulses which by innumerable entwining threads create the solidarity of nations we see approach in this 20th century.

From this conception of peace it will be clear that the branch which will be the principal bearer of the systematic education for international solidarity will be history. But not the kind of history now taught almost exclusively usually called "political" history, the history of the new school must treat of war as one of the many elements in human evolution, but not as the most important one; it will not neglect political history entirely, but will assign it to its proper place in the total of human interests.

The principal emphasis of the new history study will be placed on the forces and persons that have built up human civilization, to the events, institutions, ideals that have caused progress. By following these forces to the present day, it will show them at their work of welding the nations together. It will show to the student how much other nations have done toward bringing us to the advanced conditions of today. He will learn that his own nation is only one of the cog-wheels which must work one into the other in the great machinery of the world organization.

The great, the all-important, yet undoubtedly very difficult problem whose solution includes all the rest is the implanting of the peace spirit, the spirit of justice and solidarity in our education and its agencies. Unless this fundamental change in considering human affairs can be brought about, an education for peace in its broadest productive sense is not possible. The traditions of the past emanating from a war-filled atmosphere can lose their dangerous influence only by an interpretation firmly settled on the new internationalism.

The Proper School Age

By PROF. A. E. DOLBEAR.
Professor Emeritus, Tufts College.

As growth proceeds from fundamental to accessory, so the older and stable organs, the large and coarse muscles, are ready for function before those used for nice discriminating movements, and hence children should not have nice, fine, accurate work given to them—needle work, fine writing or drawing. These in the organism come much later.

A teacher in writing once told me that scholars of 15 or 16 years of age would learn more of his art than in all the preceding years devoted to it. He was much chagrined with his lack of success with younger pupils, but it had not occurred to him that the machine was not ready for that art until the later date.

The tests for fatigue have taught us a great lesson—that the lesson period is almost always too long. Forty-five minutes is an extreme limit, and results are better when only half an hour is given. The school day is too long. In Worcester it was proved that with half a day school the scholars got along as fast as when two sessions were required. The period from 11 till 12 is the worst period of the day for school effort.

The old notion that one study could be substituted for another, which had wearied a scholar, is no longer maintained. The period of adolescence is to the very young much as the change from caterpillar to butterfly. Now characteristics, physical and mental, appear suddenly and need care and patience in the teacher, and especially pressure for school work should be very gentle.

At birth a baby has no teeth. Then come the so-called milk teeth; after that a temporary set, which, after a time, fall out, and are replaced one at a time. There are gaps in the dentition. The full set is not complete until the age of 20. There is a somewhat similar condition in mind growth. It is not continuous, and some elementary qualities are displaced by other growths. To require one, with his temporary set, or with the incomplete mature set, to do faithful and persistent chewing on such food as is provided, in order that his teeth, or faculties, may be properly developed, is physiological nonsense. But when the same notion is applied in education, what shall be said?

The whole tendency of child study is to warn us against so much study. Instead of beginning school work at the age of five or six, as we do now, Dr. Hall suggests it might be better to turn all children out to grass till they are a dozen years old.

The eyesight of scholars is being ruined early, so that spectacles have to be worn before school days are over, because so great demand is made for conning print every day that the muscles of the eye cannot recover their ability to focus for long distances. If present school requirements are kept up half the population of the next generation will have to wear spectacles all the time. The average scholar cannot before 16 safely stand more than two or three hours of book work per day without endangering his eyes.

To attempt to force the work before the organism is ready is wicked. Effort then is absolutely wasted, and punishment or even pressure for failure is as brutal as it would be to punish a paralytic for not walking. That almost all kinds of school work are begun too early is apparent from the slow progress made, no matter what means are adopted to help. Work in all grades is quite over the heads of scholars, and no cure can be effected by change of methods in teaching the material demanded now.

SERIAL STORY

FRIDAY THE 13TH

A Novel by THOMAS W. LAWSON

Author of "Frenzied Finance."

(Copyright, 1907, Dodd, Mead & Co.)

She had drawn his head down close to her face, and her great blue eyes searched his as though trying to force to his very soul. She was a child in her simple appeal for him to allow her to see his heart, to see that there was nothing black there.

As she looked the beautiful hands played through his hair as do a mother's through that of the child she is soothing in sickness.

"Bob, speak to me, speak to me," she begged, "tell me there was no dishonor in the getting of those millions. Tell me no one was ruined that you might be rich and I have suffered. Tell me that the suicides and the convicts, the daughters dragged to shame and the mothers driven to the madhouse as a result of this panic, cannot be charged to anything unfair or dishonorable that you have done. Bob, oh, Bob, answer! Answer no, or my heart will break; or if, Bob, you have made a mistake, if you have done that which in your great desire to aid me and my father seemed justifiable, but which you now see was wrong, tell it to me, Bob, dear, and together we will try to undo it. We will find a way to make restitution. We will give the millions to the last, last penny to those upon whom you have brought misery. Father's loss will not matter. Together we will go to him and tell him what we have done, what we have lived through, tell him of our mistake, and in our agony he will forget his own. For such a horror as that of a world-wide dishonorable that he will embrace his misery as happiness when he knows that his teachings have enabled his daughter to undo that wrong. And then, Bob, we will be married, and you and I and father and mother will be together, and be, oh, so happy, and we will begin life all over again."

"Beulah, stop; in the name of God, in the name of your love for me, don't say another word. There is a limit to the capacity of a man to suffer, even if he be a great, strong brute like myself, and, Beulah, I have reached that limit. The day has been a hard one."

His voice softened and became as a tired child's.

"I must go into the hustle of the street, into the din and sound, and get down my nerves and get back my head. Then I shall be able to think clear and true, but I will come back to you, and together we will see if I have done anything that makes me unfit to touch the cheek and the hands and the lips of the sweetest girl in the beautiful world. Upon a Bench Sat a Sweat-Faced Mother Holding a Sleeping Babe in Her Arms.

a bench sat a sweat-faced mother holding a sleeping babe in her arms, while a anticipated boy nestled his head in her lap and slept through the magic lanes and fairy woods of dreamland. The woman's face was one of those that blend the conditions of girlhood with the uncertainty of womanhood. Twas a pretty face, which had been plainly tagged by its Maker for a light-hearted trip through the world, but it had been scared by the iron of the city.

"Mr. Brownley—" She started to rise.

He gently pushed her back with a "hush," unwilling to rob the sleepers of their heaven.

"What are you doing here, Mrs. —" He hesitated.

"Mrs. Chase. Mr. Brownley, when I went away from Randolph & Randolph's office I married John Chase; you may remember him as a delivery clerk. I had such a happy home and my husband was good; I did not dare have to typewrite any longer. There are two children now.

"What are you doing here?"

The tears sprang to her eyes; she dropped them, but did not answer.

"Don't mind me, woman. I, too, have hidden hells; don't want the world to see. Don't mind me; tell me your story. It may do you good; it may do me good. Yes, it may do me good."

I had dropped into a seat a few feet away. Both were too much occupied with their own thoughts to notice me or my every move. I could not overhear their conversation, but long after, ward, when I mentioned our old stenographer, Bessie Brown, to Bob, he told me of the incident at the Battery side of her chair, his hands clasped and uplifted in an agony of appeal that was supplemented by the awful groans.

DAVID'S TEMPTATION

"Satan finds mischief for idle hands to do."—Isaac Watts.

STORY BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

Scripture Authority:—2 Samuel 11:1-5.

SERMONETTE.

"And David tarried." Such is the introductory statement to this black chapter in the life of David. The inference is justifiable that his place of duty was with his army in the campaign against the Ammonites. But David tarried.

The first step in many a man's downfall is a tarrying when duty calls to another place.

Temptation is almost certain to assail one who lingers in the lap of ease rather than toil by the side of duty.

To be sure the pathway of duty is beset by the snares of temptation, but temptation which comes at such times finds one in the attitude of mind and heart more easily to resist the suggested evil.

Thus we find there are really two types of temptation. One which comes through no fault of our own, and the other which comes as a direct result of tarrying in a forbidden place and neglecting to obey duty's call.

Of the first James says in his epistle: "Count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing."

Of the second he declares that "every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed. Then when lust hath conceived it bringeth forth sin; and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death."

Notice in this second type of temptation that the initiative is with the man himself. There is the inner desire before the outward yielding. There is the lowering of high standards before the downward step is taken. There is a neglect of God before there can be a partaking with the devil.

An idle moment, and a lustful eye proved David's undoing, as they have many another soul.

Through the channel of the eye much evil find entrance to the heart of man, and remember that generally the eye is quick to see what the heart desires.

Had David's heart been lifted heavenward in communion with God, his eyes would not have lingered on improper scenes.

It behooves one in this day of sensuous pictures, and suggestion of the human form in various degrees of nudity on bill boards and in newspapers and magazine publications, even on post cards, to take the stern resolve that the eye shall not become the open door through which the evil one shall desire shall find entrance to the heart, there to germinate and grow until the favorable moment gives it opportunity to burst into the full fruitage of sinful indulgence.

Set a guard upon the windows of thy soul lest the demon of Lust, gain entrance and rob thee of thy purity and virtue.

THE STORY.

THE expedition against the Ammonites had already been delayed beyond all reasonable excuse, and Joab, the captain of the hosts of Israel, chafed and fumed under the restraint. Experienced man of war as he was, he knew that valuable time was being lost and the time of year when the campaign could be conducted most successfully was slipping away, but he did not now seem any nearer the point of departure than he was at that time when he had informed him that the army was in readiness to move against the enemy. Yea, he knew that it was not cowardice upon the part of King David which kept him at Jerusalem, for no braver man or abler commander ever led the armies of Israel than he. And for this reason it made the situation the more puzzling.

Joab waited as long as he could, and then sought the presence of the king and remonstrated with him.

"Each day that we tarry here but adds to the strength of our enemies!" he exclaimed, impatiently.

"Yea, but with all the strength they can muster they will but prove as breaking bubbles before the hosts of Israel," rejoined the king, proudly.

"But why place ourselves at a disadvantage because of the advancing season?" persisted Joab.

"Let us start to-morrow, then," the king replied, with some of his oldtime promptitude and vigor.

"To-morrow!" exclaimed Joab, eagerly, and hastily withdrew to make the final preparations for the march.

The king took an impatient turn around the roof terrace and then threw himself with a discontented sigh upon one of the soft divans, which furnished the sumptuous apartment. It was a delightful place to be, he thought, as he looked about him, and then up at the blue sky which was deepening with the evening shadows. The thought of leaving the ease and comfort of his splendid palace filled him with impatient regret.

"Why should he go?" he asked himself. Why not let Joab go alone? Yes, he would lose the glory of the victory, but was he not as king entitled to seek his own ease and comfort?" thus he reasoned, and at last the resolve was made and he dispatched one of his servants with a note to Joab telling him that he would tarry at Jerusalem and commanding Joab to lead the army against the Ammonites as had been planned.

So it came to pass that the next day the army departed leaving King David behind to enjoy the ease and comforts of his palace.

"I will join Joab later," he promised himself, as he watched the long cavalcade of soldiers pass down the valley. He was in the favorite place on the terrace, and when the last division had passed out of sight, he threw himself back upon the couch and gave himself up to the dreamy speculation of the probable development in the campaign against the Ammonites. He had not the least shadow of doubt as to the outcome. Had he, it is doubtful whether he would have been content to have remained behind. But with the absolute certainty of victory, he let himself up to the enjoyment of the luxury about him.

So the days passed. It had been almost a week since the departure of the troops from the army, and while he did not feel uneasy as to the progress of the campaign, the lack of news served to again turn the question in his own mind as to his place of duty. Why should he tarry there in ease while the men of Israel endured hardships and the perils of battle?

He felt half ashamed of himself, and was almost on the point of ordering the servants to prepare for the journey, when the inquiring was checked by the inner prompting to delay starting for a day.

"Perhaps," he said by way of apology, to his better impulses, "they are on the way home even now, and delay sending word that the whole army may share in the joy of bringing tidings of victory."

In this spirit of self-complacency he settled himself for his midday rest. The next day he would start surely, promising himself that no further delay should intervene to prevent his departure.

But with all the strength they can muster they will but prove as breaking bubbles before the hosts of Israel," rejoined the king, proudly.

"But why place ourselves at a disadvantage because of the advancing season?" persisted Joab.

"Let us start to-morrow, then," the king replied, with some of his oldtime promptitude and vigor.

The king took an impatient turn around the roof terrace and then

Hon. M. C. Butler, U. S. Senator from South Carolina for two terms, in a letter from Washington, D. C., writes to the Peruna Medicine Co., as follows:

"I can recommend Peruna for a dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine, besides a good tonic."

CATARRH of the stomach is the correct name for most cases of dyspepsia. Only an internal catarrh remedy, such as Peruna, is available.

Peruna Tablets can now be procured.

SURELY HAD PRIZE FLY.

Money Invested in Incubator Was Not All Lost.

Poultney Bigelow, the brilliant author of "The Children of the Abyss," tells of the chicken farm that he is about to set up at Malden:

"I hope to succeed with this farm. I hope our experiences won't too closely resemble that of my old friend Horatio Rogers. Rash Rogers lived in the suburbs. On the suburban train one morning he said to me with a sour laugh:

"'I've got something nobody else has got, Mr. Bigelow.'

"'Have you, Rash?' said I. 'What is it?'

"'Well,' said Rogers, 'I bought a $50 incubator last month, put $15 worth of eggs in it, and hatched out a blue bottle fly.'

"He frowned, then sighed.

"'Yes,' he said, 'I've got the only $65 bluebottle fly in the world.'"

Monument to Buchanan.

Work has been started on the foundation for a monument to James Buchanan at Stony Batter, Franklin county, Pennsylvania, his birthplace. The road to the old house in which James Buchanan was born, a distance of half a mile, had to be macadamized in order to get it for the heavy hauling that will have to be done. A stone crusher is on the ground in order to break up the perches of stone for the foundation. In the work of excavation several curiosities have already been discovered, among them a wooden pig iron fastened together on the spot where once the old fire place was situated.

Knew What She Wanted.

"A foreign looking woman, well dressed, came in the other day," said the librarian at one of the East side branches, "and asked for 'Cottage Cheese.' I supposed, of course, that some one had ordered it and that she had got into the wrong place. But she insisted that she was in the right place and that it was 'Cottage Cheese' that she wanted. 'It's the same of a book,' she said. 'That gave me the tip that she simply had a title mixed up, and, sure enough, it was 'Scottish Chiefs.'"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

FIGHT FOR FRANCE

SOLDIERS OF FOREIGN LEGION HAVE GLORIOUS RECORDS

All Nationalities and Types Serve Under the Tri-Colored Flag in the Colonies of the Great Eastern Republic.

In the bloody hand-to-hand fight with the Moors over the dead body of their commander officer, Lieut. Prevost, the son of the French Foreign Legion were true to the organization's record for gallantry.

Miscellaneous fighting in the French colonies has been the Legionaries' specialty. They campaigned against the Black Kings and filled hundreds of silken graves in Fonkin, in Dahomey and on the Legionaries bore the brunt of the fighting and carried Gen. Dodd's sepulcher as "the best soldiers in the world." By tradition they never serve in France. One of their most brilliant achievements, however, was the defense of the bridge in the fine castle at Orleans in 1870, where fewer than 1,000 men held off an entire French army three days and made it possible for the French army to retreat without serious loss and save to history. The Legion lost 500 men in the action.

Into the two infantry regiments drifts a steady stream of main soldiers, bankrupt financiers, remittance men from justice, political refugees, medical students in disgrace, men of title and men of no account, ready to march 30 kilometers a day under the flaming African sun, so they can lose their identity. It is a brigade of mystery and romance.

In one company some years ago was found a Rumanian prince suspected of having murdered his brother; an Italian cavalry officer, dismissed from the service for cheating at cards; a Russian nihilist prince who had escaped from Siberia; an escaped Notre Dame of Paris sacristan; a well-dressed Englishman, for the best of reasons; an English major of Hussars and a German count who had held high military rank at Berlin. After a terrific engagement with the Kabyles, in which both the surgeon-major and his assistant were killed, no one was left to care for the wounded. "Assembly" was sounded, and riding along the line the major asked, "Any doctors or surgeons among you?" Nine men left the ranks, and the major selected his surgeon in a European university.

A hard-drinking, quarrelsome, dashing, devil-may-care, lot of social wastaways and professional soldiers, the Legionaries are ruled with iron discipline. The slightest act of aggression against a superior officer is punished with death. During the war in Tonkin 17 members were court-martialled and shot in one day. But in the face of danger whatever their vices or their crimes, the wearers of the striped kepi and baggy trousers never fail to give a good account of themselves. They are always ready and eager to fight. Marshal Bugeaud, Gen. de Negrier and Gen. Dodds have led them. Count de Materel, a court favorite in Napoleon III.'s time, having been disgraced for life, bought their command. Villebois Mareuil, who fought with the Boers, was once an officer in the Legion.

Nothing Doing.

Harrison Grey Fiske discussed at a dinner in New York the art of acting.

"I believe," said Mr. Fiske, "in subtlety and restraint. A nod, a shake of the head, a silent pause—these things are often more effective than the most violent yelling and ranting.

"Like to like that subtle and silent. What, for instance, could be more effective than this scene, wherein wifeless bankrupt financier Brander Ives says very little and says it well?

"An undertaker stood on a corner near a noble mansion. He elevated his brows hopefully and inquiringly as a physician came from the house. The physician, compressing his lips, shook his head decidedly and hurried to his carriage. Then the undertaker took a cat-nap."

Old Relics Found.

Whilst making excavations at the Cape Town railway station for shipping purposes last week, some workmen found several loose stones with inscriptions, such as were used by the captains of ships sailing at the Cape before Van Riebeek had built his little fort, to denote the places where ostrich might be found. Further search revealed the light of steps on the old seashore, which constituted the first landing place for persons arriving by sea, and may have been used by Van Riebeek himself. The stones were found at a depth of over 20 feet, and with them a small silver spoon and a key. All the relics have now been placed in an alcove on the museum platform, abreast of the excavations where they were found, and an inscription in both English and Dutch tells their history to travelers.

Will It Come to This?

It was a bright Sunday morning in 1911. Jenkins called the Jonathan Howard at the foot of the stairs. "Mabel came down a little bowwow last night, and I have been up ever since trying to get her to sleep. She is whining, whining, whining now in the parlor. Do please go down and see what is the matter with her. I am sure I don't know, and I have tried everything that Dr. Waters that button at the back of her ever Bowser is a specialist."

WOES OF TELEPHONE LINEMAN

He Was Ambitious, but Grew Disgusted and Fell Into the River.

"Nearly anyone can become a good telephone lineman after about a year," said a Kansas City electrician. "A few men, though, never can learn the trade because they grow dizzy when they get to the top of a pole. Safety belts have been worn only about ten years. Just a little while before they came into use I had a man working with me who equipped himself with a belt. He climbed a pole. He could climb all right, but after he got there he couldn't do anything except to hang on for dear life. He left his nail marks in the wood.

"One day we were working on a telephone line close to town. And had a good-sized audience watching us. This would-be lineman thought he'd try to nail some brackets up about 20 feet from the ground. He put his six in his mouth and climbed up the pole. Then he stopped. The natives came around to watch him and he did his best, but it was no use. There he stayed for a full minute and couldn't put his hands up to get the ax. So he came down again.

"He tried one day to cross on a high line we were wiring over the Missouri river. We told him he couldn't do it, but he went ahead, and, as usual lost control of himself and fell. When we pulled him out he had changed his mind about becoming a lineman. Later he went into the grocery business."—Kansas City Star.

Trouble at the Moore Cottage.

In the Adirondack Cottage sanitarium, at Trudeau, N. Y., the patients are accompanied in bed at ten o'clock each night. The lights all that hour are supposed to be extinguished, and talking is strictly prohibited. Any violation of these rules is reported to the resident physician.

To enforce the rules is part of the duties of a watchman who has been with the institution for years. This watchman, a middle-aged German whose only name, so far as anybody ever knew, is John, is the soul of fidelity in carrying out his duties, and violations of rules are always reported by him without delay.

John is not a college man and some of his reports are gems of the purest ray. The other night he heard loud talking at the Moore cottage. The lights were lit and he hastened to see what the trouble was. His reception was not encouraging, but undismayed, next day he dominated this report to the powers that be:

"Trouble at Moore cottage last night, ten thirty. Three beds occupy. One bed said 'Go to H—.'

The report is destined to live long in the annals of the sanitarium.

Miner's Hard Fate.

A Welsh colliery fireman named Evan Howells died recently as the result of terrible injuries he had sustained in a fire in the Rhondda valley. While the men were working at the pit bottom the pit "knockers" clanging gave warning that something was wrong. Howells went up in the cage to see what was the matter, and near the top of the shaft he found a fire had broken out; The cage was drawn up into the middle of the flames, and just as the man arrived in the heart of the fire the "knocker" wire broke, and the signal to stop the cage was given automatically. The shrieks of the man in the cage drew the attention of those on the bank, and by the time the cage had been drawn to the top Howell's clothes had all been burned upon him. It is stated that the guide ropes were white with heat, and as soon as the fan was stopped to prevent the fire getting into the pit a ball of flame rose from the shaft, shot up by the air pressure.

The Favor He Asked.

The second floor people had often been annoyed by the running back and forth of the little boy upstairs, but being peaceable folk with an infant of their own, they didn't want to complain. One day a package of laundry was left with the second floor tenants for the upstairs people, who were out. That night the man of the house took it up.

Just as he reached the door, he overheard in his wife afterward; and he paused a very decent sort; and he paused a very decent sort; and he paused a very decent sort

NEBRASKA NEWS

REPRESENTATIVE THIESSEN HAS A GREAT IDEA.

CORN LAND TO BE HIGHER

After Much Careful Study of Present Values Will Reach High Figure.

Hon. John P. Thiessen, of Fairbury, one of the most conservative farmers in the state, has been doing a little figuring recently along the line of advancement in land values. Mr. Thiessen's idea is that possibly not more than ten years hence, the price of land adapted to the raising of corn will have advanced to $150 to $200 an acre. He contends that the corn belt of this country is fully developed and it is limited to a very small portion of the United States when the country as a whole is taken into consideration. On the other hand, he says that all the new land that is coming in is adapted to the raising of wheat. The result of this condition will be, he contends, a constantly increasing supply of wheat, while the demand is not increasing nearly as rapidly as the demand for corn. This means that the prices of these two commodities are bound to fluctuate, corn will go up and wheat will go down until the prices meet. The raising of corn does not entail nearly as much expense as the growing of wheat; one man can tend to a bigger piece of corn than he can of wheat, and the result is going to be that farmers will be in the market for corn land. With the increase in demand for corn the price is going up to such a degree that the net returns from an acre of this grain will pay a bigger dividend on the amount invested and this is bound to result in a keen desire to get possession of the land adapted to the raising of corn. Mr. Thiessen does not wonder at the fact that people are today willing to pay $100 an acre for good corn land.

WAY CHANGE THE BOUNDARIES.

Strip of Merrick County Land May Be Traded to Nance.

The question of changing the boundary lines between Merrick and Nance counties will be submitted to the voters of both counties at the general election in November, and if the proposition carries, all of the land Merrick county contains south of the Loup river will be exchanged for all of Nance county south of the river included in township 15, range 8. There is a strip eight miles long and one-half mile wide which extends up from the northwest corner of Merrick county between Nance and Howard counties, and its distance from Central City, the county seat, has been a source of great inconvenience to persons living up there. The board of supervisor has been able to look properly after their roads and bridges and the children of the families residing there have in the past been transferred to school districts in neighboring counties as there was no school accessible to them in Merrick county, some of them being as much as ten miles distant from the nearest Merrick county school. Accordingly the citizens of Loup township petitioned to have the strip transferred to Nance county in exchange for a small tract of Nance county south of the river and the proposition will be submitted to the voters of both counties at the election next month. Before the exchange can be made the people of both counties must vote favorably. The land in Nance county to be transferred is only about half the size the tract they will receive in return.

State Board Mandamused.

A writ of mandamus issued recently by the supreme court has been obeyed by the board of educational lands and funds and as a result Mrs. Delmar Rutledge becomes the purchaser of a lease contract covering 80 acres of state land in Jefferson county. The land appraised at $1,200. This was rejected by the state board as being too low. An appeal was taken by Mrs. Rutledge to the supreme court. The court held that the board had power to review the appraisement and stated that the land was evidently appraised from $900 to $600 below its actual value. A second appraisement was had and the value fixed at $200 less than the minimum amount which the supreme court said was the real value. This appraisement the board rejected, but the supreme court issued a writ of mandamus to compel the board to approve. Land Commissioner Hedlon has completed the necessary papers in the case and the board has approved his action.

Wahoo Wants New Water Plant.

The Wahoo city council, at its regular meeting, passed a resolution that steps be taken for the calling of a special election for the purpose of voting bonds to either buy or put in a new water plant, as complaint is made about the water furnished by the present water works system. The tests made, for quantity and quality of water, on the east side of the town has given rise to a strong feeling for a new system, and a change of location of the plant.

STOCK NOT TO BE SHIPPED.

Scarcity of Cars in Northwest Prevents Rapid Movement.

Reports from the range country in the northwest part of Nebraska indicate that the movement from that stock-raising section has hardly begun. It is claimed that shippers have been unable to make shipments because of a lack of cars. A shipper who came to Lincoln said the railroad company is evidently making strenuous efforts to get cars to shippers, because in the past few days he has passed many freight trains made up of empty stock cars. He said the arrival in the northwest of empty cars means prompt loading and the prompt return of the loaded cars, and that the efforts of the railroads for several weeks to come will be needed to move all the stock that is ready for the market. The labor problem is getting to be a serious one in the northwest. Men are in demand on the ranches and in the hay and potato fields. It is claimed that potato growers in the vicinity of Alliance are offering from $2 to $2.75 per day for men to pick up potatoes.

DEATH OF DR. S. D. MERCER.

End Comes to a Prominent Physician of Omaha.

Dr. Samuel David Mercer died at his residence, Fortieth and Cuming streets, Omaha, at the age of sixty-five.

Dr. Mercer's death marks the passing of one of the pioneer physicians and surgeons of the state and a man who had made Omaha his home for forty-one years.

Omaha's Earn Money.

Warren A. Redick has deposited $1,051.74 in a Lincoln bank to the credit of convicts in the state penitentiary. He said that it represented the money earned by the convicts in the binder twine works during the month of September and that this was less than the amount usually earned by them in one month. From 250 to 260 convicts are represented in the list of those who earned the money. Last month convicts in the prison spent $1,000 for the various things which prisoners usually buy, including pies and cake once a month and the services of attorneys.

Train Speed Limit.

Without waiting for the return of Commissioner H. J. Wilmarth, the railway commission is likely to adopt the recommendation of Commissioner Williams that the speed of trains on the Missouri Pacific railroad be limited in the interests of safety of the traveling public. Commissioner Clarke has read the recommendation and is of the opinion that some such order should be issued without delay. The proposed order will come up for disposition within a day or two. It provides that passenger trains shall be limited to twenty-five miles an hour, freight trains to twenty miles and heavy freight engines to fifteen miles.

Child Shot Accidentally.

A very distressing accident occurred at Bartley the other day. Mrs. Dean Vanderwilt while loading a 38 revolver to shoot a chicken accidentally discharged it, the bullet passed entirely through the head of her little two year old baby girl. The child is still alive with some chance to recover. The cords of the left eye were severed and will destroy the eye if she lives. The mother is prostrated over the affair.

Woodmen Erect Monument.

The Plattsmouth camp of the Woodmen of the World, assisted by a number of visiting camps, unveiled the monument erected to the memory of the late Edward Granberg, who was killed several months ago in a gas explosion. Senator Jesse L. Root acted as master of ceremonies, while addresses were delivered by Dr. H. G. Schieb and Edward Walsh, state manager of the Woodmen of the World.

Farmer's Neck is Broken.

Andrew Hesse, a farmer who lives seven miles southwest of Crete, met his death by falling from the roof of his new barn which he was shingling. His neck was broken by the fall and the physicians who answered the call found him dead. He was thirty-nine years old and left a family of eight.

Kearney Business Reorganized.

The Kearney machine foundry and automobile company elected officers this week as follows: Frank E. Wilcox, president; Fred Ronso, vice president; Alonso Frank, secretary and treasurer; C. M. Kuhn, manager. The board of directors consists of the above and J. H. Kuhn, J. Herman, Harry Black and Fran Mott. The firm took possession of the old foundry business heretofore run by Black & Kuhn Bros., as soon as possible the old building will be repaired and remodeled to meet the requirements of the business.

Woman Labor Law at Grand Island.

Labor Commissioner J. J. Ryder went to Grand Island recently to investigate complaints that merchants have been violating the law fixing the hours for women employes in stores. He has been informed that women have been required to work more than sixty hours a week and have been compelled to work late at night. The supreme court upheld the present law in a case arising in Douglas county. Reports that children are worked in violation of the child labor law may also be investigated at Grand Island.

STOLE JEWELRY

WIFE OF MILWAUKEE MILLIONAIRE CONFESSES TO THEFT.

SHE DIDN'T NEED THE MONEY

Marriage to a Millionaire Turned Her Head, So Her Lawyer Declares—Others Implicated in the Series of Robberies.

In a remarkable confession to the police at the Harrison street station, Chicago, Charles J. Romadka, of Milwaukee, wife of a millionaire manufacturer, admitted that she was responsible for a series of thefts that had baffled the authorities for weeks. Mrs. Romadka's confession was the latest development after her arrest for a robbery committed at the home of C. F. Beck, when jewelry valued at more than $1,000 was stolen. She implicated in her confession a negro, Albert Jones, and a man known as Ralph Smith. The former is under arrest and the police are searching for the latter.

In her confession Mrs. Romadka says that her first theft was committed in April this year.

"I saw an advertisement in a paper," she said, "for a nurse to go to live in the home of Mrs. David Pfaelser, 4541 Forestville avenue and secured the place. I stayed there about a day and a half, stealing a diamond ring, a diamond bracelet and a silver card case."

After detailing several similar experiences, she said she had worked in several different places for families in this capacity.

Attorney J. F Donovan of Milwaukee, who represents the woman's husband and who will defend her in court, said that Mrs. Romadka went to Milwaukee from Oshkosh when she was nineteen years old. There she married Romadka, the ceremony taking place at Oshkosh. According to the attorney the new life into which her millionaire husband introduced her turned the woman's head.

DR. ZEIGLER WINS IN COURT.

Awarded $100,000 From McVicker Estate at Chicago.

A jury in Chicago rendered a verdict against the estate of the late Mrs. Harriet G. McVicker, widow of the Chicago theater manager in favor of Dr. Zeigler for $100,000. Mrs. McVicker was killed several years ago in California and Dr. Zeigler claimed $100,000 from the estate by virtue of a contract which he said he made with Mrs. McVicker to give her his exclusive attention during the remainder of her life. She, according to the claims advanced by Dr. Zeigler, was to bequeath a certain amount in her will. The jury awarded him the full claim.

SANTA FE IS GUILTY.

Road Convicted of Rebating in Los Angeles Court.

After being out twenty minutes the jury in the case of the government against the Santa Fe company on trial in the federal court in Los Angeles for rebating, brought in a verdict of guilty against the railroad on all sixty-six counts of the indictment. Judge Welborn will announce his decision later. As estimate of the maximum penalty which may be imposed is $1,250,000, and the minimum is $66,000. The charge against the Santa Fe was that it had granted rebates from its regular tariff on some shipments of lime to the Grand Canon Lime company of Arizona. The defense was that the rebates were occasional, made for alleged losses in the shipments during transit. The trial began September 3.

The jury's acceptance by the defendant of a less sum of money than that named in its tariff for transportation of its property described in the indictment, charges made in the Interstate Commerce commission. The conference was held behind closed doors and no statement of what was doing was given out.

HAS A CLOSE CALL

GOVERNOR BUCHTEL MARKED FOR SUDDEN DEATH.

INFERNAL MACHINE IN MAIL

Two Denver Bankers Served in the Same Way—Enough Dynamite in Each to Slow Them to Pieces.

A Denver, Colo., Oct. 8, dispatch says: Gov. Henry A. Buchtel, David H. Moffat, president of the First National bank of Denver, and Charles B. Kountze, president of the Colorado National bank, received through the mails today infernal machines containing sufficient dynamite to have caused great destruction of lives and property had they been exploded. Fortunately, warning had been given to the recipients of the machines, before they were received, by Chief of Police Michael Delaney, who had obtained a confession from Kemp V. Bigelow, by whom they were mailed.

Bigelow confessed also that he had sent infernal machines to Lawrence C. Phipps and Edward Chase, but these were not delivered today. The machines received by Messrs. Moffat and Kountze were turned over to the police this afternoon. The one sent to Governor Butchel was received by the governor's private secretary, Alfred C. Montgomery, who removed the wrapper and discovered a box with a sliding cover. His suspicions were aroused and he reported the matter to Governor Buchtel, who then telephoned Chief Delaney. He was armed by the chief of police to be on the lookout for an infernal machine. Adjutant General Kelley and officers of the police department were called in and the box was carefully opened by them in such a manner as to avoid exploding its contents.

It was found to contain two sticks of dynamite, to which were attached fuses and caps and which were packed in black powder. The sliding top was lined with sand paper, and matches had been placed with their heads in contact with the sand paper so that they would have been ignited if the box were opened in the manner intended, thus undoubtedly causing an explosion of the dynamite. The other infernal machines were counterparts of this.

Bigelow gave no satisfactory explanation of his motive for sending the machines, and seemed to have had no other purpose than to cause a sensation.

Action Follows Investigation of "Little Black Book."

As a result of its investigation of the so-called "little black book" the federal grand jury at Minneapolis returned nineteen indictments against well known lumbermen and officers of the Northwestern lumbermen's association, charging conspiracy to defraud by the use of the mails. The black book plan was pursued by lumbermen and other opponents of mail order houses and provided simply that the victims of the device were to be made to answer futile correspondence and send out innumerable catalogues, all with no results in trade.

NOT QUITE UP TO AVERAGE.

Condition of the Corn Crop Shows a Falling Off.

Based on 1,100 reports, bearing an average date of September 20, the New York Journal of Commerce says in its October crop report, that there will be an indicated yield of corn from the harvest of 1907 of not less than 2,300,000,000 bushels. The average condition of the fifteen principal producing states covered by the report is 75.66 per cent against 80.6 per cent last month and 80 a year ago. In 1907 the September condition was 60 and the ten year average for the month is 79.8.

A drop of 2 per cent in condition during the month is indicated by the returns. All states report a decline in condition except Ohio, Illinois, and Kentucky. The first named state points to 78. Of the important corn producing states Missouri shows the large decline of 4.3 points to 81.6 and Kansas 6.9 points to 78.8. The northern states suffered somewhat from frost, especially the late planted in the east, but frost in the latter part of September did little damage elsewhere and the remainder of the corn belt will be entirely free from damages from frost by October 15th, which is relieving still further anxiety concerning the crop.

Drouth was often responsible for deterioration where frost damage was absent. Corn is generally reported of good quality though where touched by frost it soft as usual and will be used for home consumption.

Reports of serious crop loss states have appeared in preceding issues. The formula of estimating the yield of the above condition figures is that adopted by the New York produce exchange. Illinois decreased 0.6 to 83.0, Iowa 1.7 to 77.4, Nebraska 0.7 to 76.7, Texas 1.6 to 78, Indiana 0.9 to 85.4, Indiana 1.0 to 71.8, Oklahoma 2.2 to 55.5, South Dakota 5.8 to 83.5, Minnesota 7.7 to 75.0, Michigan 4.4 to 72.6, Pennsylvania 4.6 to 77.0.

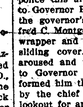
QUALITIES OF WIT AND HUMOR

Alike, Yet in Many Ways Fundamentally Different.

Wit and humor are such elemental fundamental things that it has always been found difficult to analyze them, says a writer in The Atlantic. Upon some points, however, those who have essayed this puzzling task agree, for they all hold that wit is an intellectual, humor an emotional, quality; that wit is a perception of resemblance, and humor a perception of contrast, of discrepancy, of incongruity. The incongruity that which arises between the ideal and the fact, between theory and practice, between promise and performance; and perhaps it might be added that it is always or almost always a moral incongruity. In the case both of wit and humor there is also a pleasurable surprise, a gentle shock, which accompanies our perception of the hitherto unsuspected resemblance or incongruity. A New England farmer was once describing in the presence of a very humane person the great age and debility of a horse that he formerly owned and used. "You ought to have killed him," interrupted the humane person indignantly. "Well," drawled the farmer "we did —almost."

TEN YEARS OF PAIN.

Unable to Do Even Housework Because of Kidney Troubles.



Mrs. Margaret Emmerich, of Clinton St., Napoleon, O., says: "For fifteen years I was a great sufferer from kidney trouble. My back pained me terribly. Every turn or move caused sharp, shooting forms. I had a tired feeling all the time, was poor, dark spots appeared before me, and I had dizzy spells. For ten years I could do no housework, and for two years did not get out of the house. The Kidney Secretions were irregular, and doctors were not helping me. Doan's Kidney Pills brought me quick relief, and finally cured me. They saved my life." Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Didn't Need Cyclopedias.

The canvasser for cyclopedia came to the home of a colonel, whose record he had carefully studied before calling. The colonel was especially proud of some of his sons, so the canvasser began with:

"You have very fine boys of yours, colonel."

"They are," replied the colonel.

"I reckon you are ready to buy anything those boys want?"

"I am not," said the father of the fine boys.

"Well, then, let me sell you this cyclopedia. There's nothing will do your sons so much good."

But the colonel looked at him aghast. "Why, them lads of mine don't need any cyclopedia. They ride mules!"

Willing Hands.

There is a good story going the rounds in Pittsburg of a young man, formerly a stock-broker, who dropped many thousands in speculation during the early spring.

One night, shortly after going to bed, the Pittsburger was awakened by strange signs. At his first motion to jump up he was greeted by a hoarse voice. "If you stir you're a dead man!" it said. "I'm looking for money."

"In that case," pleasantly answered the erstwhile speculator, "kindly allow me to arise and strike a light. I shall deem it a favor to be permitted to assist in the search."—Harper's Weekly.

Cats as Plague Preventive.

An Indian correspondent of the North China Daily News writes: "The newspapers have latterly been full of all sorts of suggestions for the stamping out of plague. For instance, never kill rats; if you do the fatal rat flea may be driven to feed on you. Also, compel each householder to keep cats. In fact, let the cult of the cat as it prevailed in ancient Egypt be revived in India. Plenty of cats, no rats."

Fictitious Impression.

"I cannot help thinking of the wonderful thought displayed in your daughter's commencement essay last June." "Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox, "judging from that essay, you would think she was as much interested in The Subservience of Individual Ambition to Eternal Destiny," as she is in ice cream soda." But she isn't."

HAVE STRANGE GIFT

QUEER POWER EXERCISED BY "HORSE WHISPERERS."

Authentic Cases on Record Where the Most Unruly Beasts Have Been Made Tractable by a Few Words.

The horse whisperers might be as unknown quantity in England and Ireland to-day, but there are not a few men who exercise a wonderful control with their voices over horses which, when the dominating influence is absent are apt to literally kick over the traces, says a writer in the London Stock Journal. In the thoroughbred stables of England and Ireland to-day there are not a few stablemen and jockeys who succeed in holding in check the vice in horses which is demonstrative manner show that they cannot tolerate the presence of the grooms or attendants.

The horse whisperer of to-day avoids all excitement, and treats entirely to a combination of sounds or words. There is no bullying done, and the whisperer can face a mad horse with bad habits and his back and apparently at the mercy of the beast that has to come under the charm One means of keeping remount horses quiet is a story reported to come from African war was that employed by the yeomen, who sat in a ring of head-to-head horses singing as loudly as possible and riveting the ears and attention of the otherwise sprawling and hungry animals.

One of the first whisperers to acquire the power was Con Sullivan, who migrated in his youth from Killmallock, where he could trace his principal ancestors through a long line of sneakers and beaters almost exclusively employed by Lord Doneraile.

So unaccountable and so magical was the power Sullivan instantly acquired over the most savage brute that his pariah priest, who had excellent grounds for not believing him to be ordinarily amenable to reason, denounced him as a sorcerer. The whisper of this man made an indelible impression upon any horse bringing the pupil to a degree of docility unattainable in the ordinary course of discipline.

The race horse King Pepin, a famous racer, vicious, and reputed to have killed two grooms at the Curraugh, once came under his charge. He was wanted to win a race at Maryow, but when saddling time came it found him in one of his unmanageable moods. He reared, plunged and fought fore and aft until he completely cowed groom and jockey. It was at this crisis that some one recommended that he should be "whispered." As it was the only chance left of taming him in time for the start, his owner gladly availed himself of it, though warned that horses were sometimes thrown into a state of stupor by the process.

Sullivan was soon found, and he was delighted with the opportunity of "whulsheprin' before so much quality' from all parts." Show us the wild baste," he said, "and we'll soon tache him manners."

When he got within the circle—and a wide one it was—in which King Pepin was playing his antics, he walked up to him, approaching the horse from behind. He mumbled some words as he walked, which, though not quite audible, were as unintelligible as a sermon in the unknown tongue, but they had a most magical effect on the animal, which became still. Sullivan then patted him on the neck; while he whispered, a word or two in his ear. Suddenly King Pepin went down on his knees and incontinently lay down.

The whisperer then stretched himself on him at full length, took out a pouch containing a stick of tobacco, flint and steel, struck a light and blew a cloud, as he lounged on the stomach of his high mettled colt with as much composure as if he were seated on a bench in his favorite taproom. After two or three puffs he got up, beckoned the nag to, his legs, saddled him and walked off to the starting post, the horse following and fawning upon him like a dog. He won the race in a canter.

Your Second Best.

It is sad that so many of us are content with our second best. We are always going to do better. We have vague ideas as to the great things we will do, but that is as far as we get.

Before you go to bed to-night think over your day. If you had it to live over again would you spend it just as you have done it?

Most of us would not. Well, we still have tomorrow.

No matter how well you do anything, try to do it better. Don't be satisfied with anything but the very best that you are capable of.

Remember that this is your chance. Don't lose your golden opportunity.

Brave Leader of Arabs.

Most romantic of all the figures brought into the limelight by the troubles in Morocco is the "red Kaid," a native leader who has ridden at the head of his men in many a gallant charge against the French. A correspondent says of him "His native name is Kaid el Hemeri. Hemeri meaning red. He belongs to the M'Dacra tribe, near Casablanca. He derives his name from the fact that he always dresses in red. The kaid is paralyzed in both hands and cannot shoot, but he is well known for his gallantry in leading and urging his men. He is said to possess a talisman rendering him bullet proof."

RHEUMATISM RECIPE

PREPARE SIMPLE HOME-MADE MIXTURE YOURSELF.

Buy the Ingredients from Any Druggist in Your Town and Shake Them in a Bottle to Mix This.

A well-known authority on Rheumatism gives the readers of a large New York daily paper the following valuable, yet simple and harmless prescription, which any one can easily prepare at home:

Mix by shaking well in a bottle, and take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

He states that the ingredients can be obtained from any good prescription pharmacy at small cost, and, being a tasteable extraction, are harmless to take.

This pleasant mixture, if taken regularly for a few days, is said to overcome almost any case of Rheumatism. The pain and swelling, if any, diminishes with each dose, until permanent results are obtained, and without injuring the stomach. While there are many so-called Rheumatism remedies, patent medicines, etc., some of which do give relief, few really give permanent results, and the above will, no doubt, be greatly appreciated by many sufferers here at this time.

Inquiry at the drug stores of even the small towns elicits the information that these drugs are harmless and can be bought separately, or the druggists will mix the prescription if asked to.

GIVING HIM A CHANCE.

Surely Time for Hubby to Do a Little Disdestep.

Mrs. Wilson's husband was often obliged to go to New York on business, and frequently did not reach his home until the arrival of the midnight train. Mrs. Wilson had been in the habit of sleeping peacefully at these times without fear, but a number of burglaries in the neighborhood during one of her husband's trips to New York had disturbed her calm.

On the night of his return Mr. Wilson was stealing carefully up the front stairs, so as not to wake each of the children on his way, when he found him in one of his unmanageable moods. He reared, plunged and fought fore and aft until he completely cowed groom and jockey. It was at this crisis that some one recommended that he should be "whispered." As it was the only chance left of taming him in time for the start, his owner gladly availed himself of it, though warned that horses were sometimes thrown into a state of stupor by the process.

Laundry work at home would be much more satisfactory if the right starch were used. In order to get the desired stiffness, it is usually necessary to use so much starch that the beauty and fineness of the fabric is hidden behind a paste of varying thickness, which not only destroys the appearance, but also affects the wearing quality of the goods. This trouble can be entirely overcome by using Defiance Starch, as it can be applied much more thinly because of its greater strength than other makes.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, Free.

Governor Sheldon has never addressed a Table Rock audience and now that he is coming to it on October 29, a rousing time will be given an opportunity of hearing him.

The Nebraska Teachers' association will meet at Lincoln on December 26, 26 and 27. The Christmas day program will shunt some people "parts," and musicians have put forth their utmost efforts and all express themselves pleased with the attitude.

In most cases consumption results from a neglected or improperly treated cold. Foley's Honey and Tar cures the most obstinate coughs and prevents serious results. It does you no more than the dishonest preparations and you should insist upon having the genuine in the yellow package. Opera House Drug Store

The trial of Dr. Perryman, who was permitted to withdraw from the pastorate of the University Place M. E. church under charges of immoral conduct, is under trial at Lincoln charges having been preferred by Mrs. Cross a member of his flock, who confessed to illicit relations with the preacher.

Colds on the Chest

Ask your doctor the medical name for a cold on the chest. He will say, "Bronchitis." Ask him if it is ever serious. Lastly, ask him if he prescribes Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for this disease. Keep in close touch with your family physician.

Ayers

We publish our formulas. Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is a tonic expectorant. It contains no alcohol. We want you to consult your doctor about it.

When you tell your doctor about the hard taste in your mouth, loss of appetite, headache, coated tongue, and general debility, don't tell him that you have "Dyspepsia," and when he sees your coated tongue, he will say, "You are bilious." Ayer's Pills work well in such cases.

Hon. M. B. Reese.

Hon. M. B. Reese, was born in Macoupin county, Illinois, in 1839, a farmer boy, and doubtless would still be a farmer with a couple hundred acres in Illinois but for the fact that he was injured in an army accident the time he was ready to branch out, and this turned his attention to another profession, for in those days a farmer didn't get to use a riding plow or cut corn unless by proxy as they do now. While he was living on the farm Judge Reese completed the course prescribed by the country schools and then worked his way through a seminary near his home. He was admitted to practice and removed to Osceola, Iowa, Illinois having become entirely too western for him. He lived in Iowa from 1865 to 1871, when he heard the call of the prairies and removed to Plattsmouth, where he again hung out his shingle. The republican candidate is a magnificent specimen of manhood; about six feet tall and broad in proportion. He has snow white hair and lots of it, and a long white moustache. He is a good specimen of the man who is strong enough to blaze a trail in a new country or lead an old country out of a rut.

Speaking of Judge Reese, Governor Shallon said: "The republicans have nominated a candidate in whom the people have every confidence. Judge Reese has a spotless record, both public and private. He is a student, a scholar and a tireless worker. I have been his daimler for years. He has always stood for the best interest of the people regardless of the consequences to himself. He has been opposed to machine rule in politics and has fought for years that the government and the people might be brought closer and closer together. In the early days luck in Warren he encountered the hostility of ring rule, and he has always had the enmity of those who prefer machine control in politics rather than have the majority of the people to control. He should receive the entire republican vote and doubtless will receive many of the votes of the opposition parties because he stands for the very best in state government. He is one of Nebraska's best men and will make a splendid record on the bench.

FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR
Cures Colds Prevents Pneumonia

LAND LAND LAND

Land that grows 15 to 25 tons of sugar beets to the acre, 200 to 400 bushels of potatoes, 30 to 100 bushels of oats, 35 to 90 bushels of corn to the acre, and all kinds of fruit, berries and melons in abundance. Rich, virgin soil, that grows luxurious crops like magic, when the water that the U. S. government provides at cost is flowed onto it. There is no such thing as crop failure under irrigation. The farmer plants his crop and absolutely controls the amount of water his crops need at exactly the proper time, and he can grow more profitable crops than he can grow in any natural rainfall country, such as sugar beets and alfalfa. Government statistics show that irrigated land will produce from one third to one-half more crops than any natural rainfall country. Officials of the U. S. Reclamation Service say that the North Platte project, which will irrigate the land we are selling, is best adapted to irrigation of any land in the country, and the supply of water is unlimited.

Renters, why pay from $3 to $10 an acre rent for land when you can buy the same or better irrigated land for about the same money you are paying for one year's rent, of an eastern farm?

Come to the New Land and own a fine farm that will grow larger crops than the high-priced land you are renting. Uncle Sam will supply you with water to irrigate the same of the most productive land in the country at cost. I can locate you a fine 160 acre irrigable farm for from $1 to $5 per acre.

Don't Wait! It won't last long. Thousands of people are flocking to this country, and the sooner you come the better bargain I can give you. Don't waste your life renting somebody else's farm at a high price. Come to the richland North Platte valley, and make a home and fortune for yourself and family. Don't neglect this splendid opportunity. There's big money in it. This land that you can now secure for practically nothing will be worth from $100 to $200 per acre as soon as irrigated and improved. It is better land than Colorado land, that is now selling for as much. You can hire all the work done on sugar beets for $25 an acre, and at the average yield of 20 tons an acre, you can clear $95 an acre and do no work on it yourself.

Farm Owners. Why farm $400 eastern land when you can buy irrigated land here from one-tenth to one-fourth the money, and get land that will produce larger crops and increase rapidly in value? Sell out and come to the rich North Platte valley. We are not pioneering. There are no hardships in this country—towns, railroads, schools and churches are close at hand. This Platte Valley is centrally located and convenient to all markets. Railroad communications are unexcelled to all good shipping points. All kinds of produce, cattle, hogs and sheep command a high price. The Burlington R. R. now runs through the valley and the Union Pacific is rapidly pushing work on a through line to the coast, which line also runs through the valley. Thousands and thousands of tons of hay are out in the river bottoms every year.

Investors: We can sell you deeded land that is increasing rapidly in value and will continue to increase in value for years to come. Irrigated land is not subject to the depression in land values that always go with a period of crop failures in any natural rainfall country. No matter what the weather you can grow a crop every year under irrigation. I control the sale of thousands of acres of irrigated and dry lands, hay land and ranches. I can secure you any kind of land at a price that will make money quickly for you.

Write today for further information. Local real estate dealers correspond; we can make some money for you.

The Frogs.

Of my studies of nature I could not help but be struck with the idiocy of the frogs. They were unable to learn by my approach and leap of fantastic fear, but instead of leaping away from me they leaped toward me many of them and even against me.

There was one frog especially, who, in the most furious manner hurled himself against my legs repeatedly.

"Why are you such a fool?" I asked, at length.

"That is easily answered," replied the frog, with admirable composure. "You are perhaps not aware of what is nevertheless a fact, that American frogs, with the exception of a few old families in New Jersey, are descended from the frog who would a-wooing go; whether his mother would let him or no. In other words, our idiocy is hereditary."

"Is it not singular?—Life.

The Home People.

Most of invitation and ought to find in our own household much more than we look for. It is necessary for those who would live happily together that they should try to show their best to one another.

They should try to show the best of their minds. All things should be in common. Every pleasant pleasant experience, whether it be of books or of life, ought to be shared.

Existence is maintained at a much higher level of happiness than it should be, simply because those who are bound by the closest natural ties do not know how to make each other happy. Across the time that should be given to the arranging of the soul.—Junior Class.

Railroad Notes

J. A. Barnes was pulled over to court this week in behalf of the Burlington lawsuit C. H. Norris vs. B. R. Co. Uncle Chauncy got judgment.

There is no use for a B. R. man to try for a layoff, nowadays, unless he is deathly sick or some of his people are dead. Business is exceedingly good for this time of the year.

Railroad engineers in England receive salaries of and below $16.50 a week, and those are the men who run the fastest trains, equal to our Empire State Express. Porters are compelled to exist upon tips and as tips are dwindling, they earn a bare living by working twelve hours a day. The president of each railroad in the country is a noble lord who knows little or nothing about business, and is merely a titled figurehead upon the employes naturally scoff.

A. B. Cherry, father of our townman Dr. Cherry, was a guest of his son last week. Mr. Cherry's home is now at Alva, Ok., but he lived for many years in Nebraska, in 1880 he was a member of the state senate from Gage county and served in that session with Hon. C. H. Norris, so that there was a pleasant meeting of the two gentlemen as they talked over the political battles of those days. This was the session when A. S. Paddock was elected United States Senator and as both gentlemen were for Paddock from the start, and as they had not seen each other since the close of the session they enjoyed meeting each other.

A fellow pulled into town Saturday night and registered at the Marble Hotel as Ed Fitzsimons, claiming to be a stockman and that he had 1000 head of sheep coming which he had to feed here and then ship them on to Kansas City. He made acquaintance about town from which he borrowed guns ranging from $10 to $15, wanting the money to buy feed for the sheep. Monday night he decamped from the Marble House while the hotel people were at the opera house and was into Pete by the city marshal in bed at the Morgan place he registered under the name of Mac Elson. He was brought up town and Judge Marble held court between 1 and 2 o'clock Tuesday morning and a fellow making settlement of the claims against him and settling his hotel bill which he failed to do prior to going to the Murphy.

And it is all the more remarkable, too, because that has been woman's chief occupation since she made the acquaintance of man.

BASIS OF WEALTH

MOTHER EARTH KIND TO ALL HER CHILDREN.

Utilization of Natural Resources Goes Hand in Hand with Civilization—Renewable and Renewable Riches.

Old mother earth is the basis of all wealth. Greatness of nations is commensurate with the degree of utilization of the mineral elements and other products, all of which are the result of natural laws. The higher the civilization the greater and the more economical are the uses of the earth's resources. In the great commercial and manufacturing centers of the world is found the superior intelligence. Wherever there is industry there, forsooth, is civilization. With the decay of commercial importance nations retrograde and lose power, and finally find a place in history only.

Wealth of countries can be divided into two classes; that which is exhaustible, and that which is renewable. The exhaustibles are the mineral wells, gold, silver, iron, copper, and all the useful metals—coal, salt, sulphur, oil and mineral products which once utilized in the industries and commerce are not renewable. The renewable wealth is entirely in the vegetable and animal kingdom and nearly all of it involved in the field of agriculture, using the word in its broadest sense, and is represented by the crops of cereals, vegetables, fruits, fibrous plants, the useful gums, such as rubber, the woods of trees and all that is of utility in the arts and manufactures.

The wealthiest nations, and those that give promise of the longest existence, are those that possess abundance of both exhaustible and renewable wealth. Both classes afford a field for manufacture and commerce. The nation that lacks the conditions necessary for the production of the renewable wealth, and only has exhaustible wealth, will eventually find its resources for self-sustainence at an end, and will of necessity become dependent upon some other nation.

No other nation possesses such diversified resources as does the United States. With the natural resources that will require ages of time to utilize, the millions upon millions of rich timber and agricultural lands representing renewable wealth, and every natural advantage for manufacture, within its vast territory hundreds of millions of people can find homes and sustenance for thousands of years to come, and if necessary supply other nations with a surplus of its products. Thus the nation will grow richer through dispersion of its renewable wealth for what represents the labor and the exhaustible wealth of less favored nations.

The countries comprising Great Britain have little renewable wealth according to population, and relies chiefly upon exhaustible resources, their utilization in manufacture, and the value of the labor of its people in manufacture for commerce of articles from the raw products, both mineral and vegetable imported from her dependencies and other nations. It is plain that the nation that exchanges its raw, exhaustible wealth for the renewable wealth of another country will grow poorer, and the nation that receives this exhaustible wealth in exchange for its renewable wealth will grow richer.

Principles that apply to nations in this regard, are also applicable to individuals. The first settlers in a republic like the United States, to its states and lesser communities. Thus it is patent that the state or community that employs its people in manufacturing from its products to the greatest extent, instead of having them go to the markets of the world in a raw state, will grow richer than its borders the profits accruing from labor employed in the production of its articles of commerce, will advance in wealth and importance.

THE GREATNESS OF NATIONS

Utilization of Natural Resources Goes Hand in Hand with Civilization—Exhaustible and Renewable Riches.

Greatness of nations is commensurate with the degree of utilization of the mineral elements and other products, all of which are the result of natural laws. Systems That Draw from Circulation Money That Should Be Kept Home.

THRIFT AND ECONOMY.

Economy is one of the essentials to success. It matters not how great one's earnings may be, if there is no pennies laid by, there will be no counting of dollars to your credit. From childhood children should be taught lessons of thrift, and the value of saving. There is a difference between economy and stinginess. There is an excess which defeats the aim, and is the cause of loss and misery.

That economy which prevents the farmer from spending money to properly house his stock during the winter, is paradoxical. It is a saving of dollars and the loss of dollars by the saving. That so-called economy which prevents the consuming of fuel in winter, which results in a cold house and sickness in the family, and perhaps a death, is niggardly stinginess, which is criminal. It is the saving of a few dollars in the coal bill, and paying perhaps a hundred or more to the doctor or the undertaker. There is no economy in cheap things generally. A bit of machinery that is needed about the farm should be the best. A cheap, poor mowing machine from some mail order house may break down when it is needed the most, and a result is the loss of tons of hay, several times the value of a good machine. Poor articles wear out rapidly, and are likely to give out at a time when most needed, and are a continual source of expense. A poor breed of stock is another illustration. Poor, bony horses eat more than well bred ones, and the latter always find a ready sale, while the former are unsalable, and is represented by the dollars that should be disposed of at any price. The same with hogs, sheep, and all classes of domestic stock. A poor lot of animals should be sold out and rid of as soon as possible. They are expensive and it is poor economy to keep them.

It is in looking after the saving of a penny and being blind to the dollar that could be gained that is the trouble with many. Savages have no idea of economy. They cannot forego a small pleasure for a greater one a little farther off. It is the ability to think out these matters that makes the civilized man superior to the barbarian. Think! Don't get tired of using the reasoning brain that a good Providence has given you. The whole progress of knowledge is thinking, and the power to make comparison. One of the drawbacks of many schools is the teaching the cramming of rules and facts without combining with them the importance of cause and effect. Teach one to think, and he will soon be a person of no-mean knowledge. It is the thinker who wins in life, and on the farm, in the workshop, in the store, anywhere and everywhere, where brains are needed, you will find it is the active, keen and careful thinker who forges to the front.

INTERESTS ARE EQUAL.

Farmers Should Cooperate with Townspeople in Work of Municipal Improvement.

Among the many plans devised to further the interests of small towns and cities, and which has proved most successful, is the commercial clubs in which all business men of the community cooperate for the common good. Organizations of this class is almost a necessity in any town where harmony is desired among the different business classes in the carrying out of plans for improvement, securing the enterprises of various kinds and the general good of all in the community. There is no reason why these clubs in their membership should be confined to the residents of the town. The farmers in the neighborhood are as deeply interested in the success of town enterprises as are the business men of the place, or at least they should be. For what will help along the town tends prosperity will also help the farmer.

In many localities there is a sentiment that the interests of the farmer and the business men are not parallel, that it is necessary that the one be obliterated as far as possible because there is no logical foundation for it. The better the town is the better the local market for the farmers' produce; the more equitable will be taxation and the better educational facilities. All these are matters that concern the farmer in the immediate neighborhood of the town. Many business men feel that a membership in only organized for promotion by two industries should be confined to business men; that perhaps the farmer would not be in accord with residents of the town in matters of public improvements. This is an error, a lack of confidence in the good judgment of the average farmer, who will invariably realize how important the home town is to him, and all his neighbors. Then the farmer sometimes thinks that he is not welcome in an association of business men, perhaps because he has never been invited to take part in meetings held to discuss matters pertaining to town affairs. There is no good reason why these sentiments should exist. It is only by a harmonious pulling together of the residents of the rural districts and business men that the greatest good can be brought about for the home town.

A Young Composer.

Rachel, aged 12, wrote an composition on wild flowers in which she praised the arbutus, the liverwort, the spring beauty, the blood root, and all of the other blossoms of dell and dale. But she wrote on both sides of her sheet of paper, and when she asked her father, who was an editor, to publish her article, he called her attention to that fact.

"You've written on both sides of your paper," said he.

"Well," was the reply, "and don't you print on both sides of yours?"

ALL THINGS IN PROPORTION.

Invalid's Meal Evidently Had Not Increased Good Humor.

For many weeks the irritable merchant had been riveted to his bed by typhoid fever. Now he was convalescing. He clamored for something to eat, declaring that he was starving.

"To-morrow you may have something to eat," promised the doctor. The merchant realised that there would be a restraint in his appetite, yet he saw, in vision, a modest, steaming meal placed at his bedside.

"Here is your dinner," said the nurse next day, as she gave the glowering patient a spoonful of tapioca pudding, and the doctor emphasizes that everything else you do must be in the same proportion."

Two hours later the nurse heard a frantic call from the bed chamber.

"Nurse," breathed the man heaply, "I want to do some reading, bring me a postage stamp."

HAVE CRAZE FOR FORMULA.

Smokers Follow Fashions in the Use of Tobacco.

"Make me up a package of tobacco according to the formula used by Edwin Booth," said the man with a southern accent. "That is the third man who has asked for that kind of tobacco today," said the dealer. "It is strange that people from remote parts of the country as well as New Yorkers make a fad of buying the same brand of tobacco that Booth smoked. And it isn't always the Booth mixture that they want. I have died away in the formula for mixing the favorite tobacco of many famous persons. Smokers the country over have heard of this collection of recipes and I have had a number of ways trip to New York is to try a pipeful of some big man's favorite tobacco. In most cases this special mixture is so strong that the nerves of the average smoker cannot stand it. He has to give up after a few pipefuls and go back to a milder kind. Many men get the satisfaction of having had the experience."—The New York Sun.

"BOO-HOO"
Shouts a Spanked Baby.

A Doctor of Divinity, now Editor of a well-known Religious paper, has written regarding the controversy between Collier's Weekly and the Religious Press of the Country and others, defending ourselves. Also regarding suits for libel brought by Collier's against us for commenting upon its methods.

These are his sentiments, with some very emphatic words left out.

"The religious Press owes you a debt of gratitude for your courage in showing up Collier's Weekly as the "Yell-Oh Man." Would you care to use the inclosed article on the "Boo Hoo Baby" as the "Yell-Oh Man's successor?"

A contemporary remarks that Collier's has finally run against a solid hickory "Post" and been damaged to the tune of $750,000.00."

Here is a publication which has, in utmost disregard of the facts, spread broadcast damaging statements about the Religious Press not only once, but has suffered those false statements to go uncontradicted until, not satisfied after libeling the Religious Press too quiet, and peaceful, to resent the insults it makes the mistake of wandering into fresh fields and pastures and libels dead against this Post and all the World laughs. Even Christians smile, as the Post goes lunging and slashing it back a dose of its own medicine."

"It is a mistake to say all the World laughs. Not a single soul except you, Collier's, but it cries and boo hoos like a spanked baby and wants $750,000.00 to soothe its tender, lacerated feelings."

"Thank Heaven it has at last struck a man who thinks enough of it to call a spade a "spade" and who believes in telling the whole truth without fear or favor."

Perhaps Collier's with its "utmost disregard for the facts," may say "no such letter exists. Nevertheless it is on file in our office, and is only one of a mass of letters and other data, newspaper comments, etc., convicting the "yellow" methods of Collier's. This volume is so large that a man could not well go thru it under half a day's steady work. The letters come from various parts of America.

Usually a private controversy is not interesting to the public, but this is a public controversy.

Collier's has been using the "yellow" methods to attract attention to itself, but jumping in the air, cracking heels together and yelling "Look at me! Wouldn't suffer so it started out on a "Holler Than Thou" attack on the Religious Press and on medicine.

We have it to the public now, as we did when we first resented Collier's attacks, to say whether, in a craving for sensation and circulation, its attacks do not amount to a systematic mercenary hounding. We likewise leave it to the public to say whether Collier's, by its own policy and methods, has not made itself more ridiculous than any comment of ours could make it.

Does Collier's expect to regain any self-inflicted loss of prestige by demonstrating thru suits for damages, that it can be more adept in evading liability for libels than the humble but resentful victims of its defamation, or starting a campaign for the passage of libel suits to silence the popular indignation, reproach and resentment which it has aroused.

Collier's can not dodge this public controversy by private law suits. It can not postpone the public judgment against it. That great jury, the Public, will hardly listen to the pleadings until we get a petit jury in a court room, before denouncing this prodigal detractor of institutions founded and fostered either by individuals or by the public, itself.

The controversy during our entire business career were ever made claiming "medicinal effects" for either Postum or Grape-Nuts. Medicinal effects are results obtained from the use of medicines.

Thousands of visitors go thru our entire works each month and see for themselves that Grape-Nuts contains absolutely nothing but wheat, barley and a little salt. Postum absolutely nothing but wheat and about ten per cent Pure Cream of Tartar powder. The art of preparing these simple elements in a scientific manner to obtain the best food value and flavor, required some work and experience to acquire.

Now, when any publication goes far enough out of its way to attack us because our advertising is "medical," it puts on record a remarkable exhibition of ignorance or worse.

We do claim physiological or bodily results from the use of these foods and the adoption of our suggestions regarding the discontinuance of coffee and tea, but we claim no knowledge of the individual in good health. We have no advice to offer the perfectly healthy person. His or her health is evidence in itself that the beverages and foods used exactly fit that person's requirements."

But to the man or woman who is ailing, we have something to say as a result of an unusually wide experience in the food and the result of proper feeding.

In the palpably ignorant attack on us in Collier's, appeared this statement.—"One widely circulated paragraph among those the impression that Grape-Nuts will obviate the necessity of an operation in appendicitis cases is lying and potentially deadly lying."

In reply to this exhibition of—well let the reader name it, the Postum Co., says:

Let it be understood that appendicitis results from long continued disturbances of the intestines, caused primarily by undigested starchy food, such as white bread, potatoes, rice, partly cooked cereals and such.

Starchy food is not digested in the upper stomach but passes on into the duodenum, or lower stomach and intestines, where, in a healthy individual, the transformation of the starch into a form of sugar is completed and the food absorbed by the blood.

But if the powers of digestion are weakened, a part of the starchy food will lie in the warmth and moisture of the body and decay, generating gases and irritating the mucous surfaces until under such conditions the whole lower part of the alimentary canal, including the colon and the appendix become involved. Disease sets in and at times takes the form known as appendicitis.

Now the symptoms of the trouble make their appearance, would it not be good practical common sense, to discontinue the starchy food which is causing the trouble and take a food in which the same has been transformed into a form of sugar in the process of manufacture?

Practically that is the same form of sugar found in the human body after starch has been perfectly digested.

Now, Postum food is made up very largely of starch and is required by the body for energy and warmth. Nothing therefore, is use should be discontinued, if possible, and for the reasons given above it is made possible in the manufacture of Grape-Nuts.

In connection with this change of food to bring relief from physical disorders, a good cathartic is necessary, to clean out the intestines to get rid of the immediate cause of the disturbance.

Many times the starchy food and the disease has lain dormant and the abuse continued too long, until appendicitis with all its evil would result. But it is a well-established fact among the best physicians who are acquainted with the two methods that preventative measures are far and away the best.

Now, we to be condemned for suggesting a way to prevent disease by following natural methods and for presenting a food that contains no "medicine" and produces no "medicinal effects" but which has guided literally thousands of persons from sickness to health? We have received during the years past upwards of 36,000 letters from people who have been either helped or made entirely well by following our suggestions, and they are simple.

If coffee disagrees and causes any of the ailments common to some coffee users quit it and take on Postum.

If white bread, potatoes, rice and other starch foods make trouble, quit and use Grape-Nuts food which is largely predigested and will digest, nourish and build strong, active nerve tissue full of force.

The "Mound City."

St. Louis rejoices in the sobriquet of Mound City from the fact that the original settlers found there many elevations which it is supposed were relics of that strange people who dwelt in the Ohio and Mississippi valleys and are known to modern times only as the Mound Builders. No adequate explanation has yet been found of their strange mode of leaving memorials of their existence. The limestone bluffs on which a part of St. Louis stands furnish a solid foundation for the business buildings.

Held Up.

"Stop!" shouted the man on the country road, holding up a warning hand. Muttering something about rural cops, the automobilist obeyed.

"Turn around and come back to town with me," said the stranger. "You were going at least 35 miles an hour."

"You're a constable, I suppose," said the automobilist, with a covert sneer, when they had reached the village.

"Me?" replied the passenger. "No, I'm a farmer and had to come into town when all the teams was busy. Nice growing weather? Thanks. Good-by."

Selling a Rat.

You have probably read or heard that the best way to rid a house of rats is to catch one and fasten a bell about its neck. A Mr. Delaware tried the experiment two months ago. He was badly bitten in making the bell fast, but he turned the rat loose and expected that the sight of that bell would have great results. It did have. In the first place, the rat who wore it was constantly on the move at night, thinking that the bell was the family cat. Sleeping all day and in the next the sounds brought scores of new rats to the house. Instead of being afraid of the bell, they were charmed with the music. Had the boy tied a harmonica to another rat's tail, the rodents would have had a dance every night.

She Was Willing.

"Yes," says the husband, "I have consented to accept the nomination."

"I am so glad the party is beginning to recognize your merit," beams the wife.

"Now my dear," the husband continues, "you know that political affairs are not love feasts, by any means. You must expect to see me vilified and attacked in a scandalous manner. No doubt the opposition will try to dig up sensational rumors about me, and all that sort of thing, but you must not—"

"Well," she interrupts, "I am really glad of it. You have always been strangely silent about whether or not you ever were engaged to anyone before you met me."

The Way of the Child.

A small boy who had recently passed his fifth birthday was riding in a car with his mother, when they were asked the customary question: "How old is the boy?" After being told the correct age, which did not require a fare, the conductor passed on to the next person.

The boy sat quite still as if pondering over some question, and then, concluding that full information had not been given, called loudly to the conductor, then at the other end of the car: "And mother's $1!"

A Definition of Success.

How have the hypothetical scientists and the exponents of unbelief benefited themselves or humanity at large by sowing the seeds of doubt broadcast in this world? The real scientists do not fall in this category, for they are believers in the real scene of the world; they know too much, they have seen too many mysterious manifestations of the Divine creative power. Now, those who have disposed of the Bible and all evidences of inspiration, have written a great many books and some of them have won what the world at large liffully calls fame. According to the ordinary measure that are applied in such cases, they have been extremely successful, but real success means the benefit of humanity in general, and how much benefit can be shown as the result of their labors, their success is not equal to that achieved by the direst poverty stricken, ignorant preacher.—Joel Chandler, in Uncle Remus' Magazine.

lute deadness of this woman. From the first I had known that her heart was dead, but knowledge is not always realization. She did not even know who I was. Her mind was dead as well as her heart, and the woman who through all those long days of her suffering she had silently worshiped. To all but him she was newborn.

At the sound of "wedding," "church," Bob's head slowly rose from her shoulder. I saw his decision the instant it caught his eye; I realized the uselessness of opposing it, and, sick at heart and horrified, I listened as he said in a voice now calm and soothing as that of a father to his child: "Yes, Beulah, my darling, I have slept too long. Bob has been naughty, but we will make up for lost time. Get your hat and cloak and we'll hurry to the church, or we will be late."

With a laugh of joy she followed him to the closet where hung the little gray turban and the pretty gray jacket. He took them from their peg and gave them to her.

"Will be a good, little boy, and not—or, no sister, no one to protect and shield her. The 'system' has robbed her of all in life, even of herself, of manliness in Jim, but I must try to win her back to herself, or to make her new world a happy one—a happy one for her."

CHAPTER VII.

An old gambler whose life had been spent listening to the rattle of the drop-in-bound-out little roulette ball, was told by a fellow victim, as his last dollar went to the relentless tiger's maw, that the keeper's foot was upon an electric button which enabled him to make the ball drop where his stake was not. He simply said: "Thank God. I thought that prince of cheats, Fate, who all through life has had his foot on the button of my game, was the one who did the trick." I am far farther from the great beyond? How long we waited Bob's awakening I could not tell. The clock's hands said an hour, it seemed to me an age. At last his magnificent physique, his unpoisoned blood and splendid brain pulled him through to his new world of mind and heart nature. His eyelids lifted. He looked at me, then at Beulah Sands, with eyes so sad, so awful in their perplexed mournfulness, that I almost wished they had never opened, or had opened to let me see the childlike look that now shone from the girl's. His mind was readable, for her and his lips murmured "Beulah."

"There, Bob, I thought you would know it was time to wake up." She bent over and kissed him on the eyes again with the loving ardor a child bestows upon its pets.

He slowly rose to his feet. I could see from his eyes and the shudder that went over him as he caught sight of the paper on the desk that he was himself: that memory of the happening of the day before was in the sleep. He rose to his full height, his head went up, and his shoulders back, but only from habit and for an instant. Then he folded Beulah Sands to his breast and dropped his head upon her shoulder. He sobbed like a father with the corpse of his child. "Poor Bob, poor Bob, if you could see you treat your Beulah when she's let you sleep so your poor head would be pretty for the wedding!" Is what I said to myself. I folded him and stroked his head and his brother hands. Beulah Sands was dead

Edited by E. E. Lies. Our Motto "For God and Home and Every Land"

The whole scene seemed to stand out in living reality before us as he pictured the disciples about to be deprived of their leader and Lord discouraged and restless scarce knowing what to do. Peter says "I go a fishing," and the others said, "We go with thee also." So they were back at the old occupation instead of trying in some way to prepare themselves for delivering the great truths he had committed unto them to teach to a lost world. Jesus calls to them as a loving father might, "Children have ye any meat?" This was his text. He pictured the scene as Peter wearily answered no. Then follows Jesus command "Cast the net on the right side of the ship and ye shall find." Peter says, "We have toiled all night and have caught nothing, nevertheless at thy command I will let down the net on the right side of the ship and immediately it was filled with fish so they could scarcely draw it to land. They called all to assist them and drew it in with a hundred and fifty three great fishes and yet the net was not broken. He drew the practical lesson from this Christians, professed followers of the Lord becoming discouraged, weary and going back to their old occupations seeking something to fill, unwilling to surrender all to the great thought of seeking first the kingdom of heaven. This is the reason the church has not been successful as it ought. Christ's followers have gone back to their old occupations and have not witnessed to feed the hungry storming souls who are calling from India, China and the islands of the sea for helpers and teachers to show them the way of life. We went home with that wonderful appeal ringing in our ears "Children have you any meat?

Tecumseh, Neb, Oct. 19.—Mr and Mrs James H Corchran, with the bodies of their two little children, who died, S. D. this afternoon. The particulars of the terrible accident which cost the two lives are here given: Mr and Mrs Corchran with their two children were living in a tent several miles from Mitchell. Mr. Corchran being a bridge construction foreman and having work there. The father and a brother, Lew Corchran, had gone to work yesterday morning the work being about a quarter of a mile from the tent. Mrs. Corchran and the children were to return to Tecumseh this week and the morning planned to wash that day. She left the children in a tent in which there was a stove with a fire therein, to go perhaps 150 yards for a pail of water. The children wanted to go with her but she told them she was cold and they had better remain in the tent. The stove pipe extended up from the stove one joint of pipe and then went out through the canvas, a proper protection having been made where the pipe passed through the canvas. It is supposed that when the mother left, the little girl let the canvas swing around against the pipe. The mother was away but a very short time, but in that time the tent with its bedding, etc, which was very dry, burned and was completely destroyed when the mother got back. The clothes of the children and been burned from them and their little bodies were burned to a crisp. Mrs. Corchran, a very large and one half years, was just breathing her last as the mother picked her little body up, both the children having left the tent, and the little boy aged twenty months was dead when the mother reached him. They had inhaled the fire and with the burning of their bodies were killed within a few seconds. The workmen at the bridge were summoned and the bodies cared for. An undertaker from Mitchell prepared the bodies for shipment to Tecumseh, both of them being placed in one casket. The parents, who are almost insane with their sudden terrible affliction, with Mr Lew Corchran and the bodies of the children reached Tecumseh at 2:45 this afternoon having spent all night and the day in that time on the road. The parents are well known young people of Tecumseh, the father being the son of Dr John Corchran, the pioneer physician of Tecumseh.

Out of Sight

"Out of sight out of mind" is an old saying which applies with special force to a sore, burn or wound that's been treated with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's out of sight, out of mind and out of existence. Piles too and chilblains disappear under its healing influence. Guaranteed by Cotton Drug Co. 25c.

The biggest stalk of corn raised in Nemaha county, Kansas, this year was brought to town by the man who raised it, Arthur Robinson, who lives near Corning. It is just a little the fort over fourteen feet in height, the three ears of corn on it, and in round numbers 60 inches around near the base of the stalk. Of course, Mr. Robinson insists that this is not an extra large stalk and that he has plenty more just as the but just this same we will bet that he hunted quite awhile for it.—Ex

Did it ever occur to you that the digestive apparatus of the four different classes of farm animals are entirely different, and therefore naturally require different treatments and different feeding. For example, clean cotton seed hulls are good for cattle but would be very bad for sheep. Different spices, too, are required for which different foods are differently prepared according to the class of animal in your digestive apparatus for which they are intended. That is why Gold Coin Stock Tonics for Horses, Gold Coin Stock Tonics for Cattle, Gold Coin Horse Tonics for Sheep, Gold Coin Hog Tonics for Swine" are different. W. J. SLOAN PLEADS GUILTY TO CHARGE OF MURDER.

SENTENCED TO LONG TERM

Says He Killed Frank Hermann Near Grand Island in Early Part of Last Summer—Other State News.

W. J. Sloan confessed at Grand Island to the murder of Frank Hermann, in Hall county, pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree and was sentenced to fifteen years in the penitentiary. Hermann's decomposed body was found in a straw stack about the middle of June last. Officers worked diligently on the few clews that were available and finally arrested Sloan, who was a worker in a construction gang. Sloan finally admitted the killing, but stated that Hermann first came at him with the iron bolt with which Hermann said he killed his victim.

COMMISSION SE FREE TO ACT.

Federal Court Refuses to Restrain It From Name of Rates.

In a memorandum opinion Judge T. C. Munger of the United States circuit court in Lincoln denied the request of the railroads that the temporary restraining order dissolved during the recent session in Omaha be continued in force pending an appeal.

The railroads secured a temporary restraining order enjoining the railway commission of this state from mailing to the Burlington, Northwestern, Union Pacific and the Missouri Pacific "any copies or copy of any order reducing the rates for the transportation of corn, wheat and flaxseed, and from in any manner giving any notice" to the roads named reducing the rates for the transportation of corn, wheat and flaxseed in the state. On the hearing held in Omaha the case was argued at length by attorneys of the railroads and for the state and the order dissolved by the court. These the railroads in perfect their appeal, asked that the temporary order be continued in force during the pendency of appeal. This the court denies. While the case was decided applies only to the Burlington, by agreement made at Omaha during the hearing, any order made in the Burlington case will apply to the four roads named. A similar application for a temporary restraining order made by the Rock Island and Grand Island roads, is yet to be considered.

KILLED BY ELEVATOR FALL.

Mistake by Another Hurls Workman to Sudden Death.

Frank Van Horn was killed by the breaking of a cable on an elevator in the Cooper-Cole building on South Tenth st., Lincoln, and the consequent fall into the basement of the man and the elevator cage. Death was not instantaneous, the injured man living more than two hours after the fall. In fixing this difficulty the cable had been left too short on the drum, and the elevator weight struck too soon in its ascent to allow the elevator to come clear down. To remedy this Van Horn had gone up in the cage to fasten it to the upper bracing with block and tackle, while the cable was lengthened on the drum. Someone wanted to lower the cage slightly, and pulled the control rope. But he pulled the rope the wrong way and the cage already close to the roof, rose violently and struck sharply. The new cable proved no stronger, the heavy cage dropped through to the basement. Van Horn was thrown out of the cage striking on his side on a pile of gas pipe that was heaped in the basement.

FATAL SHOOTING AT FALLS CITY.

Quarrel Between Negroes Has Possible Murder as Result.

As a result of a quarrel Charles Wilson, colored, porter at Demers & Rule's barber shop, Falls City, was shot and killed by another colored boy, Clyde Ellington. No one witnessed the deed, but after the shooting Ellington walked into the National hotel and said to Proprietor Spence: "I have got my man and wish to surrender." The sheriff was called and Ellington put into jail. He will be given a preliminary hearing Saturday morning. The young men were each about twenty years of age and had always borne good reputations in the community.

McCloy Named for Senator.

The republican committee of Lancaster county has nominated John M. McCloy for state senator to fill the vacancy caused by Joe Burns making affidavit that he lives in Colorado. Senator Burns has not yet resigned his place and will not even discuss the matter. In the governor's proclamation no mention is made of a vacancy existing in this district, and it is a question how McCloy will get his name on the ballot. The secretary of state has not been officially informed of a vacancy.

FIRE DAMAGES COLLEGE.

Fremont Educational Institution Suffers Severe Loss.

October 14 Fremont Normal college was damaged by fire to the extent of about $45,000, due to a defective flue, the blaze starting in the attic and spreading rapidly over the main building and to the east and west wings.

The fire department worked hard to stay the progress of the flames, but was powerless until the building had been pretty heavily damaged.

Volunteers helped to save furniture and fixtures. Among the things that were carried out were $10,000 worth of pianos. Practically all of the fine furniture in the apartments of Mr. and Mrs. Clemmons was saved.

The insurance carried was $20,000. Plans for reconstruction are already under way.

BADLY HURT IN A FIRE.

School Teacher at Elmwood Jumps From Upstairs Window.

The farm residence of the late Z. P. Earl, five miles north and two miles west of Elmwood, was totally destroyed by fire, thought to have originated from the furnace. Nothing was saved buta piano, parlor carpet and some clothing.

Miss Edna Miller of Elmwood, who teaches in the Zoos district, boarded at the Earl home, and was terribly injured by jumping from an upstairs window, a distance of twenty feet, falling on the cement walk, where she was discovered soon after, when a ladder was being taken to her window. Miss Miller was called in plenty of time to get out of the house, but evidently remained to put on most of her clothing.

SERIOUS RESULT FROM FIRE.

Small Blaze at Hastings Ends In Injuries to Two Men.

At Hastings a silk skirt containing gasoline took fire at Edgett's pantorium. Sam Edgett was seriously burned about the throat and face and was badly bruised by jumping fifteen feet to the stone walk below. Jay Hollister, who was also in the room, jumped from a window and fell in such a way as to dislocate his right hip. Serious bruises on his head required sutures in unconsciousness, and it is feared his skull is fractured. One arm was fractured. But little damage was done by the fire.

Baking Powder Under Food Law.

Food Commissioner J. W. Johnson has changed his recent ruling that baking powder does not come under the provisions of the pure food law. He finds upon examining the law that any article entering into the making of food comes under the provisions of the law. Therefore he has reversed his ruling and will require baking powder to be branded as to weight. "I do not think this reversal of my ruling," said Mr. Johnson, "is as bad as if I had first held baking powder comes within the law and then after inspecting with its manufacturers had ruled that it does not come under the law. It is possible that I may have to change rulings from time to time."

Young Woman Found Insane.

Miss Daisy Wilson, aged 18, was tried by the insanity commission in Fremont, and was found to be a fit subject for the insane hospital. Miss Wilson, who is the daughter of a farmer who lives near Ames, left home ten days ago and went to Evanston, Wyo. She labored under a peculiar fancy that she had been bequeathed some railroad stock on the Pacific coast, and she had started for San Francisco all alone. Her parents, after searching for her for several days, learned that she was in the custody of the authorities at Evanston, where her peculiar behavior had resulted in her detention. She was brought back to Fremont.

Grand Island Merchants to Close.

An agreement has been signed by thirty-five of the retail merchants of Grand Island to close their stores at 6 o'clock p. m. excepting on Saturdays, when the closing hour shall be 9 p. m. The ten days before Christmas are excepted. This is a reduction of half an hour on all days except Saturday and of about an hour on Saturdays. The movement is the result of a visit to the city, and conference with some of the merchants by Commissioner of Labor J. H. Ryder.

Date For Creamery Hearing.

The state railway commission has set October 25 at 10 o'clock in the morning to hear the testimony in the case brought by the Farmers' Creamery company against the Pacific Express company and other companies for better service. When the creamery rate hearing was concluded the creamery men and the express company representatives got together and tried to adjust their differences, but up to this time, so the commission has been informed, they have not agreed, hence a day was set for the hearing.

LONG FLIGHT IN AIR

CHANDLER AND M'COY TRAVEL FAR FROM ST. LOUIS.

MAKE AN ALL NIGHT TRIP

Still High From Earth as They Go Over Gallipolis, O., Head for West Virginia—Can Claim the Lahm Cup.

A St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 18 dispatch says: Swinging through the, atmosphere at a speed roughly estimated at twenty-two miles an hour, the United States signal corps balloon No. 10, in which Aeronauts J. C. McCoy and Captain Charles de F. Chandler, of the United States signal corps, ascended here last evening, passed over Illinois and Indiana last night, and across Ohio today, and at night fall was apparently about to land in the vicinity heard from. The distance covered on a straight line measurement is approximately 500 miles, and the voyage won for the aeronauts the Lahm cup. The Lahm cup was instituted by the aero club of America soon after the international races at Paris in 1906, at which Lieut. James Lahm won the James Gordon Bennett cup for America. So joyful were the members of the club at the victory that the cup was named for the pilot of the balloon "United States", and it was put up by the club to be won by the aeronaut who traveled more than 500 miles, the distance traveled by the "United States" in the Paris races, provided the start was made from American soil. Lieutenant Lahm has never held the cup and this was the first time it was ever won.

When the ascension was made last evening it was the intention of the aeronauts to remain in the air all night as a test of the gas to be used by the balloons in the international aeronautic contests which begin next week.

The balloon, with a capacity of 70,000 cubic feet of gas was filled yesterday afternoon from the gas plant at Steedman and Ruiker streets. Thousands and visiting aeronauts were present when the ascent was made at 4:10 p. m.

The first report received from the aeronauts was a message dropped near Leesburg, O., and telegraphed by the finder to the Associated Press office in Chicago. The message stated balloonists had dropped it at 6 a. m. and they were then traveling southeast rapidly.

Later they were seen passing over Gallipolis, O., and by the middle of the afternoon they were in West Virginia, in the vicinity of Point Pleasant. There the balloon started up the Kanawaha valley, according to a long distance telephone message to St. Louis and no further tidings had been received up to 9:30 tonight. Members of the international balloon contest committee and the other aeronauts here tonight spoke of the flight with great enthusiasm, saying that it will establish an epoch in balloon sailing.

HIS HUNT IS NOT IN VAIN.

President Kills Big Black Bear in the Canebrakes.

News of the killing of a big black bear by President Roosevelt in the canebrakes near Bear Lake, La., reached New Orleans in a telegram to John M. Parker, one of the gentlemen who invited the president to hunt in the state and who himself was a member of the hunting party until business required his returning to New Orleans. The telegram was signed by Leo Shields, another member of the party, and read as follows:

"President Roosevelt killed a great big bear. Went into thicket after him."

TWO CHILDREN BURNED.

Small Boy and Girl Killed by Flames in Dakota.

A telegram was received in Tecumseh, Neb., from James H. Cochrane, who has been engaged in bridge work near Mitchell, South Dakota, to the effect that his two children, a girl aged three and one-half years and a boy aged eighteen months, burned to death. No particulars were given. The family had been living in a tent near the bridge work all summer. The father is a son of Dr. John Cochrane, a pioneer physician of Tecumseh. The bodies will be brought to Tecumseh for burial.

Accused of Criminal Libel.

Chas. M. Shortidge, editor of the San Jose (Cal.) Daily Times, was arrested at the instance of Congressman E. A. Hayes on a charge of criminal libel. Shortidge, in a speech, stated Hayes had burned his manslon to collect the insurance.

KEEPS THE WIRELESS BUSY.

Thirteen Thousand Words Transmitted Across Atlantic.

"Yesterday we transmitted thirteen thousand words by wireless across the ocean to Europe and received two thousand words in return from the other side," was the statement William Marconi made of the results of the first day's work of the wireless trans-Atlantic service from Sidney, N. S., to Clifden, Ireland. It transpires that a breakdown occurred and the service was interrupted four hours.

HANG THE LIBELER.

Punishment Proposed by Chancellor E. Benjamin Andrews.

President E. Benjamin Andrews, of the University of Nebraska, in addressing the fall convention of the George Washington university in Washington, D. C., bitterly denounced what he termed malicious and wilful misrepresentation of the acts of public or prominent men by the press.

"Hanging," he said, "should be the punishment meted out to a proved libeler. None of the business villainies alleged to be so rife," he continued, "can compare in atrocity with these squalid campaigns of libel and libelous caricatures which recent months have produced."

Dr. Andrews said he did not care for the rich as such, but that the pride, idleness and doubtful practices of a few rich are no justice for putting all rich men in the pillory. He contended that high prices of commodities were attributable to the tolerance of the public rather than to monopolistic tendencies.

PURE FOOD LAW SUSTAINED.

South Dakota Enactment Upheld by the Federal Court.

Judge Carland of the United States district court at Redfield, S. D., has just handed down a decision sustaining the application of Marion W. Savage for a temporary restraining order enjoining the pure food commissioner of that state from enforcing the pure food law. This law provides that the ingredients of stock food be printed on the label. Marion W. Savage brought the action to restrain the enforcement of the law. This petition has been denied and the pure food commissioner will undoubtedly issue a new order to prevent Savage selling the stock food until such stock foods which do not disclose the ingredients composing the same.

CHURCH UNION IS FAVORED.

Report Made at Cleveland Unanimous For Amalgamation.

The report of the committee of twenty-eight to which had been referred the question of tri-church union, was made to the triennial council of the congregational church in session at Cleveland, O. The committee is unanimous in its reports favoring the proposed amalgamation of the Congregational, Methodist Protestants and United Brethren. The report says in part:

"We invite the other two denominations to unite with us in referring the act of the union to the general council of the union of churches to afford opportunity for perfecting the plan of union. The general council to report its results to the national body of each denomination."

MAY BUY SPAIN'S INTEREST.

France Thinking of Taking Over Possessions in Morocco.

A startling report which cannot be verified is in circulation in Tangier, Morocco, to the effect that France, with the consent of Sultan Abd-El-Aziz, intends making Spain a monetary offer for all her interests in Morocco—notably Melilla—and Ceuta, which offer if the deal is made, will be the base of operations against the pretender to the throne of Morocco.

Warg Goes to High Court.

Application for a writ of certiorari was made to the supreme court of the United States to bring the case of George G. Withdrawns From State.

The Consumers Oil company reported from Austin as having withdrawn from Texas only nominally, it is said, really did so. Its six mills in Texas and Arkansas, three in each state, were sold to Louis C. Shell of Chicago. The mills are located at Houston, Waco, Greenville, Tex., and Little Rock, Forest City, Pine Bluffs, Ark.

Prune Growers Form Pool.

Twenty-six growers of prunes have pooled the product of their orchards and an organization founded at Campbell, Calif., and are holding one hundred and eighty tons belonging to the members until the market reaches the price they have set for sale. The crop for the year is the lightest in the memory of most of the growers. The one hundred and eighty tons is the product of six hundred acres of orchard which last year yielded 1,500 tons and in 1900 a crop of 5,500 tons.

WRECK OF TOWN

POWDER EXPLOSION WIPES OUT FONTANET, IND.

DEATH LIST MAY BE FIFTY

Injured Run Up to Hundreds, Some Perilously.—Little Left of the Place.—Practically Every Building Is Torn to Pieces.

A Fontanet, Ind., October 16, dispatch states: Between twenty-five and fifty dead; six hundred injured; and a city of one thousand people wiped out. Such is the fate which overtook Fontanet yesterday when the Dupont powder works exploded. Where stood a thriving and busy town of 1,000 people this morning, tonight there is ruin and scattered wreckage. The dead and more seriously injured have been taken away. Five hundred inhabitants, all more or less wounded, remain to gather their household goods and sleep under tents and on cots guarded by soldiers of the state.

Without warning the powder mills, seven in number, blew up at 9:15 this morning. They employed 200 men and of these seventy-five were at work when the first explosion occurred in the grain mill. In quick succession the glazing mill, the two coining mills and the powder magazine blew up, followed by the cap mill. In the magazine were stored a few hundred yards from the mills, were stored 40,000 kegs of powder.

The concussion, when it blew up, was felt 200 miles away. Every house in the town was destroyed. Farm houses two miles away and a school house equally distant were torn to pieces and their occupants injured. Indianapolis and even Cincinnati felt the shock. A passenger train on the Big Four railroad, four miles away, had every coach window broken and several passengers were injured by flying glass.

The mill went up with three distinct explosions followed ninety minutes later by a fourth even more serious than the others when the magazine went up. Immediately following the explosions the wreckage took fire and the inhabitants of the town who rushed to the rescue of the mill employes found themselves powerless to aid those buried in the ruins. They worked frantically in constant danger from possible succeeding explosions, unmindful of their wrecked homes.

Dead and dying were picked up and collected. Eighteen bodies, horribly burned and mangled, were carried to a protected spot to await identification, while the badly injured, numbering upwards of fifty, were put in a special train and taken to Terre Haute for hospital accommodations. Haute for hospital accommodations. Terre Haute for hospital accommodations. The whole town was practically wiped out. Scarcely one of the one thousand inhabitants of the town but carried blood on hands and face from his own wounds or those of people who had required aid.

POSTPONE PETTIBONE TRIAL.

Case Put Over Until October 28 On Account of Illness.

The trial of George A. Pettibone, charged with complicity in the assassination of former Governor Steunenburg, was postponed at Boise, Idaho, until October 28.

Judge Wood said he was certain the defendant's physical condition would permit a fair trial on the twenty-third but the defense requested a few days longer delay and the twenty-eighth was agreed upon.

Pacific Coast Defenses.

The general plans of the war department for the new coast defenses have begun to take shape at San Francisco. The first point that will receive the attention of army officials is Half Moon bay. At a point which might be unfavorable at a landing approach to San Francisco by a foreign invading force the government is able to establish defenses that would prevent an entry there.

Felt Earthquake Shock.

The vibrations of an earthquake were felt in Lowell, Mass., and all suburban towns at 7:10 o'clock Tuesday. The shock lasted two or three seconds, and was followed by what appeared to be a sharp explosion. In a few instances chimneys were thrown to the floor and in many dwellings the dishes rattled.

Transport Logan Arrives.

The United States army transport Logan from the Philippines, who was fog-bound off the harbor at San Francisco, entered port safely. She brought a large number of cabin passengers, mostly army officers and 477 men of the Thirteenth infantry, who have been ordered to Leavenworth, Kas.

Failure of Ohio Bank.

The comptroller of the currency announced the failure of the First National bank at Bremen, Ohio, which was caused by loans to local woolen manufacturers, who, it is said, had failed.

A letter received in San Francisco from Admiral Dewey expresses the hope that he will be able to come to California during the visit of the American fleet to the Pacific.

WHAT IS PE-RU-NA?

Is it a Catarrh Remedy, or a Tonic, or is It Both?

Some people call Peruna a great tonic. Others refer to Peruna as a great catarrh remedy.

Which of these people are right? Is it more proper to call Peruna a catarrh remedy than to call it a tonic?

Our reply is, that Peruna is both a tonic and a catarrh remedy. Indeed, there can be no effectual catarrh remedy that is not also a tonic.

In order to thoroughly relieve any case of catarrh, a remedy must not only have a specific action on the mucous membranes affected by the catarrh, but it must have a general tonic action on the nervous system.

Catarrh, even in persons who are otherwise strong, is a weakened condition of some mucous membrane. There must be something to strengthen the circulation, to give tone to the arteries, and to raise the vital forces.

Perhaps no remedy lately in the world has attracted so much attention from medical writers as HYDRASTIS CANADENSIS. The wonderful efficacy of this herb has been recognized for many years, and is generally known in the medical profession. When joined with CUBEBS and COPAIBA a trio of medical agents is formed in Peruna which constitutes a specific remedy for catarrh that in the present state of medical science cannot be improved upon. This action, reinforced by such renowned tonics as COLLINSONIA CANADENSIS, CORYDALIS FORMOSA and CEDRON SEED, ought to make a compound which is a remedy for catarrh in all its stages and locations in the body.

From a theoretical standpoint, therefore, Peruna is beyond criticism. The use of Peruna, confirms this opinion. Testimonials from all over every quarter of the earth furnish ample evidence that this judgment is not over enthusiastic. When practical experience confirms a well-grounded theory the result is a truth that cannot be shaken.

Not to Be Wasted.

Ben Carp had two bears in his house a year ago, which was a breeding place for herds of man-eating mosquitoes. Some enterprising neighbors, who learned of the experiment, went to Ben's house and tried to persuade him to exterminate the pests.

"Exterminate 'em" said Ben. "Not much. Not yet. Why, Miss Cary Nation just paid $32 for screening the side piazzer that she's been pestering me about for years. How we going to get any good of it, if we kill off the skeeters?"—Youth's Companion.

Signs of the Times.

In the household department of a farm magazine we find the following communications:

"I am willing to exchange a well preserved copy of Browning's poems for some good mince meat.

"I have a complete edition of Byron, containing all his poems and letters, which I shall be glad to exchange for some watermelon seed."

CHILD SAVING INSTITUTE.

An Omaha Institution That Has Accomplished Great Good.

This institution has accomplished a great work the past ten years in providing temporary shelter and food for more than two thousand homeless children and afterwards placing them in permanent family homes. These homes where so many little ones have been adopted have been repeatedly visited and are known to be good homes.

Children of the children in the institute were taken from evil surroundings and others from homes of extreme poverty and still others from county poor houses. A few years ago a mother died in western Nebraska, leaving eight children, the oldest being 12 years of age. The father was an invalid receiving help from the county. The eight children instead of going to the poor house were brought to the Institute and are doing well in good homes.

Three hundred children annually is the average number sheltered and provided for by this institution. The cost per child daily is from 50 to 60. What would become of these homeless children without this place of shelter and protection? This work is entirely free from sectarianism and many of all that has been accomplished and in spite of its being a necessary work it lacks financial support. The officers of the institute have been obliged to a debt on current expenses. The work after all does not seem to be well known. Surely, in this prosperous section of our country, and in these prosperous times, there should be enough to take care of the orphan and dependent little children. This institution does not send out financial agents to collect funds, but takes about half of what such agents collect to pay their salaries. There is one field agent of the Institute who travels to visit children, inspect homes, who incidentally receives donations of funds. It is hoped that readers of this article will send contributions, making checks payable to C. W. Hull, treasurer of the Child Saving Institute, Eighteenth and Ohio, streets, Omaha, Neb. Every penny will go to the benefit of the helpless and needy children. Everything else has advanced in prices. How can the children be fed during the coming winter? How can fuel be provided to warm the building? How can nurses and helpers be paid to take care of the babies? The readers of this article, friends of the friendless, are invited to contribute, to help answer these questions. If people could only understand and realize the needs there would be generous responses.

BRYAN AND HOME FOLKS.

A Famous Painting by Madam Carlisle Cooley Now on Public Exhibition in the City of Omaha.

Some months ago in this publication was given two pictures of "Milking Time on the Ranch," and "Under the Weeping Water," and "The Pioneer Haymakers' Lunch Beyond the Missouri," made from the paintings by Catherine Carlisle Cooley of Omaha. The paintings for some time were in the show windows of prominent Omaha merchants, attracting much attention.

Another painting by the same artist is now on exhibition in the Nebraska metropolis and is receiving much favorable criticism. This later acquisition is a painting of William J. Bryan, Mayor James C. Dahlman and members of the Nebraska "Home Folks" delegation who met the Nebraska statesman on his return from Europe. Through the courtesy of Mrs. Cooley, the picture is publicly shown for the first time, and that, too, alongside of the canvas depicting of the celebrated artist, Rosa Bonheur, whose pupil she was. Mrs. Cooley is the woman who presented a $5,000 painting to Alice Roosevelt, the white house bride, and who has made portraits of Blaine, Conkling and other distinguished people. This famous painting is now on free public exhibition at Nicoll, the Tailor, Karbach Block, Omaha, Neb.

Fire at Fremont Normal.

Fremont—The main building of the Fremont Normal school was badly damaged by fire. The loss will reach $45,000, with only $20,000 insurance on both building and contents. The origin of the fire is unknown. It caught in the southeast part of the building above the laboratory and when it reached the chemicals spread rapidly to the east and north.

Cannot Bring Body Home.

Plattsmouth—Word was received from D. E. Thompson, United States minister in Mexico, that the body of Will Edgerton, who died in Mexico, had been buried, and that according to the laws of that country it could not be removed for five years. Edgerton was a Plattsmouth boy, and was employed with a boring gang in that country. He died in a hospital at Durhas, Mexico. He was a member of the Masonic lodge here, and members took considerable pains to have the body brought home.

DID NOT WANT TO BUY.

The Great Musician Had No Use for His Production.

A great tenor had been singing for some hours into a phonograph.

"The phonograph," he said, "is a wonderful thing. It almost realizes the wish of the Scottish poet, the wish that we might see ourselves as others see us. We can now, at least, hear ourselves, a thing impossible before. The phonograph teaches us many valuable lessons. When I was in the army, before I realized the capabilities of my voice, I played the flute. A phonograph agent once brought a phonograph to my quarters and tried to sell it to me on the instalment plan. I was undecided. Finally the man became impatient.

"'See,' he said, rather reluctantly, 'there is a blank cylinder. You may make a record on it, then we will run it off and you can hear yourself. It's a costly favor I am doing you, but it will show you what a fine instrument this is.'

"I was delighted.

"'I'll get my flute,' I said. 'I'll play a flute solo.'

"Well, I played my best into the machine. It seemed to me that I had never combined before such feeling with such accuracy. I was more than pleased with myself. Then the man put in the cylinder, and the music began to issue forth. I frowned.

"'Is that me?' I said.

"'Yes, sir,' said the man.

"'Really me, just as I played?'

"'Precisely, sir, precisely. And now,' said he, 'do you want to buy the phonograph?'

"'No,' said I; 'I want to sell the flute.'"

Old Coins Discovered.

Workingmen in demolishing the old smelter house of the first United States mint, on Seventh street, Philadelphia, have uncovered a number of relics of the early days of the republic. These relics consist of a number of foreign and domestic coins, dating as far back as 1793. Some of the interesting finds are a number of test coins that were experimented with by the officials in the olden times. These coins are similar to Chinese money, each containing a hole in the center that was filled with various kinds of metal to bring up the value of the coin.

OLD SOAKERS

Get Saturated with Caffeine.

When a person has used coffee for a number of years and gradually declined in health, it is time the coffee should be left off in order to see whether or not it has been the cause of the trouble.

A lady in Huntsville, Ala., says she used coffee for about 40 years, and for the past 20 years has had severe stomach trouble. "I have been treated by many physicians but all in vain. Everything failed to give relief. Was prostrated for some time, and came near dying. When I recovered sufficiently to partake of food and drink I tried coffee again and it soured on my stomach.

"I finally concluded that coffee was the cause of my trouble and stopped using it. I tried tea in its place and then milk, but neither agreed with me. Then I commenced using Postum, had it properly made and it was very pleasing to the taste.

"I have now used it four months, and my health is so greatly improved that I can eat almost anything I want and can sleep well, whereas, before, I suffered for years with insomnia. I have found the cause of my troubles and a way to get rid of them. You can depend upon it, I appreciate Postum." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

NO STAIN ON HIS RECORD.

That's Where the Driver Had the Best of the Preacher.

A New York clergyman, who often spends his vacation in fishing the streams of the Adirondacks, was on one trip adopted by a handsome setter dog, which insisted on following him from camp to camp, as he moved along the stream.

One day he met a party of men working upstream with a native guide. The guide immediately recognized the dog as his own property.

"Trying to steal my setter, are you?" he shouted at the clergyman. "I'll have you to jail for this! There's a law in the woods just as big as you have in the city."

The clergyman endeavored to explain that he was an unwilling companion of the dog, which had refused to be driven away, but to little effect until he added a two-dollar bill to his arguments.

"It's queer what strange things happen to a man up here," he said to the stage-driver who later carried him away from the woods. "That is the first time I was ever accused of stealing a dog."

"Yes, sir," replied the driver, sympathetically, and added, after a moment's pause, "For myself, sir, I have never been accused of stealing anything."—Youth's Companion.

WHEN MILESTONES CHEER.

They Always Gladden the Heart of the Pedestrian.

In a walking trip a milestone along the way is the most companionable fellow in the world; your spirits rise as you near him as though you were about to greet a human friend, and they keep almost consistently on his high level till his brother a mile distant advances to meet you.

And when you come to one of this friendly company because of an encroaching bank or screening boughs, says the Travel Magazine, his neighbor further on comes to you doubly welcome. At the latter end of this passage in the journey your spirits flag a trifle as though oppressed by a sense of desertion. You may even scowl at the overhanging bank which is more than a party to this concealment.

Those worthy persons who attend to the roads should see to it that every milestone within their province stands out frankly from its leafy background. Chestnuts of this, however, would rob the wayfarer of that leap of the heart which is his when the stone tells the story of miles done rather than one. For however much the landscape and the minute world at his feet may claim the footfarer's admiration he is entitled to drive at the sight of decent distances covered in his day's journey.

His Job.

Bishop Potter was staying with a friend in a country house. On Sunday morning as he passed through the library he found a small boy curled up in a big chair deeply interested in a book.

"Are you going to church, Tom?" he asked. "No," he replied. "Why, I am," the bishop said. "Huh!" the boy returned, "That's your job."

In Indignation.

"It is said, doctor, that you treated your landlord for liver trouble and he died of stomach trouble!"

"Infamous slander! When I treat a patient for liver trouble he dies from that! Understand?"—Translated for Transatlantic Tales from Fliegende Blaetter.

Wisdom of Solomon.

In a dog case at Felixstowe, England, one witness testified that the dog whose loss was being sued for was worth $125, while another swore it was worthless. So the judge awarded $62.50 damages as a fair average.

A Whistler Criticism.

The late James McNeil Whistler was standing bareheaded in a hat shop, the clerk having taken his hat to another part of the shop for comparison. A man rushed in with his hat in his hand and supposing Whistler to be a clerk angrily confronted him.

"See here," he said, "This hat doesn't fit."

Whistler eyed the stranger from head to foot and then drawled out:

"Well, neither does your coat. What's more, if you'll pardon my saying so, I'll be hanged if I care much for the color of your trousers."—Under the Spreading Chestnut Tree" In Everybody's.

Hospital Story-Telling.

It is curious that philanthropists in search of a novel means of doing good do not engage reciters and storytellers to visit hospitals and amuse the patients. A rich man in New York engaged Marshall P. Wilder, the diminutive entertainer, who has given pleasure in nearly every city, to visit regularly certain hospitals in New York. Mr. Wilder was welcomed enthusiastically by the convalescent patients, and his merry stories did them good.

Saw It Come Out of a Cow.

A little city boy and his sister Dorothy were taken to the country for the first time.

The two children were happy as the day was long. In the late afternoon they watched the cow come home, heard with delight the tinkling cowbells, and the little boy even went to the barns to see the milking done.

At supper, when Dorothy was lifting her glass to her rosy lips, the boy cried out:

"Oh, Dotty, don't! You mustn't drink that milk. It's not fit to drink. It came out of a cow; I saw it."

Sailing Days Not Over.

Just at a time when every one who is at all interested in the seas and ships is talking over the Lusitania, her size and her record, it seems a curious reminder of old times to catch sight of a new gold sign in the windows of a skyscraper down at Bowling Green which announces a "sailing service to Australia and New Zealand."

A MATTER OF TRAINING.

Briton and Scot Have Bootless Arguments About Boyhood Dishes.

Two men had just come from the dining room of one of the downtown hotels, says the Kansas City Star. Sitting down and lighting a pair of black cigars, each was prepared to convince himself at least that the other didn't know much about good things to eat.

"Well," said the one with the florid countenance, blowing a cloud of smoke toward his right eye, "I've eaten in pretty nearly every good hotel in this country, but I've never found anything to compare with the grub my mother used to set us back home."

It was evident from the man's accent that "back home" was some where in England.

"Yes," said the other man, who had mutton chop whiskers and toasted grey hair, "and the chances are my grub your mother pleased you with wouldn't go at all with me."

"I guess you never bit down to a dinner on Macclesfield bacon. Cheshire cheese and a treacle pudding to put on top. You know the forest fed bacon of Macclesfield is famous the world over."

"But what of that? I wouldn't give a dish of hagis like my aunt in Glasgow used to make for all the bacon in Chester—and the cheese and Cheshire cats' throws in."

"But, man, you have never tasted the real thing, and—"

"And so the dishes my aunt could bake would melt—"

"Oh, forget it," said the Englishman, throwing away his half-smoked cigar viciously, mixing the mark two feet. "Come on, Scotty, let's see if we can agree on what's good to drink."

LAND LAND LAND

Land that grows 15 to 25 tons of sugar beets to the acre, 200 to 400 bushels of potatoes, 40 to 100 bushels of oats, 25 to 60 bushels of corn to the acre, and all kinds of fruit berries and melons in abundance. Rich, rip gin soil, that grows immense crops like magic, when the water that the U. S. government provides at cost is flowed upon it. There is no such thing as crop failure under irrigation. The farmer plants his crop and absolutely controls the amount of water his crops need at exactly the proper time, and he can grow more profitable crops than he can grow in any natural rainfall country, such as sugar beets and alfalfa. Government statistics show that irrigated land will produce from one third to one-half more crops than any natural rainfall country. Officials of the U. S. Reclamation Service say that the North Platte project, which will irrigate the land we are selling, is best adapted to irrigation of any land in the country, and the supply of water is unlimited.

Reuters, Why pay from $3 to $10 an acre rent for land when you can get 160 acres of fine irrigated land for about the same money you are paying for one year's rent of an eastern farm?

Come to the New Land and own a fine farm that will grow larger crops than the high-priced land, you are seeing. Uncle Sam will supply you with water to irrigate 160 acres of the most productive land in the country at cost. I can secure you a fine 160 acre irrigable farm for from $1 to $5 per acre.

Don't Wait! It won't last long. Thousands of people are flocking to this country, and the sooner you come the better bargain I can get you. Don't pass your life renting somebody else's farm at a high price. Come to the rich and fertile North Platte valley and make a home and fortune for yourself and family. Don't neglect this splendid opportunity. There's big money in it. This land that you can now secure for practically nothing, will be worth from $100 to $200 per acre as soon as irrigated and improved. It is better land than Colorado land, that is now selling for as much. You can hire all the work done on sugar beets for $45 an acre, and at the average yield of 20 tons an acre, you can clear $55 an acre and do no work on it yourself.

Farm Owners, Why farm $400 eastern land when you can buy irrigated land here from one-tenth to one-fourth the money, and get land that will produce larger crops and increase rapidly in value? Sell out and come to the rich North Platte valley. We are not pioneering. There are no hardships in this country—towns, railroads, schools and churches are close at hand. The Platte Valley is centrally located and convenient to all markets. Railroad communications are unexcelled to all good shipping points. All kinds of produce, cattle, hogs and sheep command a high price. The Burlington & R. now runs through the valley and the Union Pacific is rapidly pushing work on a through line to the coast, which line also runs through the valley. Thousands and thousands of tons of hay are cut in the river bottoms every year.

Investors: We can sell you deeded land that is increasing rapidly in value and will continue to increase in value for years to come. Irrigated land is not subject to the depression in land values that always go with a period of crop failures in any natural rainfall country. No matter what the weather you can grow a crop every year under irrigation. I control the sale of thousands of acres of irrigated and dry lands, hay land and ranches. I can secure you any kind of land at a price that will make money quickly for you.

Write today for further information. Local real estate dealers correspond; we can make some money for you.

Death Recalls Ocean Duel.

The recent death in France of Vice Admiral Fraquet recalls the fact that he was the hero of the only naval engagement in the Franco-Prussian war. The scene was Havana, where Fraquet commanded the Bouvet, which kept watch on the Prussian ship Meteor. The Meteor, a powerful, armored ship, though the Bouvet had only light artillery, Fraquet challenged the German captain to a naval duel, and the offer was accepted. The boats sailed from the harbor, followed by Spanish ships as umpires. The Bouvet at once rammed the Meteor. Both ships were badly damaged.

"Our Italian cigars are not so good," he said. "They are made by the government. They are as long and thin as a lead pencil, and they have a straw in the middle; otherwise they would not draw. You light these Italian cigars of ours over a lamp, a specially-made cigar lamp, that burns with a strong flame. The lighting requires from three to five minutes. These cigars, for all the trouble they take, are poor. I gave one to an American in Rome one morning. He put it in his pocket and said he would smoke it later.

"I met him again that night at the Cafe Nazionale, in the Corso.

"Well," I said, 'how did you like my cigar?'

"'Oh, it was excellent,' said he. 'I enjoyed it immensely. I had it boiled for my dinner with some corned beef.'

Will Ellis was out hunting Tuesday along the Nemaha; he'd been thinking constantly about the international balloon race—and really had forgotten all about ducks, when suddenly a shadow, making a noise like a flock of the birds sailed over him; he dropped his gun, thinking he was surely in the presence of a mighty thoaster of the air, grabbed a tree for support and stood trembling. Finally, with a great effort he awoke to the fact that he'd missed the best shot at duck that ever came his way.

W C Fellers now has as complete and attractive store building as any store in Nebraska. He has cemented the basement, and fitted it up for the grocery department with an elevator for passenger and freight running between the floors. Workmen have finished the hall in the second story, the papering and painting being of a high grade of workmanship, the effect being very pretty. Mr Fellers has spared no expense in making the store room inviting and pleasing to his patrons, and convenient for his clerks to meet the customers' wants.

Average Corn Yield.

The average yield of corn in the United States is 25 bushels and the average value per acre is eight dollars, from which the cost of producing the crop must be deducted before it can yield a profit. There is not a cent of profit in the average crops of any kind. Average crops do not pay, and unless farmers get more than average crops they want the best. The fault of an average crop often lies in the cultivation. Sometimes it is in the land, and again it is in a season, but it more often lies in the farmer himself.

Bob left his wife at his mother's house while he went to Sand Landing to the funeral. After the old judge and his victims had been laid away and the relatives had gathered in the library of the great white Sands mansion, he explained their kinswoman's condition and told them that she was "off her nut." He insisted upon paying all Judge Sands' debts, over $500,000 of which was owed to members of the Sands family for whom he had been trustee. Before he went back to his mother's, Bob had turned a great calamity into an occasion for something near rejoicing. Judge Sands and his family were very dear to the people of the section, but his misfortune had threatened such widespread ruin that the unlooked-for recovery of a million and a half was a godsend that made for happiness.

Two days after the funeral Bob's dearest hope fled. He had ordered all things at the Sands plantation put in their every-day condition. Beulah Sands, uncles, aunts and cousins had arranged to welcome her and to try by every means in their power to coax back her lost mind. They assured Bob that barring the absence of Beulah's father, mother, and sister, there would not be a memory-recaller missing. Bob and his wife landed from the river packet at the foot of the driveway, which led straight from the landing to the vine-covered, white-pillared portico. Bob's agony must have been awful when his wife clapped her hands in childish joy as she exclaimed, "Oh, Bob, what a pretty place!" She gave no sign that she had ever seen the great entrance, through which she had come and gone from her babyhood. Bob took her to the nursery, to the children's room, to her own, to the nursery where were the dolls and toys of her childhood, but there came no sign of recognition, nothing but childish pleasure. She looked at her aunts and uncles and the cousins with whom she had spent her life, bewildered at finding so many strangers in the otherwise quiet place. As a last hope they led in her old black foster-mother, who had nursed her in babyhood, who was the companion of her childhood and the pet of her womanhood. There was not a dry eye in the library when she met the old mammy's outburst of joy with the puzzled gaze of the child who does not understand. The grief of the old negress was pitiful as she realized that she was a stranger to her "honey bird." The child seemed perplexed at her grief. It was plain to all that the Sands home meant nothing to the last of the judge's family.

Bob brought Beulah back to New York and besought the aid of the medical experts of America and of the Old World to regain that which had been recalled by its Maker. The doctors were fascinated with this new phase of mind blight, for in some particulars Beulah's case was unlike any known instances, but none gave hope. All agreed that some wire connecting heart and brain had burned out when the current system threw on a voltage beyond the wire's capacity to transmit. All agreed that the woman-child wife would never grow older unless through some mental eruption beyond human power to produce. Some of the medical men pointed to one possibility, but that one was too terrible for Bob to entertain.

The first anniversary of their marriage found Bob and his wife settled in their new fifth avenue mansion, which he bought and torn down two old houses between Forty-second and Forty-third streets and had erected a palace, the inside of which was unique among all New York's unusual structures. The first and second floors were all that refined taste and unlimited expenditure of money could produce. Nothing on those splendid floors told of the strange things above. A sedate luxury pervaded the drawing-rooms, library, and dining-room. Bob said to me, in taking me through them, "Some day, Jim, Beulah may recover, may come back to me, and I want to have everything as she would like it, everything as she would have had it if the curse had never come." The third floor was Beulah's. about his neck, covered his face with kisses.

"Good Bob has come back to play with Beulah," she said, "she knew he would. They told Beulah Bob had gone away to the woods to gather pretty flowers. Beulah knew it Bob had gone to the woods he would have taken Beulah with him. Now Bob must play school with Beulah." She went to her desk and opened her child's school-book. With mock severity she said, "Bob, c-a-t. What does it spell?" For half an hour Bob sat and played scholar and teacher by turns with all the patience of a fond father. With difficulty I kept back the tears the sad sight brought to my eyes.

For the first year of Bob's marriage we saw but little of him at the office. The Exchange saw less. He had wandered in, upon the floor two or three times, but did no business and seemed to take but little interest.

"The Street" knew Bob had married the daughter of Judge Lee Sands, but it bought and torn down two old houses between Forty-second and Forty-third streets and had erected a palace, the inside of which was unique among all New York's unusual structures. FIVE MONTHS IN HOSPITAL.

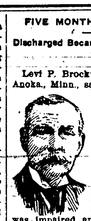
Discharged Because Doctors Could Not Cure.



Levi P. Brockway, S. Second Ave, Anoka, Minn., says: "After lying for five months in a hospital was discharged as incurable and given only six months to live. My heart was affected, I had smothering spells, and sometimes fell unconscious. I got so I couldn't use my arms, my eyesight was impaired and the kidney secretions were badly disordered. I was completely worn out and discouraged when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, but they went right to the cause of the trouble and did their work well. I have been feeling well ever since."

Something New in Tablecloths.

She had come into the store to buy tablecloths and she stated in the beginning that she wanted something "new."

The salesman was patient and showed her everything in stock, but nothing suited.

"Oh, dear!" she exclaimed, fussily, "haven't you anything different?"

The clerk brought out one of the discarded tablecloths that he had put back on the shelf, and said with an air of interest:

"Here is one of the very newest designs, madam. You see, the center is in the middle and the border runs right around the edge."

"Why, yes! Let me have that one," she said eagerly.

The Sinful Human Heart.

A clergyman was addressing a youthful class in Sunday school. To illustrate the idea of regulating the sinful human heart he took out his watch and held it up that all might see it.

"See this watch," he said. "Just imagine that it does not keep good time—that it goes all ways but the right way. What ought I to do with it?"

Instantly a little boy held up his hand.

"I know!" he shouted. "Sell it to a friend."

Fair Warning.

"Well, I see that slim girls will be the style this winter," remarked the harmless idiot.

"Yes," responded his sister, "and if any of my girl friends suddenly get slender over night I don't want you to ask any fool questions. Hear me?"—Pittsburg Post.

By following the directions, which are plainly printed on each package of Defiance Starch, Men's Collars and Cuffs can be made just as stiff as desired, with either gloss or domestic finish. Try it, 16 oz. for 10c, sold by all good grocers.

IN LIFE'S BRIEF SPAN.

Experiences, Joys and Sorrows of the Human Existence.

The loves and friendships of individuals partake of the frail character of human life, and are brief and uncertain. The experience of a human life may be shortly summed up: A little loving and a good deal of sorrowing; some bright hopes and many bitter disappointments; some gorgeous Thursdays when the skies are bright and the heavens blue, when Providence, bending over us in blessings, sheds the heart almost to madness; many dismal Fridays, when the smoke of torment beclouds the mind and undying sorrows gnaw upon the heart; some high ambitions and many Waterloo defeats, until the heart becomes like a charnel house filled with dead affections, embalmed in holy but sorrowful memories; and then the chord is loosed, the golden bowl is broken, the individual life—a cloud, a vapor, passes away.—Matthew Hale Carpenter.

SKIN SORE EIGHT YEARS.

Spent $300 on Doctors and Remedies but Got No Relief—Cuticura Cures in a Week.

"Upon the limbs and between the toes my skin was rough and sore, and also sore under the arms, and I had to stay at home several times because of this affection. Up to a week or so ago I had tried many other remedies and several doctors, and spent about three hundred dollars, without any success, but this is to-day the seventh day that I have been using the Cuticura Remedies (costing a dollar and a half), which have cured me completely, so that I can again attend to my business. I went to work again to-night. I had been suffering for eight years and have now been cured by the Cuticura Remedies within a week. Fritz Hirschlaff, 24 Columbus Ave., New York, N. Y., March 29 and April 6, 1906."

Only Royal Doctor.

The only royal doctor in Europe is Duke Carl Theodore of Bavaria. Few German princes have had a more romantic career than Duke Carl Theodore. He recently completed, with his wife as his assistant, his five-thousandth operation for cataract.

Poor people flock to his hospital, where they are treated free, the duke asking payment only from those who have mostly profited it. He it was who successfully treated the kaiser, when, eight years ago, he was temporarily blinded by a swinging rope when cruising on the Hohenzollern in the North sea.

With a smooth iron and Defiance Starch, you can launder your shirt-waist just as well at home as the steam laundry can; it will have the proper stiffness and finish, there will be less wear and tear of the goods, and it will be a positive pleasure to use a Starch that does not stick to the iron.

Says It's Not So.

Report to the effect that electric lights are detrimental to the eyesight are pronounced unfounded by an electrical expert in the London Times. He says that the trouble arises from too direct exposure of the eye to the light, and that effect would be the same or worse with any other light.

Give Defiance Starch a fair trial—try it for both hot and cold starching, and if you don't think you do better work, in less time and at smaller cost, return it and your grocer will give you back your money.

No man is called to a life of self-denial for its own sake. It is in order to obtain a compensation which is real and always proportionate.—Drummond.

PROMISE and PERFORMANCE

To The Voters of Nebraska:

The Republican legislature of 1907 redeemed every pledge made by the Republican state convention of 1906 and subscribed to by the members of the legislature before election. Following is a fac-simile of a copy of the printed pledges which was clipped from a Nebraska newspaper and pasted on the wall in the office of Governor Sheldon at the beginning of the legislature. As each redeemed pledge, in the form of a bill, was passed by the legislature and delivered to the Governor, he drew a line through the pledge. The figures at the end of the line show the exact time the Chief Executive affixed his signature to the bill and the promise of the Republican party became a performance.

The action of the Republican legislature marks an epoch in the history of Nebraska. It was the first time any political party in the State ever redeemed every pledge made to the people. It is the best guaranty of what the Republican party will do in the future.

WM. HAYWARD, Chairman, Republican State Committee.

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1907.

The Promise—Now for Performance

TO THE REPUBLICANS OF NEBRASKA:

The platform adopted by the Republican State Convention held at Lincoln, August 22, makes the following distinct promises of state legislation in the interest of the people:

1. Laws to compel railroads to pay their taxes at the same time and in the same manner as a private individual. S:P.M. March 30-07
2. A direct primary law for the nomination of all state, county and district officers, including congressmen and United States Senators. S:P.M. March 30-07

4. Laws fully empowering the new State Railway Commission to prohibit rebates, discriminations and special rates to corporations, persons or localities, and to see to it that the same are corrected and equitable freight and passenger rates obtained for the people. 3:P.M. March 30-07
5. To prevent of failure of the congressional amendment, or its being declared invalid, laws giving the people of this state the same advantages congress has already given the nation under the railroad rate bill in matters of interstate commerce. 3:P.M. March 30-07
6. A law giving the same laws as adopted by congress touching the liability of employers to their employes, permitting recovery for injuries notwithstanding the negligence of a fellow servant. 9:P.M. March 29-07
7. Legislative appropriations to meet current expenses of state government only under the most rigid economy. 11:30 P.M. April 5-07
8. A law providing that railroad property in cities and villages shall be assessed and taxed the same as other property for city and village purposes. 11:15 A.M. March 25-07
9. A law insuring uniform and uniform tests of dairy products. 8:P.M. April 3-07

As the republican nominees for our respective legislative districts, we hereby pledge ourselves, if elected, to support and vote for measures that will carry out each of these promises.

M. B. REESE

Candidate for Supreme Judge

Hon. M. B. Reese was born in Macoupin county, Illinois, in 1839, a farmer boy, and while he was living on the farm completed the course prescribed by the country schools, and then worked his way through a preparatory near his home. He was admitted to practice and removed to Osceola, Ia. He lived in Iowa from 1865 to 1871, when he removed to Plattsmouth.

Practically the entire life of Judge Reese in Nebraska has been spent under the limelight. He was a member of the constitutional convention in 1875; district attorney of the Fourth judicial district for three terms; supreme judge, and dean of the law department of the state university.

The republican party in Nebraska presents a remarkable record of achievement under the able leadership of Senators Burkett and Brown, our governor and state officers, the five republican congressmen, the members of the legislature and loyal republicans throughout the state.

An examination of the platform in brief in this column is proof positive of the absolute good faith kept with the people.

The voters of Nebraska who believe in progress should go to the polls and triumphantly elect Judge Reese and the state ticket lest a backward step be taken.

In Reese, Clarke, Anderson and Coupland the people will find the names of loyal, progressive men as those who represent them in national and state councils at the present time.

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM OF 1907.

The republican state platform points with pride to the achievements of the republican party under the splendid leadership of Theodore Roosevelt, and insists that his successor shall be a man who will continue the policies, and suggests Secretary Taft as such a man.

Commends the Nebraska delegation to congress.

Calls attention to the magnificent record of the legislature which carried out the pledges of the republican party, as follows:

"1. A state-wide direct primary.

"2. Abolition of the free pass evil.

"3. Comprehensive powers for the state railway commission.

"4. For equitable rates for transportation of passengers and freight.

"5. Equal taxation of railroad property for county purposes.

"7. A pure food and dairy law.

"8. Rigid economy in appropriations.

Endorses the direct primary, and pledges such amendments as shall improve its workings.

Commends the good work of the state railway commission, in its efforts to secure better freight rates for the people of the state. Calls for the rigid enforcement of the anti-pass law.

Declares that in suits at law corporations should be deemed citizens of every state where they have filed articles of incorporation or exercised the rights of citizenship.

Favors an enactment of the federal law forbidding the federal courts from issuing writs of injunction against state officers charged with the enforcement of state statutes.

Regards with high favor the nomination on the state ticket and invites voters who believe in official probity and efficiency to join in electing them.

HENRY T. CLARKE, JR.

Candidate for Railway Commissioner

Henry T. Clarke, Jr., is at present the Nebraska Railway Commissioners, serving as the appointee of Governor Sheldon, and is a candidate on the nominee of the republican primary for the same position.

Mr. Clarke is one of the few native sons of Nebraska, who has not left the state's confines. He was born at Bellevue, Nebraska, Aug. 1, 1875, and comes of an honorable Nebraska family. His father, H. T. Clarke, came to Nebraska in 1855, and served as a member of the territorial council of 13 when a very young man.

Commissioner Clarke offers to the people of Nebraska the very best qualifications and training for the position of railway commissioner. Graduating from the Omaha High School as valedictorian of the class of 1892, he attended Williams college two years, and the University of Chicago two years, graduating from the latter institution in 1896. In 1897 Mr. Clarke pursued post-graduate work in political science, specializing in the subject of railway transportation and political economy. A year later he entered the Michigan Law School, graduating in the class of 1899.

In January, 1900, Mr. Clarke began the practice of law at Omaha. He was married in 1901, and has two children. In 1904 he was elected to the legislature by a largest majority ever given a legislative candidate in Douglas county, his majority running close to the 5,000 mark.

While ever an industrious, progressive and hard-working member, the author of much good law, he came into prominent into the limelight during the last session when he courageously stood in the front rank, upholding the hands of Governor Sheldon, and casting his vote, and his influence for the reform measures of the republican party.

CHARLES B. ANDERSON

Candidate for University Regent

Mr. Anderson was born in Albion, N. Y., June 30, 1865. He graduated from the high school in 1883 and engaged in the hardware business. In 1887 he located in DeWitt, Saline county, Nebraska, and for ten years conducted a banking business in that village. In 1897 he removed to Crete, and in company with T. H. Miller, organized the State Bank of which he is vice-president. In 1898 he organized the Crete Conservative Investment Company, of which he is president. In 1896 he was a delegate to the republican convention and cheerfully cast his vote for William McKinley. In 1902 Mr. Anderson was elected state senator from Saline county, receiving almost 500 majority. He was a member of the Revenue Committee, was chairman of the Finance, Ways and Means Committee and was associated on that and other standing committees with Gov. Sheldon, then a senator from Cass.

Mr. Anderson was among the very first to mention the name of Gov. Sheldon, for Governor. In the last republican state convention he was the chairman of the committee on resolutions and instrumental in drafting the platform which was ratified by the voters last November, and put into effect by the legislature.

He is president of the Crete school board and of the trustees of Doane College. He was also president of the State Layman Association of the Congregational churches of Nebraska, and is a member of the Executive Council of the State Bankers' Association. Mr. Anderson is the father of five robust children, believes in the "brotherhood of man," and is an active member of the A. F. & A. M., the K. P., A. O. U. W., and Modern Woodman fraternal orders.

GEORGE COUPLAND

Coming of a long line of old English yeoman stock Mr. Coupland was born upon a farm in Lincolnshire, England, May 2, 1857. He received a liberal education. Twenty-seven years ago he came to Nebraska and homesteaded the quarter section in Antelope county upon which he now lives.

Mr. Coupland has always had been an ardent advocate of higher education, more especially in agriculture. He has kept himself in close touch with that branch of work in the Nebraska State University almost since its inception. And the agricultural college has been patronized by his sons.

For the position of regent Mr. Coupland is supported by many of the strongest institutions and men in the state.

The Nebraska Farmer urges the candidacy of Mr. Coupland because we believe that he is a man for the farmers. And we believe further that he is a man of enough intellectual strength and ability, possessing broad elements of integrity and honor to a degree that makes him a man of rare fitting for such a responsible position. And all this without one word regarding his political views or party affiliations.—The Nebraska Farmer (a non-partisan paper) Aug. 7, 1907.

From the foregoing sketch it can be seen that Mr. Coupland is indeed honored. He is a practical farmer whose earnest advocacy of the modern idea of applying advanced education and scientific methods to agriculture should commend for him the solid farmer vote. He has ever been a loyal and consistent republican, and is in hearty accord with the progressive ideas in our state today. The election Mr. Coupland and Mr. Anderson will be gratifying to all friends of our great University.

JUDGE REESE

"Judge Reese has a spotless record, both public and private. He is a student, a scholar and a tireless worker. He has always stood for the best interests of the people regardless of the consequences of himself. He has been opposed to machine rule in politics and has fought for years that the government and the people might be brought closer and closer together. He will make a splendid record on the bench."

Governor Geo. L. Sheldon

HENRY T. CLARKE, JR.

Henry T. Clarke, Jr., candidate for railway commissioner, comes before the people as the friend, and appointee of Governor Sheldon, and as a leader of the 1907 legislature whose vote and influence were enthusiastically for the reform measures of the republican party.

C. B. ANDERSON

"The State University requires nearly one-sixth of the entire revenue raised for public purposes, and Mr. Anderson, as one member of the board, could safely be entrusted to expend this large amount in an honest and economical manner, safeguarding both the interests of the people and the welfare of the State University."—Nebraska Signal, Geneva.

GEO. L. COUPLAND

"All the different departments of the University are of vast importance, and if elected it will be my desire to do all possible for their development, but I want to tell you and I say emphatically that the Agricultural Department will be my especial thought."—Hon. Geo. L. Coupland, before State Convention accepting nomination for Regent of State University.

Men with Missing Fingers Barred.

He was a bright young fellow, and had given such a good account of himself while on trial as a conductor that the superintendent would have liked to keep him.

"But I can't do it, Johnson," he said with real regret.

"Why not?" asked Johnson.

The superintendent hesitated, but decided it was better to out with the whole truth. "It is because two of your right-hand fingers are gone," he said.

"But what difference does that make?" argued Johnson. "I can keep tab on the passengers and handle the change all right."

"I know you can," said the superintendent, "but there have been many complaints from passengers on account of your missing hand. Many people are positive in regard to an infirmity of that kind, and, although they do not wish to be unkind, they object to being thrown into contact with it. I have been obliged to turn down other estimable young men who were thus handicapped. Occasionally a man minus a digit or two does find employment as a conductor on certain street car lines, but there always comes a storm of protest against him that ultimately necessitates his retirement."

...ES IN CLOVER

...TTERING YEAR A PROSPEROUS ONE FOR THEM.

Earnings Promise to be More Than $1,000,000,000 Over 1905—Consumption Here Than Keeps Pace With Production.

Upward of $1,000,000,000 more than last year will be the American farmers' earnings in 1907. Farm products this year will be about 10 per cent less in quantity than in 1906, which was the bumper season, but the crops of 1907 will fully equal the average yield for five years prior to last season.

The preliminary review of the crops of the year published by the American Agriculturist also emphasizes that, because of the decreased quantity and increased price, the leading staples this season will net over $500,000,000 more to the farmers than last season, while total gains may be almost twice as great.

Such enormous industrial prosperity as the last three years has been based upon agricultural revival which started in 1893-97, the American Agriculturist predicts an even better showing these next three years than in the recent past because of these marvelous gains in agriculture. It says:

"The farmer was never in so healthy a position as he is today—financially, socially, politically, mentally, spiritually. The increase in the value of his real estate has been prodigious. He owns less mortgage than ever before. He has greater assets than ever. Again, the farmer's wants are greater. He is in the market for more and better breeding stock, farming implements, household goods and other merchandise. He recognizes the extra profit that accrues from the use of better equipment and better methods in his business and in his home."

The wheat crop this year will approximate $625,000,000 bushels, 150,000,000 less than last year. Corn promises to be within 5 per cent of as much as last year, and with but two or three exceptions the biggest yield in the history.

The yield of oats will be about 12 per cent less than last year, but there will be nearly the usual quantity of rye, barley, buckwheat, flaxseed and potatoes. The hay crop will exceed all previous great deal. The American Agriculturist says the cotton crop will be under 12,000,000 bales. Apples will be much more plentiful than last year. The increase in the value of these crops per unit of measurement makes the total value of each crop this year considerably larger than last season.

Consumption of farm products more than keeps pace with production. The supply of grain and cotton is less per capita for the two years than for the corresponding period ten years back. Export demand proves so absorbing at fair prices every pound of surplus meat, grain, cotton, etc., that the American people can spare. The grain importing nations of Europe have only moderate crops, and must import more food products than usual. It is important to note that the farmers are selling good prices direct from the harvest fields this year, whereas ordinarily prices are low in autumn, and advance after the apple crops are largely out of the farmers' hands.

Improved Wireless Telegraphy.

A German engineer named Heinke has invented a system of wireless telegraphy for short-distance service which can be transported from point to point with remarkable ease and rapidity. It is expected that the system will come into general use in connection with military reconnoitering operations, naval landing parties and other similar purposes. The transmitting and receiving apparatus are both fitted in one small case, with a weight of approximately 40 pounds, which can thus be carried on a man's back. Extra weight in the form of wires and other accessories is approximately a hundred pounds, so that the entire station weighs approximate ly 140 pounds. A station can be moved from place to place by three men, and five men are able to erect it ready for use in short minutes. The apparatus is sensitive enough to insure of communication about 25 miles.

Beauty of Inequality.

The beauty as well as the happiness of the universe requires inequality. Equal lines, smooth surfaces, and eternal plains have no beauty. We must have hill and dale, mountain and valley, sea and land, suns of all magnitudes, worlds of all sizes, minds of all dimensions, and persons and faces of diverse casts and colors, to constitute a beautiful and happy world. We must have sexes, conditions and circumstances—empires, nations and families—diversities in personal mind, manners in order to the communication and reception of happiness. Hence, our numerous and various wants are not only incentives to action, but sources of pleasure, both simple and complex—physical, intellectual and moral.

Child Misunderstood.

When Lord Elphiston was in America a couple of years ago he was entertained at dinner by a family the head of which was to accompany his lordship on his hunting trip through the wilds of the northwest. A child of about five years, named Ethel, during the dinner was big-eyed and big-eared with wonderment in fact, completely overawed by the presence of the distinguished foreigner. Ethel heard her mother and father now and then say, "My lord this, and my lord that," or "Will you have some of this, my lord, or some of that?" the dinner being a purely informal one. Finally, when the mother was interested in the conversation of another guest, Ethel noticed that milord was gazing interestedly at a dish of relish quite out of his reach. The child thought she saw a chance to please Lord Elphiston, and in a firm, clear voice, exclaimed: "Mama, God wants some pickles."—San Francisco Argonaut.

New York's Highest Building.

"How high is it?" This question at once directs thought to the Singer building, in lower Broadway. The question is asked by thousands of persons crossing from the Jersey shore. It was asked the other day of a tall, scholarly-looking man standing on the upper dick of one of the Pennsylvania ferryboats. "I do not know its exact height," said the man addressed, "but this I give as an opinion: that during a heavy thunder shower the height of that building would make it entirely possible for the sun to shine on the roof while the lower stories are being deluged by rain. The heavily laden rain clouds are only about 600 feet above the earth, while the lantern of the new Singer building will be almost 600 feet high. The building will tower high above the fog banks. I venture to say, they standing New Yorkers, one of the features of Switzerland right at their own doors."—N. Y. Tribune.

How Bears Play.

In a recently published work a naturalist gives some interesting facts concerning the playtime of animals. The bear is supposed by many to be a rather solemn animal, but he is given to pranks at times, and even indulges in antics that closely resemble games played by children. The naturalist observed three cubs accurately playing a game very much like tag. A cub would chase the others until he cuffed one with his paw; then the one hit took up the chase. It may be that the writer's imagination put more system into the play than actually was there. However, bears in zoological gardens have been known to turn somersaults, and they take to dancing so readily that it is easy to train them to take certain steps.

MOST TERRIBLE OF DEATHS.

Spider's Bite Probably the Worst Known to Scientists.

What is the most terrible death in the world? The following are a few of the most terrible known to mortal man, but as to which of those given is the worst it would probably be hard to say:

One of the most agonising deaths known is caused by a small black spider half the size of a pea. It lives in Peru and South Australia, but a few specimens have reached Europe and America in ship loads of lumber. Not long ago a dock laborer while unloading a vessel in the Victoria docks felt one upon his hand. This death-dealer dug its fangs deep into the man's flesh, and as soon as the poison began to work he fainted with pain. He was dead in three days. This spider's venom scorches up the blood vessels and spreads through all the tissues, causing the most fearful agony a human being can have to bear. The worst of it is that the victim lives at least two days. The spider is generally known as the "speedy." When a man who knows what the bite means becomes the victim he generally blows out his brains.

Another terrible death is caused by eating a grain called "bhat." This sometimes gets mixed with rice, which it resembles. The plant grows in the far east, and a few grains of it will drive a person into a state of violent mania. The victim becomes drowsy at first and afterwards hilarious; then he goes raving mad, tears himself to pieces with his fingers, and bites mouthfuls out of his flesh. This grain is found only in the remotest parts of the east, but both white men and natives are killed by it occasionally, for the plant grows in with the rice crops, and there is no way of telling them apart, except when the grain is dried it comes out in a sort of brick-red color.

There is a South American plant, or vine, called by "Hooker," which fastens about by living thing that comes within reach, twining its long tentacles about a man as a devilfish might. These tentacles are said to burn into the flesh like white-hot wires, and the victim is dragged into the heart of the foliage, and his life slowly drained as the spider sucks the blood of the fly. Those who have strong instincts of cruelty, sometimes force a dog or other animal into the grip of the "hooker" to watch the effects, which are too horrible to describe in detail.

Gold Coin Tonics

Your stock needs tonics. They aid digestion, also cure and prevent diseases. They will make you extra profits.

Why is it that Gold Coin Stock Tonics are considered so much better than stock foods? Why is it that all the leading stock owners use them and will not use stock foods? Because they are feeding these Tonics the way it is that College Professors, Farm Experimenters and Gold Medal Stock Breeders feed their Prize Winners—Scientifically. Feeding Stock only digests a very small part of what they eat. Gold Coin Tonics increase digestion, tone up the system, strengthen and build up the constitution, thereby making your farm animals worth more money.

The Truth About Digestion

Did it ever occur to you that the digestive apparatus of the four different classes of farm animals are entirely different and therefore naturally require different treatment and different feeding. For example, clean dirt is the best thing for poultry but would be very bad for cows. Science has proven that different medicines and different foods are differently assimilated by different animals. Therefore each Gold Coin medicinal Stock Tonic must be prepared according to the class of animals for which they are intended. That is just why Gold Coin Tonics are superior to all other preparations. "Gold Coin Horse Tonic" for horses, "Gold Coin Cattle Tonic" for cattle, "Gold Coin Hog Tonic" for hogs and "Gold Coin Poultry Tonic" for poultry.

YOUNG MAN LOSES LIFE IN PECULIAR WAY AT ELWOOD.

SMOTHERED IN A CAVE

While at Work Inside of a Cave He Pulls Out Props Supporting the Roof, Which Falls In and Buries Him.

James Brown, a young man about twenty-five years old, lost his life at Elwood by having a cave fall in on him. He was at work for R. D. Phillips, two miles east of town, on leasing a cave. After finishing he went in to take out the props, when the whole top fell in on him, crushing him to death almost instantly. Mr. Phillips was also in the cave and barely escaped with his life.

NO CHANGE IN GRAIN RATES.

Chances Are That the Roads Will Move Grain at Old Rate.

While Attorney General Thompson did not promise the federal court that no action would be taken by the railway commission in the grain rate matter, he did not promise that no action would be taken until a complaint is filed and notice given the railroads as required by the statutes. There appears to be no indication of any further action because no complaint has been filed by any person or corporation affected by the present rates. An independent grain dealer wrote the commission that he would file a complaint as he believed he was being injured by the present rates, although such rates are 15 per cent lower than they were prior to January 1, due to the provisions of the Aldrich commodity rate bill. The railroads have appealed from the decision of Judge T. C. Munger of the federal court of Nebraska to enjoin the commission from acting on grain rates but as a written complaint is necessary under the Aldrich bill the commission is unable to consider grain rates until such complaint is filed.

When the grain rate situation commenced it was charged that the roads would make all manner of resistance in courts for the purpose of delaying final determination until the new crop is moved. The appeal has been advanced by the circuit of appeals to be heard the first week in January.

While the suit has been advanced, it is evident that the rates proposed by the railway commission cannot be heard on a complaint and decided in time to give the farmers of Nebraska any further reduction on the moving of this year's crop of grain.

Students' Vacation Prolonged.

It now looks as if the graduating classes of the central city schools for the years 1909 and 1910 will be rather small as a number of the students who were expelled recently have signified their intentions of either quitting for good or pursuing their studies elsewhere. Twenty-five high school students, including the whole eleventh grade and a part of the tenth grade, took a half day off part of them participating in a picnic at Parker's island and the others taking a stroll. When they appeared the following morning ready to pursue their work some more, they were called to account by Professor Smith. The entire number were given a vacation to which the professor forgot to set a limit. Now before they can be readmitted they must bring a written request from their parents requesting the professor to do so, and about this point is centered the hard feeling. In some cases the students have refused to be humiliated in such a manner and in others the parents do not seem inclined to act their part. At all odds it will be some time before they are all reinstated and things are running smoothly again.

School Bonds Enjoined.

Auditor Searle has been enjoined by the district of Garfield county from registering school bonds to the amount of $500 for school district No. 37 of that county. The history of the bonds was received some days ago, and was according to statute. The auditor, however, received information that the school house where the election was held was open only five minutes. This gave eleven men an opportunity to vote. Ten voted yes and one against it, their automobile broke and the machine ran into the ditch. Mr. Waldron, who was driving the auto, had an arm broken, Mr. Neil was badly cut by barb wire and the women were bruised and shaken up. The automobile was badly wrecked.

Citron Under the Ban.

Food Commissioner Johnson has written to the department at Washington to say that the "American brand" citron, prepared by Hill Bros., of New York, is prepared for the market with large amount of glucose. The use of this is declared by him to be unlawful both under the state and the national pure food laws for the reason that it is a cheap substitute for sugar and therefore its use constitutes deception. Mr. Johnson will act under the state law in the matter.

HOME INDUSTRY IN NEBRASKA.

A Movement By the Different Manufactures and Business Houses.

Nebraska is gradually coming to the front as a manufacturing center. Raw materials are much cheaper and easier to obtain here than in the extreme eastern states. The home market for machinery and articles of all kinds is good, partly due to the patriotic spirit of the citizens to help home industry by their patronage.

For instance if you pay out fifty dollars for life or fire insurance with some of the home companies, this money is all invested in the shape of permanent investments in this state for your protection. While if you send it to Chicago, New York, or possibly the older countries like England, France or Germany, your $50 leaves the state entirely, possibly never to return. The same proves true of factories and industries of all kinds.

It is rather hard now for some of the factories to obtain skilled labor at this time, but with our boys and girls growing up and learning the different trades this difficulty will be overcome. People can live much cheaper and better in Nebraska than they can in the eastern states on account of the lower prices of farm and garden products. By the increased home demand for these products prices will of course become higher. This is the way farmer pay for patronizing home industries. Several of the Lincoln business houses have interested themselves in this movement, most prominent of which are Messrs. Haspam Bros. & Co., Farmers & Merchants Ins. Co., Brown's Business College, A. G. Davis & Co., Nebraska Pipe Line Co., Frey & Sons, Prescott Music Co., A. D. Benway & Co., J. C. Wood & Co., and the Western Newspaper Union.

AT A BLIND CROSSING.

Union Pacific Train Kills a Team at Central City.

Running through town at unchecked speed because it was behind time Union Pacific fast mail No. 9, struck a team belonging to William Bannister, killing one of the horses instantly and maiming the other so that it died in a short time.

Near Bishop & Withrow's hardware store there is a blind crossing over Union Pacific tracks, the lumber yard of Foster & Saith bordering the tracks and reaching out to the sidewalks, so that it isimpossible to see an approaching train from the east. Mr. Bannister and another man were coming up to this crossing and did not see the train until it was almost to them. The horses became frightened and struck when Bannister reined them back in time to save the wagon from being hit, but not soon enough to get the wagon out of the way. The wagon was turned over and the occupants thrown out, but were uninjured.

STANTON MAN IS SHOT IN FACE.

Proprietor of Shooting Gallery Fired at Through Tent.

Cyrus Johnson and William Kennedy shot Jack Manus, proprietor of a target shooting gallery in Stanton. Johnson and Kennedy had been drinking and went into the shooting gallery, but the proprietor, Mr. Manus refused to let them shoot. They became enraged and quarreled with and attempted to fight Manus. He knocked Johnson down and then put both out. Shortly after three shots were fired through the canvas tent. Eleven shots were taken from Manus' face and neck. Johnson and Kennedy were placed in the county jail.

Fined for Killing Ducks.

The fish and game department has been informed of the fining of G. A. Mann, an ex-game warden of Clay county, and Charles Jacobs, for shooting ducks out of season. The fine in each instance by the district court amount to $150. The offense was committed last year and one was fined $50 and the other $55. When Mann was found hunting on a lake he said he was interested in enforcing the game law, being a warden himself and that he was merely watching to see if the other fellow was shooting ducks. The other fellow had gone hunting with Mann and both were found guilty.

UTES ON WAR PATH

STIRRING UP TROUBLE ON CHEYENNE RESERVATION.

THREATEN TO RAID RANCHES

Declared to Be Dissatisfied With Surroundings—Second Time They Have Become Unruly In Recent Years—Troops Sent.

A Washington dispatch says the tribe of Ute Indians which for more than a year wandered away from their home reservation in Utah and created trouble in Colorado and Wyoming by threatening to take the war-path and raid ranches, is reported to have again broken out on the Cheyenne river reservation in South Dakota, where the tribe was given temporary quarters. At the request of the interior department the war department ordered troops from Ft. Meade, S. D., to the scene of the trouble. The cause of the outbreak is not known. Colonel Downs, a special agent of the Indian office, is at the Cheyenne river reservation and a telegram was received from him saying that the Utes had become unruly. Fort Meade is about 100 miles from the reservation and it will be necessary for the cavalry to make a cross-country "hike," as there is no railroad between the two points.

It was dissatisfaction with civilization that caused the Utes to leave their reservation in Utah and take the road the last time. The secretary of interior finally agreed that the Indians would not be compelled to return to Utah, but that they must settle down on some reservation. At the Utes' request the Cheyenne reservation was selected and two townships were allotted for a period of five years in order to supply them with homes.

There are about 600 of the Utes that may be involved, including many young Indians, among whom the greatest discontent has been manifested.

FLEET NOT TO STAY.

Ships Will Go to Pacific and Right Back Again.

It is stated President Roosevelt has no idea of leaving Admiral Evans' fleet in the Pacific, but intends to order its return within ninety days of its arrival on the California coast. One important conclusion is to be reached during the new established fact, that the fleet is to return almost as soon as the great ships can be cleaned up, replenish their supply of coal and provisions and be otherwise made thoroughly ready for a return cruise. The conclusion is that the executive has absolutely no apprehension respecting the possibilities of a war with Japan, and the short stop at the turning point will amply demonstrate the statement heretofore made that the purpose of the cruise is to test the capabilities of a modern battleship fleet under conditions almost as trying in the point of endurance as could be expected to arise in actual warfare.

RAILROAD PROPERTY BURNS.

Fire Involving $300,000 Loss at Marshalltown, Ia.

One of the worst fires in the history of Marshalltown, Ia., destroyed the Iowa Central car and paint shops, machinery and contents, including passenger coaches and freight cars, entailing lumber and car timbers, entailing a loss of $300,000. The origin of the fire is unknown, but when discovered flames were bursting through the roof. They spread rapidly throughout the entire interior of both structures, which were connected. The efforts of the firemen were directed to saving the machine and boiler shops and roundhouse, adjacent buildings.

AIR RACE AT AN END.

All Nine of the Big Balloons Have Come to Earth.

Pommern (German) miles	880
Isle de France (French	875
Dusseldorf (German)	790
St. Louis (American)	720
America (American)	690
Abercron (German)	678
Anjou (French)	650
United States (American)	375
Lotus II (English)	375

Says a St. Louis, Mo., dispatch of October 23: Proclaimed as the most remarkable ballooning contest in the history of the world of aeronautics, with every record broken, the second international cup competition which started from St. Louis on Monday last, ended today with Germany accorded the winning laurels. The finish of the race was the closest ever known, the victorious German balloon, the Pommern, which landed at Asbury Park this morning, having but five miles the advantage of the French contestant, l'Isle de France, second in the race, which descended during the afternoon at Herbertsville, N. J., a few miles from the Atlantic coast and slightly northwest of Point Pleasant.

Another German balloon, the Dusseldorf, stands third in the race. American entries are fourth and fifth, a third German team is sixth, a French team seventh, American eighth, and English ninth.

The unofficial estimated air line flight of the Pommern is 880 miles and that of the l'Isle de France is 875. The Dusseldorf, third, landed near Dover, Del., is estimated to have covered 790 miles. Only the proximity of the Atlantic ocean stopped the wonderful flight of the Pommern. The balloon could have remained in the air many hours longer and undoubtedly would have added several hundred miles to her record but for the expanse of water ahead.

From unofficial measurements the German balloon, Pommern, has won the balloon race by a few miles with the l'Isle de France second. It was the drifting from Asbury Park to Herberlaville that placed them in second position. While losing the distance record and possession of the cup, the French team sailing l'Isle de France gains the honor of the world's record for duration of flight. Starting from here at 4:10 p. m. central time, they landed today at 1:10 p. m. eastern time, making their time in the air just forty-four hours. The previous record was forty-one hours and fifty minutes, covering 1,200 miles, held by Count de la Vaulx of France. The record for the international race set by the balloon "United States" is the flight from Paris last year was 402 miles. It has been more than doubled by the Pommern and the French balloon which threatened the winner in fact but one of the contestants in this year's race failed to exceed the 1906 record.

The result of the race ended today, the first of its character ever held in the United States, in the opinion of all the balloonist experts gathered here, as the most favorable aeronautic ground in the world. Aside from possession of the cup, the Germans won a cash prize of $2,500 also offered by Mr. Bennett.

Rumor That Emperor of Russia May Issue Ukase.

Private cables were received in Portland, Oregon, from Liverpool stating that there is a well grounded rumor in circulation to the effect that the emperor of Russia will between now and the end of the week issue a ukase forbidding the exportation of wheat from Russia, as was done in 1892.

President Returns Home.

President Roosevelt has reached the White House from his trip to the south. He had added a few shades of brown to his countenance. He took no pains to conceal his joy at reaching home, said he had a delightful trip, was glad he had killed a bear, and that he was touched beyond measure at the reception accorded him in the south. The president has placed himself at the head of the movement for a ship channel in the Mississippi and taken the position that it is a work of national importance and should be fostered by the federal government.

Body Found in East River.

The body of a woman of refined appearance found floating in the East river at New York answers in most particulars the description of Mrs. Clifford W. Hartridge, the missing wife of Harry K. Russel said last night at her home that she was impressed with the similarity of the description of the body in the Fordham morgue with that of her daughter. .

HAVE TRYING DAY

NEW YORK FINANCIAL DISTRICT BADLY UPSET.

ONE INSTITUTION SUSPENDS

Knickerbocker Trust Company Forced to Suspend.—Closes Doors for Lack of Funds, But May Reopen if Given Assistance.

A New York Oct. 22 dispatch says: Credit, the under-the-surface foundation of all business, trembled for a time today, and before confidence could be restored New York's second largest financial institution had emptied its cash vaults under pressure of the biggest run experienced here in a generation; a stock exchange firm had failed for $6,000,000; Wall Street's principal securities had scuttled from $5 to $8 a share; call money had risen to 70 per cent and local bankers, unto 70 per cent and local bankers, unable to stem the tide of distrust, have been forced to appeal for relief to the secretary of the treasury at Washington.

All this was in the face of reassuring statements by the acting state superintendent of banks that the suspected bank was solvent; declarations by prominent bankers that there was no true basis for alarm and assurances from Washington that Secretary Cortelyou would not hesitate to act promptly in any situation where legitimate business was threatened.

Now that the first scare and the worst of the feature is conceded it is believed that the local banking affairs will soon readjust themselves. Secretary of the Treasury Cortelyou reached New York from Washington at 9:30 o'clock. He was met at Jersey City by Hamilton Fish, assistant United States treasurer, and the two were in earnest conversation during the ride to New York. Upon reaching this city they went at once to the Hotel Manhattan, where several bankers later presented to the secretary the various phases of the local financial conditions. Secretary Cortelyou is here to look thoroughly into the financial situation, which he has had under observation for several weeks. He comes with preconceived ideas that additional money will be required to support the situation and the relief will be determined by what he finds to be necessary.

Before leaving Washington late today, Mr. Cortelyou directed that $50,000,000 be deposited with the New York banks as the necessary collateral had been furnished and at the same time he issued a reassuring statement. Mr. Cortelyou's statement is such to put a better face on things.

The Knickerbocker Trust company, the storm center today paid out cash at the rate of $44,444 a minute for hours and then closed its doors. The directors had, as they thought, fully prepared for this and caused the announcement today that $5,000,000 in cash was on hand to meet all eventualities. At 9:30 o'clock a few depositors withdrew their accounts, and an hour later hundreds were in line to take out deposits at the main office in Twenty-fourth street and Fifth avenue and at Harlem, the Bronx and the downtown branches. The $5,000,000 lasted until 12:30, when Vice President Joseph T. Brown announced that the bank had no more cash available and payments were suspended.

Robbers Hold Up Montana Stage, But Get Little.

A special from Dillon, Mont., says that the Mussel Shell stage was stopped by two robbers, but that the driver named Lunceford, put up such a fight with one of the robbers that the other man was obliged to leave the horses' heads to assist his comrade in crime.

While the fight was in progress the team ran away, thus permitting the mails and other matter to escape the hands of the robbers. The driver was robbed and brutally beaten. A posse is in pursuit.

FLIGHT OF BALLOONS BEGINS.

Great Crowds on Hand to Cheer Departing Air Voyagers.

Two baloons passed Mt. Vernon, Ind., Monday night.

"We passed Mount Vernon, Ind., about 11:40 p. m. Please notify C. J. Glidden of St. Louis, official starter. No. 10 balloon.

"C. DeFOREST CHANDLER."

The second balloon passed one mile north of Mt. Vernon at 12:07 a. m. (Tuesday) going in an easterly direction. Mount Vernon is fifty miles south of St. Louis and one hundred and fifty miles east.

Two baloons passed over Jacksonville, Ill., lights in the baskets being plainly visible. The first balloon passed at 7:30 p. m. Monday, about 3,000 feet high, carrying a red light and going northwest. A second balloon, traveling so near the earth that the voices of those in the basket could be heard, passed at 7:45 p. m.

In the big race there are three balloons representing America, three representing Germany, two for France and one for England. The basket of each balloon contains two occupants, the pilot and his aide. With a prospect of the breeze holding to the southeast and south many predictions were made tonight that the final landing place of the balloons would be in Minnesota or one of the Dakotas.

The start of the race was spectacular in the extreme, and was witnessed by a throng gathered in Forest park variously estimated at from 60,000 to 150,000 persons. All St. Louis gazed skyward during that day and a heavy pall of smoke obscured the view from the greater distance. The action of the Germans in taking the higher altitudes assisted materially in making a start the splendid spectacle that it was.

DECLARE FOR RECIPROCITY.

National Congress of Farmers Announces Its Platform.

The farmers national congress convened in annual session at Oklahoma City, Okla., and adopted resolutions favoring reciprocity with foreign nations, thereby enlarging the market for American products, the initiative and referendum, the prohibition of the dealing in futures in agricultural products, the improvement of all waterways and roadways. They opposed the indiscriminate leasing or distribution of seeds by congressmen.

A resolution asking congress to extend the time of payment by the farmers who bid in the Kickapoo Comanche Indian lands was approved.

Congressman Charles R. Davis of Minnesota addressed the farmers on the promotion of scientific agriculture as conducted by federal aid. Congressman Davis has already introduced a bill in congress for such purpose. Prof. W. B. Hart of the Massachusetts agricultural college, Amherst, Mass., and Hon. F. A. Cotton, state superintendent of public instruction of Indiana, also addressed the congress.

A DECREASE IN PENSIONS.

Falling Off of 18,000 Between 1907 and the Year Previous.

The decrease of 18,000 in the number of pensioners on the rolls at the end of the fiscal year 1907, as compared with the year previous is the feature of the annual report of Pension Commissioner Warner, just issued. This is the greatest decrease in the history of the pension bureau. The total number of pensioners June 30, 1907, was 967,371, and the total value of the pension roll at that date was $140,250,800. This is greater by $1,213,131 over the value of the roll for the year previous and is accounted for by the higher rates of pensions provided for by the act approved in 1907; nevertheless 18,000 less had been enrolled June 30 of the present year, 116,239 pensioners.

Ware Must Go to Prison.

The supreme court of the United States denied the petition for certiorari to bring before it the case of George G. Ware, who has been convicted of complicity of land frauds in Nebraska and sentenced to one year in prison and to pay a $1,000 fine. Ware is alleged to have induced one McKibben to make entry on 460 acres of land on the U. S. I. cattle ranch in Nebraska and to have furnished the finances for the undertaking under an agreement whereby he was to purchase his title on lands until title was obtained from the government.

Southern Pacific Offends.

ADVICE TO VICTIMS

TELLS READERS HOW TO CURE RHEUMATISM AT HOME.

Directions to Mix a Simple Preparation and the Dose to Take—Overcomes Kidney and Bladder Trouble Promptly.

There is so much Rheumatism everywhere that the following advice by an eminent authority, who writes for readers of a large Eastern daily paper, will be highly appreciated by those who suffer:

Get from any good pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces of Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Shake these well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime; also drink plenty of good water.

It is claimed that there are few victims of this dread and torturous disease who will fail to find ready relief in this simple home-made mixture, and in most cases a permanent cure is the result.

This simple recipe is said to strengthen and cleanse the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys so that they can filter and strain from the blood and system the poisonous acids and waste matter, which cause not only Rheumatism, but numerous other diseases. Every man or woman here who feels that their kidneys are not healthy and active, or who suffers from any urinary trouble whatever, should not hesitate to make up this mixture, as it is certain to do much good. The ingredients can be had at most any drug store.

THE NUMBER OF ANIMALS.

Recent Attempts to Tabulate the Beasts That Perish.

Every now and then some naturalist endeavors to make an approximate numerical account of known animal species. This kind of attempt is surely not without interest, but it must be acknowledged that its results are very uncertain. We are far from knowing all species, and there is yet a delightful prospect ahead for those who love systematic zoology, and for zoologists who bestow mutual honors by giving each other's names to some animal hitherto unknown.

As Nurmann remarked to a recent meeting of naturalists at the museum, to which he presented his "Catalogus Mammalium," the species of rodents known in 1880 were only 970 in number; now they are 1,900. The number has thus, at least, doubled in 27 years. The number of living species of this creature now known is about 1,500, distributed among 140 genera. This family is the most numerous of the class of mammalia.—Wissen fur Alle

BABY IN TERRIBLE STATE.

Awful Humor Eating Away Face—Body a Mass of Sores—Cuticura Cures in Two Weeks.

"My little daughter broke out all over the body with humor, and we used everything recommended, but without results. I called in three doctors, but she continued to grow worse. Her body was a mass of sores, and her little face was being eaten away. Her ears looked as if they would drop off. Neighbors advised me to get Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and before I had used half of the cake of Soap and box of Ointment the sores had all healed, and my little one's face and body were as clear as a new-born babe. I would not be without it again if it cost five dollars, instead of seventy-five cents. Mrs. George J. Steese, 701 Coburn St., Akron, O., Aug. 30, 1906."

An Ambition.

"So you want to become an ambassador," exclaimed the man of power.

"Yes," replied the opulent person.

"I thought you were devoted to your automobile. When did you become interested in diplomacy?"

"I'm not especially interested in diplomacy. What I want is to get some position where I'll have government protection against arrest for violating the speed regulation."

DOG SOLDIERS UNDER FIRE.

Successful Recent Experiments Made in the German Army.

The use of dogs for military purposes has proved so successful in Germany that the dog soldier is continually being taught new things. Near Dresden recently there was a test of skill which was a great revelation of their accomplishments.

Two mocpanies of soldiers separated a distance of a mile and a quarter, one of them, supposed to be an outpost in the face of an enemy, communicated for some time by the aid of dogs trained to carry letters from one to the other. The distance betweenthe two companies was traversed by the dogs in less than two minutes, in spite of intense heat and a great deal of confusing firing.

The special object of the use of these fast dogs is to enable detachments of infantry themselves of great speed at which the enemy is approaching and so to maintain a position up to the last moment practicable.

On the same occasion the cartridge dogs performed their peculiar duty, which is to supply the troops with cartridges during a rapid fusillade. Each dog wears a kind of pack saddle which carries 300 cartridges. With this load he travels up and down the line of men, who help themselves to cartridges as they have need.

As soon as the pack saddle is empty the dog, at command, makes off at top speed to get it replenished.

Every one has heard of the dogs of the "pious monks of St. Bernard," which are supposed to have a sort of memory of the accomplishment of many wonderful and helpless and self calling assistance for them. But the German military hive dogs trained to search out and succor the wounded and call human assistance.

These dogs of the ambulance corps are trained to divided duties. Some of them, carrying a little flask of water or restorative, simply sit and bark or bay near the body of a fallen man. Others have been trained to go in search of assistance and to guide a soldier of the ambulance corps.

The trained dogs performed all these functions very skillfully at the recent trial near Dresden. It is plain that the German army, if it should be engaged in another war, would be accompanied by a greater number of dogs than ever before accompanied an army on a campaign.

IT IS TO LAUGH.

You Cannot Now Be Popular Without Knowing It.

When the terms for singing lessons had been agreed upon the teacher said:

"For 50 cents a week extra I will give you a lesson in laughing, too.".

"Laughing?" exclimed the prospective pupil, "why, I laugh at ---"

"Anything—nothing. But you must laugh if you expect to be popular. What is more, you must laugh out loud. The days of mere chuckling when merriment could be properly expressed only by a smirk and a smile, are long passed. People laugh heartily nowadays, but at the same time they should laugh musically. That is, they ought to put a few silvery notes into their laugh, and for those who are wise enough to study laughing do put them there. Unfortunately not so well patronized as they should be are the laughter schools. As yet the laughter of most people is a series of cacophonious coughs. Take your own case, for example. I heard you laugh a little while ago. It sounded like---"

"Yes, I dare say it did," interrupted the prospective pupil, "but I had a good time, just the same."

The teacher threw back her head and quilted a merry tintinnabulation of her own.

"There," she said, "you ought to laugh like that. Of course all laughs cannot express the same joy. Sometimes a prano laugh, the contralto laugh and the mezzo laugh, the laugh 'he-he,' the laugh 'ha-ha,' and the laugh 'ho-ho.' The quality of a person's laugh is largely determined by temperament, but no matter what its natural tone, it can be trained into a thing of beauty. Nowadays all students of elocution are advised to look for their laugh. Many have accepted the suggestion, and in six months from now any girl who aspires to shine socially must laugh in fluent trills. Now, for the sum of only 50 cents---"

The prospective pupil shook her head sadly.

"I'd like to," she said, "but I can't afford it. If it comes to the worst I shall have to swear off on laughing altogether."

At the Turn of the Tide.

It was asserted by Aristotle that no animal dies near the sea except at the ebbing of the tide. This idea in some form or another has been popular for centuries.

Such a notion, I find, still exists at Gravesend. An old salt who used to sit by a dying man in an ale house on the shore of the Thames told me he noticed my patient was always worse at the turn of the tide, and then got better after the tide had turned. Reading of Dickens's death scene, he recount in "David Copperfield" of Mr. Barkis "going out with the tide."

According to Aristotle and Mr. Pegotty, it is at the ebbing of the tide that death always occurs. But at Gravesend, I am told, it does not matter whether the tide is at the ebb or flow; it is just at the turn of the tide that death occurs. "I have often seen it happen, sir," an old shrimper said to me quite recently.—Practitioner in the Hospital.

Ranchman's Novel Courtship.

Louis L. Kramer came all the way from Yuma, Cal., to marry a girl he had never seen. The bride was Miss Flora Weiss, a pretty young woman of Tazewell county.

The groom wrote to his aunt here, Mrs. Parkes, to put him in communication with a girl who would make him a good wife, as he was lonely on his ranch in Colorado. Mrs. Parkes recommended Miss Weiss, a neighbor's daughter, and correspondence was begun.

The girl was taken with the romance of the affair and when photographs were exchanged and proved satisfactory a proposal quickly followed. An acceptance was written and then Kramer came east to claim his bride. The marriage was celebrated the day after his arrival and the couple departed immediately afterward for Yuma.—Denver News.

THE CANADIAN CROPS

THREE-QUARTERS OF THE AVERAGE YIELD IS REPORTED.

THE FARMERS DO NOT LOSE

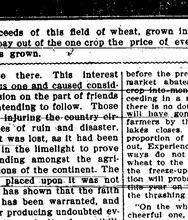
Most of the states of the union felt the unusually severe winter of 1909-7, and the effects of the succeeding late and rainy spring everywhere apparent. Corn was planted two and sometimes three times, the winter wheat suffered and generally there was a noticeable feeling that the retarded growth was in evidence. From the Dakotas to Texas the feeling of dread existed, and the fears were entertained that from corn, wheat, oats and barley would be a distinct failure. How far this was the case is best left to those who passed through the experience. Suffice it to say the same conditions were prevalent throughout the province of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, in western Canada, and that from 250,000 to 300,000 farmers there from the United States a large degree of interest was manifest in almost every state of the union, for every state has some representative there. This interest was a serious one and caused considerable indecision on the part of friends and others intending to follow. Those interested in injuring the country circulated stories of ruin and misery, but the effect was lost, as it had been long enough in the limelight to prove its high standing amongst the agricultural sections of the country. The heavy strain placed upon it was not too great; it has shown that the faith placed in it has been warranted, and it is a year producing undoubted confidence that in agricultural possibilities and resources it stands among the first of food producers. A late spring delayed seeding from the usual early April period until late in May, and in many cases well on into June. And with what result? It is a little early to say with any degree of accuracy, but to a three-quarter crop is almost absolutely certain. The yield of wheat in 1906 was 95,000,000 bushels; 1907, it will be between 70,000,000 and 80,000,000 bushels. The proceeds of this field of wheat, grown in western Canada, were sufficient to pay out of the one crop the price of every acre of land upon which it was grown.



The above is the reproduction of a photograph of the home of a recent settler from Germany. He has since settled in Saskatchewan, western Canada, for two years.

000. It could not be expected that June-sown grain would mature and ripen in any country. The May-sown grain, and this is the staple crop, has proved Western Canada's superiority as a grain-growing country. It demonstrates that the length of sunshine is the great factor that brings on ripening season, although shorter in number of days than in parts farther south, in hours is as great or greater. A correspondent of the Toronto Globe, a most careful purveyor of news, writing from Winnepeg, Manitoba, says:

"Excellent progress in the process of converting the crop into marketable commodity has been made. The days have been fairly warm considering the season of the year and while the amount of heat—day by day—is not quite so extraordinary harvest the grain has matured well. The reports from far and near show that the aggregate yield for the whole grain-growing country is likely to be large, and there are those who assert that the quantity will be equal to about 75 per cent of that secured last season. The quality will be the important consideration especially in view of the steadily rising markets. Cash wheat in Winnipeg closed yesterday at $1.11⅛ per bushel. Fort William delivery. The cost of freight and handling for wheat strikes an average of 10 per bushel for the whole west. This means that the average price to the farmer for contract wheat all over the prairie country is exactly 1 per bushel. The farmers have been looking for the day when dollar wheat would rule and they have it now. Some old wheat is still coming forward from the elevators and a little of last year's crop remains in the hands of the farmers. This nearly all grades up to the contract, and it means a great gain for those who held it. The new wheat is still grading very high, when one considers the conditions under which it was produced. Out of 459 cars that in two days contained wheat which would answer for delivery on contracts. In other words over 800,000 bushels of wheat which would bring the farmers an average of about $1 per bushel, reached Winnipeg in two days. The significance of 3300,000 worth of wheat being passed by the inspectors in two days at the close of an admittedly unfavorable season should not be allowed to sink out of sight at a time when returns from agricultural activity in the west are being anxiously awaited. These figures do not take account of the lower grades, of which there were 31 cars. More than one-third of these contained milling wheat, which would remunerate the farmer at the rate of 85c per bushel on the basis of today's closing figures. The balance consisted of low grade stuff which would vary greatly in quality and would show now coming forward, the average."

"The approximate value of the two days' receipts of wheat, however, would be more than $400,000, calculating the capacity of a car at 1,000 bushels and eliminating the usual percentage of freight and handling. As many of the modern cars contain more than 1,000 bushels and as the freight rate to Fort William is less than 10c per cwt. on most of the wheat which is now coming forward, the estimate of $400,000 is low. The circulation of $200,000 per day among the farmers will not continue for the whole year, of course, but that figure is likely to be exceeded before the present rush of wheat to the market abates. The conversion of the crop into money may be said to be proceeding in a most satisfactory way and there is no doubt that millions of dollars will have gone into the pockets of the farmers by the time navigation on the lakes closes. Even then only a small proportion of the wheat will have come out. Experience has shown that the railways do not carry very much of the wheat to the Lake Superior ports before the freeze-up comes, and the proportion will probably be smaller than usual this year on account of the lateness of the spring season.

"On the whole the prospect is a most cheerful one, the likelihood being that the satisfactory returns for the past few days will be greatly exceeded in the coming six or seven weeks. The fact that wheat of any kind is bound to bring a remunerative price this season is the comforting feature of the situation and there is no occasion for concern over the possibility of the general quality of the grain being below that of previous years. The high standard of the wheat raised in the west in 1906-1906 was undoubtedly a great advertisement for the grain-growing districts of Canada and it would been well if that excellent record could have been continued, but it is unreasonable to expect that 90 per cent of the wheat will be of contract grade every year as it was in the years mentioned. If 75 per cent. or even 50 per cent. of this season's yield be in the contract standard there will be from for congratulation. The profit on the crop, the interest of its investment of money, time and labor this year as it did in any previous season, and by so doing it will have done its whole duty to those who have placed their faith in it and its agricultural resourcefulness. The breathing spell it it comes will enable the transportation companies and other elements in the trade of the country to catch up with some of their obligations and the impression prevails that means will be more than often any loss-reviews which may be experienced will be of a smaller character than those which attended the production. The general commercial outlook is encouraging and only depressing factors are due to the position of a few communities widely separated in which there is a small return from the crop.

"It is true the season has not been so favorable as other seasons but the condition is widespread. The corn crop in the states of the union, where it is the principal crop, the farmers is subject to frost. Frost has undoubtedly materially reduced the total yield in places this year, but after every allowance has been made for this and other causes the fact remains that the total grain in Alberta will be the largest in history, while in the other provinces the yield will not fall far short of other years.

"The following extract from the Edmonton Bulletin fairly describes the situation in Northern Alberta and Saskatchewan:

"Cutting is practically completed, stacking is in progress in some places, threshing will commence at once. A few late fields which were sown for green feed are being cut this week. The grain is all in stock and everywhere the glow of autumn mingles with the glow of harvest. The summer rainfall records show the typical yellow of well ripened grain. The yield, however, are too good a year below to indicate full development and perfect ripening. Some late oats will be fed in the straw which is held by good cattle feeders to be the best way to feed oats. This is one year in the history of the spring wheat industry has there been a better growth and production of plant and if the crop of 1907 had been favored with more propitious condition during September than any previous records of wheat production in this country would have been eclipsed. On the farm known as the Macleod farm 4½ miles northeast of the city on the Fort Saskatchewan trail, samples of Red Fyfe were taken that were unusually plump and hard and of excellent color. This field should run 25 bushels to the acre."

GRAFT AND GRAFTER

ONE LITTLE HOMELY WORD THAT CONVEYS MUCH.

MANY HUMBUGS IN DISGUISE

Human Nature Much the Same in All Ages—People Easily Deluded into Making Poor Investments.

Cant phrases have been invented, and words more noted for their force than elegance, have become popular as expressive of common things. In all that is slang, it is doubtful if there is any better word than "graft." Long before Chaucer indited what would now be called "pigeon English," witty Greeks and Romans indulged in their aesthestic forms of vulgar expression, and there can be little doubt that good old Socrates interposed Plato and some of his other pupils with puncent idioms, and in turn were called by Aristophanes an impious old grafter.

It is quite evident that "graft" has a place among euphonius words, and conveys an idea plainly and tersely. The famous Barnum, who said something about the people seeing to be humbugged had a pretty good idea of human nature, if we may use most out of his knowledge. The business man of to-day does not ignore the gullibility of the masses, and yearly millions of dollars are spent by printers' ink to convey to the people various kinds of information that will stimulate the letting go of dollars for the benefit of the grafter.

Pick up a copy of any current Sunday newspaper, farm journal, religious publication, magazine or other period-ical and look over its pages! Graft is evident in each and every one. It is covered under the guise of artistic advertising. Thousands of cure-alls, wonderful discoveries, great bargains from bankrupt sales, exceptional chances for investment and Lord knows what not, beams from the pages to catch the eyes of the person who has not received sufficient lessons in the "school of graft." The people like to be fooled. There seems to be more or less a sacrifice in the make-up of most men, and women, too. The getting of something of value for little or nothing is a common offer to gather in the dollars for the benefit of the grafter.

For a few years a young man with ambition and a liking for work struggled along in the mercantile line in a large central western city. He decided to enlarge. He needed money. A splendid scheme presented itself. Why not get dollars needed to carry on a big business from the people? They needed a chance for investment. He was just the fellow to help 'em out. He organized a big cooperative company. He advertised broadcast. Told of the wonderful possibilities of his business, and lo! the dollars rolled his way by the hundreds of thousands. Soon his investment ended his game. He was charged with using the mails to defraud. Hundreds of thousands of dollars were lost by those who invested in his "cooperative society." Many similar schemes are up for consideration day after day. The people never tire of them. Just like buying a lottery ticket. There is a chance to win, and as long as the proposition looks good, the grafter flourishes.

The wise man, be he farmer or doctor, stockman or storekeeper, will avoid jumping at such chances for investment. Look out for the cooperative scheme. Investigate the grafters who want to interest you in their business affairs, and at the same time hold the combination to the safe.

AGAINST PREMIUM GRAFT.

Laws Passed by Some States Prohibiting Prizes in Packages of Foodstuffs.

Some classes of people when they wish to purchase goods, look more after so-called bargains than quality, and quite often the bargains prove expensive. In fact, the cunningness of anything for nothing is attractive to the average person. Of late years there has grown up a practice among manufacturers of staple articles, particularly in the food line, of giving a prize with each package of their goods. It is apparent that there is an inclination towards grafting in the make-up of most people, and this spirit is appealed to largely by the giver of prizes. The purchaser seems to overlook the fact that the receiving of nothing other than he pays for. Whatever article is given as a premium represents so much money value and certainly the manufacturer does not lose by the operation. The value of what is given must be made up by either the retailer or the consumer, and it is generally the consumer who pays the cost.

Retail grocers, as well as the people in general, have cause to be thankful to the lawmakers of some states for making it illegal to place premiums in packages of foodstuffs. Such a law is now in force in the state of Nebraska. Premium and prize schemes have been a cause of trouble and disturbance, and has resulted in the making of inferior goods, palming off their poor productions, relying more upon the premium or prize-end trade than the merit of goods. The wise house wife in whatever state she may live will be careful in discriminating between quality and quality backed up by prizes. It is well when you buy articles in the food line to avoid buying anything which has a prize attachment. You are compelled to pot alone pay for the goods that you require, but the prize as well.

WEALTH CONCENTRATION EVIL.

An evil that at present is receiving more than ordinary attention in the press is the concentration of vast amounts of money in the hands of corporations. The accumulation of wealth by individuals when controlled by natural law, within limits, become divided. The millionaire who has a family, at his death will apportion to each member a share of his wealth. Even though these divisions may be increased by work and by speculation and investment by the children, they in return will divide the accumulations among their offspring and eventually. It matters not how great the fortunes of any one of the family may become, it is only a matter of time until there is a scattering of the fortunes, and a great portion of it will pass from the members of the family. On the other hand, corporation methods mean the building of a system that prevents the operation of the natural law. In other words corporations are machines that work continuously, and when one part is broken it is replaced by a new one. Thus the accumulation goes on. The death of Rockefeller will not result in a scattering of the Standard Oil company; the death of the present stockholders of any of the large trust companies, banks or insurance companies will not take any interest in their existence. All will go ahead.

The safeguards of corporations in many cases are excellent. But the inclination to crush trade by the crushing out of smaller concerns and the destruction of legitimate competition and the controlling of prices, seems against public policy. All classes are compelled to pay prices dictated by these trusts for the goods produced. Each year finds new combinations in the country that control the centralization of capital that makes such operations possible. The person who assists in concentrating money in large financial centers does his part toward helping along such combines. It is only by individual action on the part of every small producer and laborer in the country that conditions can be changed. Stand by every home industry and do your part toward keeping money in circulation at home, and thus bring about conditions that will make the operations of trusts and combinations impossible.

SCIENCE OF TOWN KILLING.

Unwise Booming and Maintaining Exorbitant Prices an Effective Way.

There is a county seat town in one of the central western states that has a population of about 3,000. It is surrounded by one of the richest farming countries. For years this county seat has been at a standstill. If anything it is retrograding, and even farm values near it are lowering, while poorer land some 20 miles away is advancing.

Why should such a condition exist? The answer is plain. A dozen years ago there was a boom. With the boom real estate went to the top notch. Keeping pace with the boom the prices of products in that town went up. There was a collapse in real estate values, but the merchants remained, and kept up the high-price habit. That is they wanted more than an equitable share of profit. Another town was started 20 miles away. Some of the farmers went there. It was found that the merchants were selling goods at a lower price. The stock buyer and the grainbuyer paid a few cents a hundred more for commodities he chases. The habit of trading at the new town grew. The business men of the old town couldn't learn a lesson. Before they knew it their customers were leaving them. So it has been since then. The merchants have been plodding along. The money that should be retained in the town went elsewhere. Much of it went to build up the competing town.

Mistakes like this one are made frequently. Towns become dead through a spirit of live and let die. In fact, some towns are so dead that the farmers who withdrew their trade from them are suffering in decreased farm values. They take no interest in these places, other than to visit them now and then. Unhealthy booms, unhealthy prices made by the merchants, and work are foolishly maintained, are quite certain to kill a town even though it may be a county seat and have some advantages nearby towns may not have.

Support Home Newspapers.

The country newspaper is a power in the land. Its place can never be filled by the big daily papers or the bulky magazines or agricultural journals. It fills a field entirely its own. It is the barometer of the locality in which it is published. Its new pages represent the life of the people, and its advertising pages should reflect the business activity of the town. It is the duty of every good citizen to give his support to the local press. Particularly the business men should patronize it with a view of bettering the town. It is not money wasted to use advertising space in it. One good merchant in the town who understands how to advertise rightly, can do more for the town that will help every other business man in it. But all should do their part, and the storekeeper who does not give of home paper the support it merits is not the wisest kind of a business man.

Make Good Packing Paper.

Old newspapers make excellent packing paper, in which to put things in storage, as printing ink is disliked by insects.

Old Church.

The one thousandth anniversary of the founding of St. Peter's church, Chester, England, finds the structure in good condition, portions of it having been rebuilt in 1440 and 1672.

Prosperous Germany.

New factories are springing up like mushrooms in the Rhine country, and all are built substantially. There is a general complaint, in consequence, of the scarcity of labor. It has been said that no man in Germany is idle unless he chooses.

TO CLEAN SEWING MACHINES.

Care Bestowed on Instrument Will Be Amply Repaid.

Sewing is not half as hard as some people find it if the sewing machine is kept in good running order. When the sewing machine works hard and heavily take the needle and shuttle out and give every joint and bearing a generous bath of gasoline. Of course there should not be a lighted lamp or fire of any kind in the room. Turn the wheels briskly for a few moments to enable the gasoline to penetrate every part and to loosen and wash away the old oil and grime. Then clean it all away. When all the grime and oil has been removed, oil with proper lubricating oil, running the machine for two or three minutes before inserting the needle. Now, with a piece of chamois skin, wipe away all superfluous oil. It is a pleasure to sew on a machine treated in this manner.

Gingham Cushions.

The odds and ends of a bright gingham can be made into a pretty chair cushion. Cut the pieces in octagon shapes and trim with white dress braid. One cushion made in this manner was tufted. The pattern was cut double, the two pieces filled with cotton, tightly basted together and finished with the beading, which was stitched on the machine. Colored material can be used in the same manner and joined with some bright dress braid. Striped material in red and white can be made into tiny star shapes, with an irregular stripe and finished in the same manner. Pincushions are made of silk, joined with lace insertions through which narrow ribbon is run.

Mother's Vegetable Soup.

Pare, slice the potatoes and turn into the soup kettle with plenty of cold water, add a half an onion sliced and let boil 30 minutes or until the vegetables are tender; a little chopped celery may be used if you have it. Season with salt and pepper, add some good, rich milk or cream and a piece of butter the size of a walnut and a few spoonfuls of canned or cold cooked tomatoes. Serve as soon as it comes to a boil.

SERIAL STORY

FRIDAY THE 13TH

A Novel by THOMAS W. LAWSON
Author of "Frenzied Finance."

(Copyright, 1907, by Thomas W. Lawson.)

Bob Brownley threw himself into the Union Pacific crowd first giving an order to a group of his brokers, who jumped for a number of other points. Almost instantly the panic was stayed and stocks were bounding upward two to five points at a leap. Bob continued buying Union Pacific and his brokers other stocks in unlimited quantities. Nothing like such a quick turn of the market had been seen before. His power to absorb stocks seemed to be boundless. It was estimated that personally and through his brokers he bought 2,000,000 shares and more than he joined when he left the Exchange.

I looked at him in wonderment. "Bob, I cannot understand you," I said at last as we turned out of Broad street into Wall. "It seems as if you work with magic. Everything you touch turns to gold."

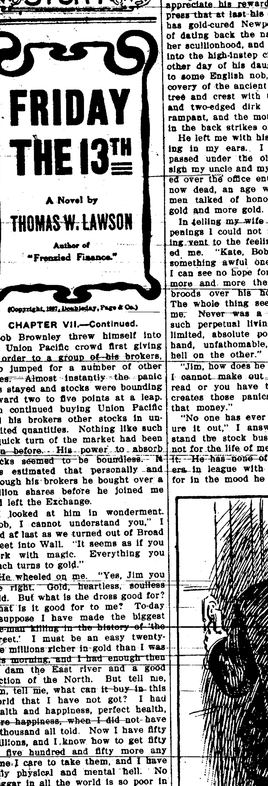
He wheeled on me. "Yes, Jim you are right. Gold, heartless, soulless gold. But what is the dross good for? What is it good for to me? To-day I suppose I have made the biggest one-man killing in the history of the Street.' I must be an easy twenty-five millions richer in gold than I was this morning, and I had enough then to dam the East river and a good section of the North. But tell me, Jim, tell me, what good has it done me? What is it good for to me? To-day I am the same old Bob Brownley I was when I had not a thousand all told. Now I have fifty millions, and I know nothing to get fifty or five hundred and fifty more any time. I care to take them, and I have only physical and mental health to boast of. Health and that is so poor in happiness as I. Tell me, tell me, Jim, is the same God of. If there is one—for already the gods have begun to rob me of my faith in God—where can I buy a little, just a little happiness with all this cursed yellow dirt? What is it good for to me, I ask you? Jim Randolph, what will it get me? If I had died when I was poor, I think you will agree with me that, if there is a heaven, I would have had a better chance of getting there. Now on a day like to-day, when you see the results of my work, the results of my having had my own way, you must agree that if I were taken off I should stand more than an even show of landing in hell where the sulphur is thickest and the flames are hottest."

We were at the entrance of Randolph & Randolph's office as he poured forth his bitterness of heart and mind. He glared at me as a dungeon prisoner might glare at his keeper for his answer to "Where can I find liberty?" His whole body seemed to express the question.

As I noted the awful changes in every line of his face, the rigid hardness, the haunted, nervous look that appeared in his eyes, it seemed a forerunner of madness, I could not see, either, where his millions brought any happiness. His hair, which once was in smooth and orderly, hung over his forehead in an unparted mass of tangled curls, and here and there showed white. His usually immaculate linen was rumpled, his handkerchief, even more fascinating than before the mercury entered his soul, but it was that will, awful beauty of the caged lion, lashing himself into madness with memories of his lost freedom.

"Jim," he went on, when he saw I could not answer, "I guess you don't know where I can swap the yellow mud for balm of Gilead. I won't bother you with my troubles any longer. You have your own to look after, and a girl whose happiness Tom Reinhart needed in his business. I will go up and show her the pictures in this week's Collier's of the fine home and for incurables that Reinhart has so generously and nobly built at a cost of two and a half millions! The little girl may think better of Reinhart when she knows that her father's money was put to such good use. Who knows but the great finance king may dedicate it as the 'Judge Lee Sands Home' and carve over the entrance a bas-relief of her father, mother, and sister with Hope, Faith, and Charity looking down from the clouds on their dancing severed heads!"

Bob Brownley laughed a horrible cringing laugh as he uttered these awful words. Then he beat his hand down on my shoulders as he said in a hoarse voice, "Jim, for you I should have had crimps in that jackal and pickpocket's soul by now and in the sweat bind of his business man.



"Where Can I Find Liberty?"

men selling the market short on advance information, when the "Standard Oil" banks had put up money rates to 150 per cent and a crash seemed inevitable, Bob suddenly smashed the loan market by offering to lend one hundred millions at four per cent; and by buying and bidding up prices at the same time he put the whole Washington crowd and its New York accomplices to disastrous rout and caused them to lose millions. His control in operations with increasing violence and increasing profits up to the fourth anniversary of the tragedy. On the intervening anniversary I had been compelled by self-interest and fear that he would really pull down the entire Wall street structure, to rush in and forcibly drag him off. But with his growing madness my influence was waning. Each raid it was with greater difficulty that I got his ear.

Finally, on the fourth anniversary, in a panic that seemed to be running into something more terrible than any previous, he savagely refused to accede to my appeal, telling me that he would not stop, even if Randolph & Randolph were doomed to go down in the crash. He had become known on the floor that I was the only one who could do anything with him in his frenzies, and my pleading with him in the lobby was watched by the gamblers of the Exchange with triple eyed suspense. When it was clear from his emphatic gestures and raised voices that I had failed, a reckless mood from drink and madness and took no pains to disguise his intentions—that I could not prevail upon him; there was a frantic rush for the poles to throw over stocks in advance of him. Suddenly, after I had turned from him in despair, there flashed into my mind a scene in my own home. Already I was dealing with a madman, and I decided that I was justified in making this last try. I rushed back to him. "Bob, good-bye," I whispered in his ear, "good-bye. In ten minutes you will get word that Jim Randolph has cut his throat!" He stopped as though I had plunged a knife into him, struck his forehead a resounding blow, and his pale, wild brown eyes came a sickening look of fear.

"Stop, Jim, for God's sake, don't say that to me. My cup is full now. Don't tell me I am to have that crime on my soul." He thought a moment. "I don't know whether you mean it, Jim, but I can take no chances, not for all the money in the world, not even for revenge. Wait here, Jim." He called for his brokers, and several rushed to him from different parts of the room. He sent them back into the crowd while he flashed for the Amalgamated-pole. The day was saved.

Presently he came back to me. "Jim, I must have a talk with you. Come over to my office." When we got there he threw the key and door open in front of me. His great eyes looked full into mine. In college days, gazing into their brown depths, by some magic I seemed to see the scenes and revolve in always happy-ending tales, as the child sees enchanted creatures far back in the burning Yule log flames. But there was no joyous beckonings in the haunted depths of Bob's eyes that day.

Her First Impressions.

"The first impression is the one you should always go by," the little grass widow advised. "I know by experience. I have never yet had a husband that I liked at first sight. He always had to win me. Then, after I had been married awhile, I invariably went back to my first impression of dislike that kept on getting worse and worse till I had to leave him. I shall never marry again," she finished, "unless I fall head over heels in love with him the first minute I meet him."

ABSALOM THE PLOTTER

STORY BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1907, by the author, W. S. Edson.)

Scripture authority—2 Samuel 15:1-12.

SERMONETTE.

"Prepared him chariots and horses, and fifty men to run before him."—Vain fellow.

Absalom was proud of his personal charms, proud of his attainments.

The world asks, Why should he not have been?

God says, "Pride and arrogancy and the evil way, and the froward mouth do I hate."

Man in the pride of his might thinketh that greatness is made up of things possessed, in gorgeous display, in homage received.

God, who sees the end of man from the beginning, knows that "a man's pride shall bring him low."

Pride is the sum of selfishness, and arrogance, and self-esteem, and personal ambition.

Pride leadeth a man to exalt himself to the place from which later he must come tumbling down as surely as the stone thrown into the air will turn and fall to the earth again after the momentum which sent it upward has been spent.

Over and over did Christ declare that "whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased."

Pride giveth short vision, shallow perception and narrow judgment.

Pride is a great deceiver, making wrong seem right and right wrong, for "there is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death."

"Absalom rose up early and stood by the way of the gate." These were strenuous days for the proud young man. He worked hard; oh! so hard! Pride, after all, is a hard task-master. It got Absalom up early, and kept him standing all day in the noisy, dusty, hot way by the gate of the city. Day by day—week after week—month after month—year after year.

Pride made a liar and a thief out of Absalom, and it will do as much for anyone else who lets pride consume him. He lied to the people when he told them his thoughts were for them, when his sole thought was for Absalom and what Absalom could gain; and he stole from his father, King David, when he robbed him of the trust and loyalty of the people.

As we have said, the royal turnout of Prince Absalom had become a familiar sight to the people of Jerusalem, but this was the first morning that the shouting of the heralds, the notes of the buglers, the clatter and tramp of the prancing horses and the rumble of the chariots had been heard so early in the day, and many were the conjectures as to the reason for it.

Absalom noted the expressions of surprise which mingled with the looks of admiration and approval on the faces of the people as he passed, and, turning with a significant smile to his attendant and confidant who rode with him in the chariot, he whispered:

"They will soon become used to this early-morning appearance. Yes, all Israel shall know that Absalom riseth at the gate of the city and thinketh upon the welfare of the nation."

"Thou hast the wisdom as well as the beauty of the gods," flatteringly responded the other.

"And Absalom hath a right royal adviser in thee," said the prince, patronizingly. "Was it not thee who first got an inkling of the scheming of Bathsheba to place her son Solomon on the throne? And was it not thee who hinted that the place for the prince and heir was in the gate of the city of the king, whither those from every part in the nation come on matters of business?"

That was the beginning of busy days with Prince Absalom. No one loved praise and pleasure more than he, but when it came to personal ambition and the gratification of his pride no task too early-for-him-and-no task too hard for him to undertake. When the first intimation had come to him that plans were being laid whereby the kingdom should go to Solomon, the youngest son of David, rather than to him, the eldest living son and rightful heir, he was filled with the bitterest of anger and was for plotting death of the young prince, but his close confidant, seeing at once the folly and peril of such a course, had persuaded him to abandon the thought, and had showed him that if he was to save the kingdom for himself he must do it by subtlety. He must turn the hearts and thoughts of the people to himself, and then strike the blow that would place the throne within his grasp. And so it came to pass that day after day he rose up early and stood beside the way of the gate and greeted in gracious manner all who came thither. And when any man that had a controversy in the town or day court from which he had come and sought the king out for judgment, Absalom would draw from him his story, win his confidence, and then exclaim:

"See, thy matters are good and right; but there is no man deputed of the king to hear thee. Oh, that I were made judge in the land, that every man which hath any suit or cause might come to me, and I would do him justice!"

And when any man came nigh to him to do him obeisance, he put forth his hand and took him and kissed him. And in this manner did Absalom to all Israel that came to the king for judgment, and as the years went by the fame and favor of Absalom spread throughout all the tribes of Israel, so that none was so popular or so much talked of as he.

But disquieting word came to him one day as he sat in his accustomed place by the gate. There had been secret messengers from the king, so it was intimated, mingling with the people who had come to him for succor and to do him obeisance, and he feared lest the matter of his plotting should have reached the ears of David, and bring him into trouble ere he had had time to strike the final blow. For this reason he quickly gathered his followers together and sent them secretly up through the city, warning them in the streets and in the doorways, while the people within rushed to the windows and doors to watch the procession as it passed.

The splendid turnout of Absalom, son of King David and generally acknowledged heir to the throne, had become a familiar sight in Jerusalem during the past few months, but the people never tired of watching the gorgeous procession as it passed—the company of fifty fleet runners leading the way, the gayly caparisoned horses and the glistening bronze and gold chariots, with their broad-shouldered, brawny-armed drivers, and their splendidly accoutered warriors. All furnished a pleasing and animated picture, the center of which was the handsome youth who rode with such dignity and royal grace in the largest and most splendid of the chariots. As he passed, the people with fairly held their breath, swept were they with the rare beauty of the face and form. Never before had they seen so regal a presence, such a wealth of hair, such flashing eyes, such ruddy glow upon the full-rounded cheeks, such graceful poise. Many were the whispered words of commendation and approving nod, and the people were pleased to think of the day when Prince Absalom should succeed his father, David, on the throne of Israel.

"He is like one of the gods come to earth," whispered one into the ear of the man standing next him.

"Yea," was the response, "and the gods be up early this morning. What thought Absalom abroad while all the sun is scarcely above the top of yonder city's wall?"

"It is early. Perhaps he is bent upon discharging some of the king's business. Let us follow."

And they fell in behind the procession which wound its way through the streets and at last brought up at the chief gate of the city, which, with the rising of the sun, had been thrown open for the incoming stream of travelers.

TATTOOING CRAZE

DISFIGURING ONE'S SKIN NOW THE PROPER THING.

Americans in Europe Seem to Have Gone Mad Over the Subject According to an Authority in London.

Americans have gone tattoo mad. Such is the inference to be drawn from a recent conversation with Alfred South, a famous English and continental tattooist. According to the artist the rich have stolen the thunder of the poor. The practice of covering the body with elaborate designs, which was supposed to be the special weakness of the low-class sailor, has ascended the social ladder and is now the amusement of the aristocracy.

Certain well-known Americans, if we are to believe Mr. Smith, would present the appearance of animated picture galleries could we see them in the nude. Their backs, chests, legs and arms are covered with crouching tigers, poised snakes and more or less beautiful women. The son of one of the largest watch manufacturers in the United States, who is many times a millionaire, had a fac simile of his father's particular brand of timepiece tattooed on his chest by Mr. South. He had the hands showing the hour to be exactly 12 and remarked that no matter where he was he could always refer to it at exactly that time of day and always correct his fallible timepiece.

It seems that many Americans have had their full names tattooed on their wrists and forearms. Mr. South says he has many American women as customers. They are more sentimental than the sterner sex, according to the artist, and they run to names, or the private crests of their sweethearts. The work is usually done on the legs, but many of the fairer sex are having elaborate designs executed on their backs. In this as in other walks of life fair woman has lived up to her reputation for a changeableness state of mind, for the artist declares he has several times changed the name of a sweetheart for women customers.

The tattooing craze appears to be even more advanced in England and on the continent than in the United States. Here is seems to have touched even the highest rung of the social ladder. The prince of Wales himself is said to have some most artistic work on his arm, while the crown princess of Denmark, Lady Cornwallis West and members of the royal family of Russia are said to be devotees of the craze. Some of them are even said to have become adept at the art itself.

Among society at the present time problems in bridge are especially popular as subjects for the tattoo artist. One woman recently had the "old and new testament" in four colors and many elaborations, tattooed on her back. Religious devotees have peculiar fashions, mingling with them pious old lady recently had a likeness of her priest tattooed on her arm by Mr. South.

Languages Studied by Japanese.

A letter from Japan, published in Berlin, says that the study of the German language in Japan has fallen off in the last few years. At the close of the school term of 1900 in Tokio the department of examinations reported that the following languages had been taken up: English, French, Russian, German and Russian.

French, Korean and Spanish were neglected. In 1904 the number of students of Chinese increased 50 per cent, and the study of English fell off, while there was a marked increase of German students.

In 1907 statistics show that the German language has lost in favor, and it has gone back to seventh place. English has not retrograded, and has increased in the most marked degree of any who study German.

"Young men who are being educated for business careers," says the Chicago Record-Herald, "ought to read Virgil. It is still popular for those who are in the scientific circles."

A Substitute for Concrete.

A composition resembling concrete, now used extensively in Germany and France and known as lime beton, is described as being more generally used than concrete. It is a cheaper composition than concrete is, for concrete, easier to work, and if the initial load be not too great it is for nearly every purpose just as good. A good lime beton is made of one part lime to mortar and stones, gravel, or cinders, mortar and good-sized stones making the best composition. Probably one-half of the houses in Marseil

Fighting for Mud.

The latest to be the latest commodity which has been cornered. The monopolist is the well-known Bohemian watering place Franzensbad, whose wonderful healing mud baths are famous throughout the world. The news of Franzensbad's business enterprise has just become known in the course of a lawsuit at Eger between the Saxon government and the municipality of Franzensbad.

Saxony has a watering place also with mud baths, Bad Elster. Some time ago Bad Elster entered into negotiations to buy a large area of ground containing mineral mud deposits near Franzensbad.

When the Bohemian town heard what was going on they promptly decided to head off their Saxon rivals and stepped in and bought up the land themselves. The Saxons were greatly aggrieved and carried the matter into the Bohemian courts, which decided against them.

During the trial it was stated that although Franzensbad already possessed an inexhaustible supply of this precious mud the town had spent more than a million crowns in buying up all the mud lands in the surrounding country in order to secure exclusive possession for all time of this valuable healing remedy.

Horse Dentists Needed.

A bright young woman who attends the horse shows remarked that she believed many horses indicated suffering from diseased teeth by restlessness and other forms of "bad manners." On giving the subject consideration one is led to the conviction that this is not only true, but that there is also room for much improvement in veterinary dentistry.

About the only treatment prescribed by the ordinary veterinarian and sometimes practiced by the coachman or groom is "floating" or filing the teeth which become worn down on one side and leave the higher side sharp and sometimes jagged. But we never hear anything about filling the teeth, or otherwise treating them, especially if they or the gums be ulcerated, beyond pulling them out. As the young woman referred to also remarked, "What excruciating pain it must be to have a cold steel bit put on a sensitive tooth, possibly on a nerve exposed!"

There are many reasons for a horse's misbehavior, save the blame and driver, aside from his "bad temper."

Serious Young English Woman.

Mrs. Gladstone, wife of the home secretary of England, was brought up in the opposite political camp, for she was Miss Dorothy Paget, daughter of Sir Richard Paget, for many years a conservative member for Somerset. Her marriage to the youngest son of the great liberal statesman took place nearly six years ago. Though she has given no notable entertainments, this bright, pretty woman often receives the more serious—one might almost say learned—members of the liberal party, and also those who share her husband's devotion to the royal and ancient game of golf. She is thoroughly well read, takes an interest in politics and to a certain extent shares in Mr. Gladstone's love of outdoor life. But it was music that drew them together in the first place. She is very musical and he is specially fond of part singing. And while singing together they mutually fell in love.

SEEK TREASURE OF LAFITTE.

Its Hiding Place Has Been Pointed Out in Dreams of Ghosts.

Since the French privateer and smuggler, Jean Lafitte, sailed the high seas and brought his treasures to the gulf coast and buried them now and then it happens that some sensation arises as to their immediate whereabouts, says the Houston Post.

Thirty-four years ago the pirate of the gulf, as Lafitte was called, appeared in a dream to Dr. Beasly, and, rather roughly taking him by the collar, led him to some spot where he would show him where there were gold and silver and diamonds buried. The doctor in his dream followed. He pointed out the spot and then awoke. Next morning he went with his dream to a certain place in the cottage, which was then the Beasly home and occupied by the family, and designated the spot under which lies the much-talked-of wealth of the privateer.

The doctor, having the same dream repeated twice in the same night, he hastily woke after Lafitte's third visit and much interested, the result being that he did, and perhaps, now very shortly afterward, begin digging under the house in pursuit of the treasure.

After getting to the depth of four or five feet he found nothing of any moment except a very unusual stone in this part of the world, whose quality of its kind was ever soon here.

Had he kept on possibly the treasure might have been found and the fearless spirit of Lafitte, wherever it may be, might have been released from this burden of secrecy, a burden from which, seemingly, he wished to be relieved, as another dish has been made in the same house, and this time in a dream Lafitte appears in the presence of a lady, urging her to get the lost jewels, gold and silver.

After all these years Dr. Beasly has at last concluded to have some one else who believes in the undertaking join him and the treasure is found and they have made arrangements satisfactory to all parties concerned and soon, in a short time, Mr. McCoy, a banker at La Porte, being the owner of the premises, will begin operations to find the treasures stowed deep down under the old house.

CLEVER MR. BRIGGS

A MAN WHO PRIDED HIMSELF ON HIS TACT.

He Explains a Little Detail of Business to Mrs. Briggs in Connection With the Signing of a Check.

When Mr. Briggs came home one evening and found his wife with eyes suspiciously red he only kissed her as usual and made no remarks. Briggs was a man who prided himself on his tact. He studiously guided the conversation on commonplace subjects while they sat at supper. Mrs. Briggs answered in monosyllables of forced cheerfulness.

Now, my dear, what is the matter?" he suddenly asked when the meal was finished.

"Oh, nothing," replied Mrs. Briggs, biting her lip and with eyes cast down demurely.

"Ahe, Watson, the beautiful lady has a redness about the eyes. She has been weeping. Ergo, she has something troubling her," soliloquized Briggs in a humorous way he had of burlesquing the famous detective of fiction.

Mrs. Briggs pouted, hesitating between tears and a smile. At this opportune moment her husband arose, went around the table and put an arm about her shoulders.

"Now, tell me all about it, little woman," he said. "You see, it does no good denying that something is troubling you. My powerfully analytic and introspectively deductive mind tells me otherwise."

After a moment Mrs. Briggs spoke. "Papa gave another cent to that hateful Fresh Air fund, never," she said, and held a handkerchief to her eyes.

"What have they done to hurt you?" he ventured.

Mrs. Briggs arose, went to the sideboard and took out a paper. Pointing to a paragraph she bade her husband read. It was under the list of fresh air fund subscriptions and read as follows:

"One check was received signed 'A Friend.' This, of course, cannot be credited."

Briggs read the item and looked at his wife.

"But—I don't see—does this make you feel bad?" he puzzled.

"Why, certainly, stupid. I sent the check," she explained. "You see I had been reading about the poor waifs that live in those big tenements on the East Side and have such pinched little lives, and lots of them die every summer. And they keep one of them in the country, where they can drink milk and pick flowers and romp on the green grass and get healthy for $5. So I decided I could spare $10, and sent it. I felt so good thinking that 10 children were out having a good time on my $10."

"And now that you sign the check you send?" asked Briggs, trembling with a suspicion of the truth.

"I just signed it 'A Friend,'" replied his wife. "I didn't want to let my right hand know what my left hand was doing. So I signed it that way, and now comes that horrid letter."

Briggs sparred for breath. When he could trust himself to speak he did so, guardedly.

"I'm—most extraordinary," he mused judicially. "Very interesting their part, to say the least. Still, it may happen that they use the full name system. It is, in fact, quite possible, I may say probable."

"The full name system?" asked Mrs. Briggs doubtfully.

"Yes," explained Briggs. "You see, it is a check system in which the full name must be signed and no pseudonym. I think, it is my opinion, you should have signed your full name and then requested in an accompanying letter that they should credit your subscription in the printed list to 'A Friend.' This system is almost universally used now."

Mrs. Briggs' eyes were wide with wonder.

"Dear me, I might have thought of that," she said. "Address Mr. ——, president, and inclose the check."

Briggs was a man who prided himself on his tact.—New York Press.

New York's Great School Population.

The report of bodies of $31,841,321, which is now before the board of estimate for approval, is greater than the entire receipts of Greece, says the New York World. It is eight times the income of Harvard university. Of the year sum $25,000,871 is appropriated to pay the salaries of teachers. There are many of school children whose educational needs require this outlay. Sixteen were enrolled last year, with an average attendance of 453,892. The expenses of all the universities and colleges in Maine, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania numbered only one-fourth as many. It was an army larger than Baltimore and greater than the population of Vermont and Delaware combined. The 29,000 new sittings provided would alone accommodate the common school pupils of New Hampshire.

Neighborly Affection.

They met on the suburban car. They were next door neighbors, but Mrs. Snaggsley and her family were spending the summer in the country.

"Mrs. Snaggsley—Have you had a pleasant summer, Mrs. Sorsem?

Mrs. Sharem—Oh, yes. But when are you coming back?—Cleveland Leader.

MARKET LETTER

JOSEPH A. RICKART,
Live Stock Correspondent.

Since Tuesday of last week the cattle market has been dull and draggy, with prices off 25 or 30 cents. The material flurry to the rail last week by Canada and the interior is not improved any today. Receipts have not amounted since the middle of last week, but a good many buyers appeared Friday, and Saturday in search of bargains, and prices grew strong or than the low time and a pretty good clearance was effected. Trade in this line opened brisk this morning but soon dropped off and ruled dull after the first hour.

Grass cows that brought $3.25 to 3.40 days ago went at $2.75 to $3 Friday, and veal calves bring $5.50 for tops now, against $6.50 ten days ago. Stockers range from $2.75 to $4.50, some Colorado stockers today at $4.25 to $4.35 and feeders bring $3.50 to $4.00, indicating that country grades have suffered less than the others. There is apparently nothing in the present situation that can make more than temporary depression, considering the solid basis of the finances of the West and a quick improvement is confidently expected.

The hog market has declined even more than has the cattle market, beginning the downward course first of last week, and going down at the rate of 20 to 25 cents every day till Saturday. Run is 9,000 today market 5 to 5 higher, top $9 75, bulk of sales $5 50 to $5 85. The same influences are at work, in the market for all kinds of live stock, and any return of confidence will be felt by all, the different weights are selling closer together than a week ago.

Sheep and lambs did not feel the break last week till Friday but they are getting in line with other classes of live stock today, market off 25 to 50 cents. Run today is 10,000 head, top lambs now selling at $5.75, wethers $4.10 to $5.10. Country grades have been moving at lower prices, lambs worth $5.50 to $6.35, wethers and yearlings $5 good handling ewes common grades $3 to $4.

Gold Coin Tonics
6 Feeds for One Cent

Your stock needs tonics. They aid digestion, also cure and prevent diseases. They will make you extra profits.

Why is it that Gold Coin Stock Tonics are considered so much better than stock foods? Why is it that all big feeders and farmers who do not use stock foods are using and feeding Stock Tonics? Why is it that College professors, chemists, farmers, cowmen and State Officials endorse Gold Coin Tonics? Because they increase digestion. Stock only digests 50 per cent of what they eat. Gold Coin Tonics increase digestion, so as to get the system, strengthen and build up the constitution, through which alone farm animals earn money.

The Truth About Digestion

Did it ever occur to you that the digestive apparatus of ten-hour different Creatures of farm animals are entirely different and therefore naturally require different treatment and different feeding. For example, clam shells and grits are good for poultry but would be very bad for cows. Science has proven that different animals digest different foods act differently on different animals. Therefore it stands to reason that no medicinal stock tonics must be prepared according to the class of subjects for which they are intended. That is just why Gold Coin Stock Tonics are prepared in four different varieties. "Gold Coin Horse Tonic" for horses, "Gold Coin Cattle Tonic" for cattle, "Gold Coin Hog Tonic" for hogs and "Gold Coin Poultry Tonic" for poultry.

Makes Hens Lay

Gents:—I got a pail of your famous Egg-A-Day Poultry Tonic and must say my hens have never before laid as many eggs as they have during the months of October and November. Will recommend it strongly to my neighbors. My chickens are mixed lot of fowls, Leghorns, buff Cochins, Rose and White Leghorns crossed with the full blooded buff Cochin Rooster. I am just keeping them for the amount of eggs they lay. Yours,
Frank I. Fisher,

Judge D B Searls Says:

Gentlemen: Your animal tonics are all right. I highly endorse them. I believe that every one who keeps cattle, horses, hogs or poultry and makes the food rations more palatable will increase digestion and make the stock actually more profitable. For years I have used your Stock Tonics and while conditioning my show stock for the State Fair. You have my heartiest endorsement as your goods certainly possess the merits claimed.
D B Searls, Judge of District Court, St. Cloud, Minn.

Gold Coin Stock Food Company, St. Paul Minn.
The ingredients used in the manufacture of Gold Coin Stock Tonics have been subjected to my most careful consideration with reference to the influence they are likely to exert on animals. With reference thereto I may say that the ingredients are of the best, which would be helpful in all animal feeding. Properly prepared for the different classes of animals for which they are intended, these ingredients should be helpful in toning up the digestive organs preparatory to spring work and aiding digestion in general. Woman's Christian Temperance Union

We did not get to the convention until after 11 o'clock Wednesday, so missed most of the morning session. When going into the meeting a discussion was going on about changing the pledge. Some wanted the words "as a beverage" left out of the pledge others wanting it to remain as it now reads. A motion was made to amend the pledge, but on reading the by-laws of the constitution found that a notice of somethin would have to be given before it could be amended. Mrs. O M Woodward, chairman of the Constitution committee, and a pioneer in the work, quickly informed the convention that it was not necessary as it had been amended twenty years ago, shortly after the change in the National pledge. The three objectional words did not appear for sometime, but through an error on the part of the compiler had since appeared in the printed reports and documents. During the discussion of the matter which was quite spirited and involved a number of parliamentary points, Mrs. L M N Stevens presided, winning the highest praise from the delegates for her executive ability. During the afternoon session the chairman of the special committee reported resolutions provided for the elimination of the objectionable words from the pledge. The resolutions were adopted.

Mrs. Harriet Vance, president, of L T L, gave a report of the work done in the state among the children. It is right to educate the children in temperance. If all the boys and girls would take the pledge and faithfully keep it for years from now, we would have no saloons to fight. She said many good things which comes under scientific temperance, teaching the youth the physical dangers of the use of the human system. Miss Pearl Kendle, president of the press, made a report of what had been accomplished through the press of it has been possible with means drawn from the public, to most effective work of the unions and brought to their minds what they are trying to accomplish for the good they are trying to accomplish for the good of humanity. Her advice to all unions was to give the news to the public while it is not fresh, not wait until it is stale. The influence is far more than we can comprehend. She also spoke of the old creed habit, of it being the ruination of so many of our bright young boys, $600,000 being expended for cigarettes last year. We are praying for the time to come when we can have legislative powers who will prevent the manufacture and sale of cigarettes.

Mrs. Gulles, president of Flower Mission department, reported 4,798 bouquets distributed among sick, suffering and prisons. Many of the Unions did not send reports of this work, and was sure all asked to give more attention to it this year as it is the means of doing great good. Many a sin burdened convict has had his heart touched with tender memories by the gift of God's beautiful flowers. The sick and distressed are always cheered by the gift of a flower. Let this work go on and be increased sisters, lets each do more of the flower mission work. Scientific temperance was talked of by Mrs. M J Russell, who told of the good done through most of the state by teaching the school scholars the effect of alcohol on the human system, weakening the hearts action, and greatly affecting all the vital organs, and shortening the lives of those who are habitual users of strong drink. More temperance physiologies will be sent to the teachers this year so they can instruct the young people and children and how intemperance will ruin both body and soul.

Did you ever notice that tobacco is always cheap? If a man drops a piece of meat, no matter how clean the floor may be, he will either give it a kick or pick it up and lay it to one side. He will never eat it. But let him drop his plug of tobacco on the ground and no difference how dirty the spot where it fell, he will pick it up and give it a wave's swipe on his coat sleeve or on the bottom of his pants and then take a chew with greater relish than ever.—Shelton Clipper.

Word has been received of the reported suicidal death of W. J. Dugan of Indianola, Lincoln county, miles south of North Platte. The water upon the fire, the son hurried after his brother a mile away. The daughter went to call neighbors. Narrow Escape From Death.

At Grand Island Charles Mattingly was the victim of an accident at the sugar factory, from which, however, he escaped serious injury in an almost unaccountable manner. He had a wheelbarrow full and was about to dump them into the tank when he stepped on a small round beet, slipped and fell into the tank. He was caught by the revolving comb and was churned about until workmen near by, who observed the fall could slip the belt and bring the machinery to a standstill. He was lifted out with the expectation tha he would be badly crushed. However, not a bone was broken and no serious injuries are epected.

STATE OF TRADE

RECENT FLURRY NEED NOT STOP LEGITIMATE TRADE.

NO DEEP IMPRESSION MADE

Commercial Agency Expresses Gratification That Country Was so Well Fortified to Withstand Assault on Financial Side.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s. weekly trade review says:

Contraction has followed the financial crisis of last week, but only to the extent compelled by inability to raise money. There is no evidence that confidence has been permanently impaired; on the contrary, gratification is general that the nation was so strongly fortified by a decade of unexampled prosperity that the severe strain made no deeper impression. Many contemplated developments have been postponed and merchants find rates for commercial paper almost prohibitive, yet retail trade is stimulated by more seasonable temperature and at interior cities collections improve with the movement of the crops to market.

Consolidation in the iron and steel industry are not materially altered, except that new business is smaller. Mills continue well occupied on old contracts as a rule, and there have been few cancellations. Fair tonnage of rails is wanted for home roads and export and ship yards are using plates freely, yet the volume of business is restricted by financial stringency.

Coke output is at the maximum and large contracts are reported for future delivery, but the ovens will quickly respond to any curtailment of pig iron production.

EUROPE IS BEING DRAINED

Must Part With Cash to Buy American Products—Natural Resources of This Country Will Largely Relieve Money Market.

The enormous influence which American products are exerting on the building up of a credit balance abroad, the most important development of the financial situation in New York. Reports from all quarters show that the great American staples—wheat, cotton, copper, tobacco, oil, meats—are on their way to Europe, it being the season when American products are marketed abroad. The immediate effect of these shipments is to give the United States credit abroad which can be speedily converted into cash. These natural resources are the country's promise to exert even greater influence than the sale of American securities abroad. The latter have to some extent relieved stock market pressure, but the intrinsic value of American staples abroad, and their colossal aggregate at this point of the year, is beyond the reach of financial distrust.

BLACKLIST HANGS IN BALANCE.

Personal Liberties of Union Workmen Involved in Suit in U. S. Court.

Much that organized labor has gained in years by strikes and other contests with capital will go to naught if Attorney General Bonaparte does not win in the fight he is making on labor's behalf in the United States supreme court. He is defending the constitutionality of the Erdmann act of 1908 containing a provision making it a crime for common carriers of interstate commerce or its agents to threaten to dismiss or to discriminate against an employe because he belongs to a union.

The case arises from the Louisville & Nashville railroad, which is attacking the law on behalf of its agent, William Adair, claim the act is a bold attempt to regulate one of the ordinary relations of life, that of master and servant.

"Is the right to discriminate against and blacklist an employe because of his membership in a labor organization a grave constitutional privilege of the carrier which the courts should zealous to protect?" asked the attorney general: "The right of workingmen to form associations for mutual advantage cannot be denied. It is recognized by both national and state laws and is as much a part of the liberty which all state constitutions are intended to secure as the right to affiliate with political or religious organizations. All that is said that the state could not prevent employes from interfering with the political and religious liberties of their employes?"

Bonaparte said should this law be declared unconstitutional the whole system of government mediation under which Commissioner of Labor Knapp have been laboring so successfully this year would fall. He pleaded that the law seeking to avoid strikes and lockouts, thus preventing interruptions to interstate commerce, should not be stricken from the statute books.

NEW YORK'S FINANCES.

Banking Conditions Getting Back to Normal Rapidly.

With the announcement Wednesday that the Knickerbocker Trust company will pay its depositors dollar for dollar and the returning of banking condition to a practically normal status, Wall street is openly congratulating itself on weathering one of the worst financial storms in years. Depressed values in the stock exchange are the inevitable result of liquidation following the money stringency. Brokers are still refusing original business and short orders.

All the bank runs are practically over and the banks and trust companies are preparing to resume business on a normal basis.

The checking committee in charge of the Knickerbocker books announce the following figures: "Absolutely good assets, $56,000,000; due depositors, $48,387,000; balance to the Bank of Commerce, $6,412,000. The surplus is considered abundantly ample to cover the shrinkage in the value of the securities held and losses on collections.

By This Method Tinted Ones Will Not Be Harmed.

Soiled sofa pillow covers are among the most disgusting of house furnishings.

They certainly cannot be either decorative or useful.

It is a simple matter to do up washable sofa pillow tops, but one hesitates before attempting to clean the tinted ones.

However, they may be done up several times if the following method is used: Make a suds of tepid, not hot, water, and wash the cover rapidly by pressing in the hands.

Rinse in tepid water and shake in the air until partly dry.

Place face down on a pad, cover with a thick smooth piece of cotton cloth, and iron rapidly with a hot iron until perfectly dry.

If there are no grease spots or stains it may be dry-cleaned by dipping it apart, placing it right side up on a board, fastening it with thumb screws, and rubbing the surface with kneadrubber until the cover is perfectly clean.

When cleaning be careful to move the rubber in the same direction as the stitches. A five-cent rubber will be large enough.

ONE WAY TO MEND CURTAINS.

Treatment That Will Make Them Appear Like New.

These curtains were of plain net with border on one side and bottom, and this one pair had broken in holes through the border for about a foot above the window sill, says a writer in the Chicago Tribune. I cut the border off clear across the bottom, carefully following the curves in the design, then noticing the figure at the bottom of the curtain extended the border till it overlapped a corresponding figure in the side border, which, in this case, occurred at such a distance as to measure about a foot. Then, with curtain still hanging at the window to insure proper adjustment, fasten border across with pins, remove from curtain pole, lay on flat surface, and baste carefully.

Stitch twice on machine, having tension loose enough not to draw the net, and using care in turning corners, raising the presser foot often. Remove and cut away the old part underneath, and press thoroughly. I then let down the extra length which had been turned over at the top and rehung them and the mending does not show at all. My curtains are like new and still hang within three inches of the floor.

Praises Peruna as a Catarrh Remedy

MRS. E. M. TINNEY

Mrs. E. M. Tinney, story writer, 50 E. Main St., Kingston, Pa., Box 761, writes:

"During 1901 I suffered form nasal catarrh, which various other remedies failed to relieve.

"Six bottles of Peruna, which I took entirely cured me, its catarrh disappearing and never returning.

"I therefore cheerfully recommend Peruna to all similarly afflicted."

Mrs. Ellen Nagle, 414 4th street, Green Bay, Wis., writes:

"I have often heard Peruna praised and it is more widely known here than any other medicine, but I never knew what a splendid medicine it really was until a few weeks ago when I caught a bad cold which settled all over me.

"The doctor wanted to prescribe, but I told him I was going to try Peruna and sent for a bottle and tried it.

"I felt much better the next morning and within three days was entirely free of any lameness or any cough.

"I consider it the finest cough remedy."

The Bright Firstborn.

They were discussing the law of entail—the English law bequeathing the bulk of the family property to the eldest son.

"There is 50 per cent. of logic in that law," said a physician, "and if the family property went to the firstborn, whether son or daughter, the law would contain 100 per cent. of logic. For the first born child is practically always the best-equipped in health, in beauty, in everything.

"Why is this so? It is because married people love one another more profoundly at the time of the birth of their ward; for love, like all things, grows and grows, often dies.

"Mrs. Craigie—John Oliver Hobbes was the first born child, by the way, of Corelli. So was Richard Mansfield. So were Joseph Chamberlain, Lord Kitchener, Max Muller, Henry Irving, George Meredith.

"Look back into the past, and we see again the prominence of the firstborn, among them Mohammed, Confucius, Raphael, Milton, Dante, Goethe, Byron, Shelly and Heine."

BEFORE THE KING OF KINGS.

Pious Man Could Not Suffer Interruption to Prayer.

A pious man was engaged in prayer while traveling on the highway. One of the nobles of the land, who knew him, was passing by, and saluted him, but the pious man did not mind the salutation and continued his prayer. The nobleman became vexed, and with a great effort he watted till the man had finished his prayers; whereupon he, in an excited manner, said to him: "Thou art a stupid fellow for thou hast sinned against thine own law, which commands man to take care of life. But thou has just risked thy life unnecessarily. Why did you not respond to my salutation? If I had split your head open with my sword, who could have called me to account?"

"Sir!" I pray, suppress your wrath. I hope to quiet you, if you will allow me only a few words in reply. Think for instance, that while you were standing in conversation with your king, a friend in passing by saluted you. Should you like to be interrupted in your conversation with the king in order to answer that salutation?"

"Woe unto me, if I were to do so."

"Now, I pray, dear sir! consider only the respect you thus pay to man! A mortal man, who is here to-day and to-morrow in the grave, while I myself, who stood facing the King of Kings, the immortal King, what should I have done?"

The nobleman assuaged his wrath, and the pious man continued his journey in peace.

Students' Practical Test.

Four days' dieting under direction of the medical department of the University of Minnesota has reduced the weight of five men engaged in the experiment from one-quarter of a pound to two and one-half pounds, and a sophomore medical class in physiology was given practice in the determination of food values by having some of their own weights as a basis for the test squad. The men were given three meals each day, each meal consisting of about three and one-half ounces of lean meat, one ounce of butter or cream and one and two-fifths pints of milk.

The comparatively great loss of weight of some of the men, all of whom started in as the best of physical condition, is believed to have demonstrated that the restrictions placed upon them would kill the ordinary man in a short time. Meals were served at regular hours, and all the food given was the best to be had of its kind. None of the men ate a single article of what was served up by the medical department.—Minneapolis Journal.

A Caddy's Joke.

James Anderson, of the Scottish-American Golf club, smiled at a poor player on the Van Courtlandt Park links in New York.

"He reminds me of a chap I used to know," said Mr. Anderson. "This chap played golf with me when I first made a butt of him. He got a ball badly bunkered one day, and, do what he would, he couldn't get it out again. Whack, whack, he went, making it fly every time. After half an hour's work he wiped his wet face with his handkerchief, and turned despairingly to the caddy.

"Hang it," he said, 'I have tried all my clubs on this confounded ball. What on earth am I to do now?'

The caddy laughed harshly.

"'Give it a swat with yer jag,' he said.

An Everyday Word.

"The things some people do not know are astonishing," observed the pedant. "To every man you meet the word penikfe is familiar, yet plenty there would give it up if you asked them how the name originated. The odd part is that they never stop to wonder. Of course, readers know that not so long ago, before steel pens were in general use, the clerk's instrument was a quill. Sharpening one end of this was all that was necessary to make a pen, and every man was his own penmaker and small knives were kept for this purpose. Yes, of course, you knew all this before, but there are a good many folks who do not."

Force of a Cyclone.

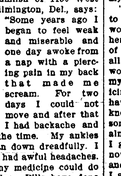
Careful estimate of force of a cyclone and the energy required to keep a hurricane in active operation, reveals the presence of a power that makes the mightiest efforts of a man appear as nothing in comparison. A force equal to more than 400,000-horsepower was estimated as developed in a West Indian cyclone. This greatly exceeds the power that could be developed by all the means within the range of man's capabilities. Wind, steam, water, windmills and the strength of all men and animals combined they could not even approach the tremendous force of this mighty power.

Reviving an Ancient Game.

One of the recent revivals is the ancient game of bowls, which now bids fair to take once again a leading place among the sports of Merrie England. As a matter of fact, it is just as good a game to-day as it was in the time of Sir Francis Drake, the famous Anglo-Saxon times. From a medical point of view we have nothing but praise for this most excellent of recreations. It provides open air exercise and amusement for old and young, it is admirably fitted for many invalids, and above all it is one of the best of what may be called natural opiates.—Medical Press.

TESTED BY TIME.

A Cure That Has Held Good for Four Years.



Mrs. Mary Crumlish of 1130 West Third Street, Wilmington, Del., says:

"Some years ago I began to feel weak and miserable and one day awoke from a nap with a piercing pain in my back that made me scream. For two days I could not move and after that I had backache and dizzy spells all the time. My ankles swelled and I ran down dreadfully. I was nervous and had awful headaches. I wonder that any medicine could do what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me. They cured me four years ago and I have been well ever since."

JUST WHAT HE WANTED.

Surely Here Were Musical Tastes Enough to Suit Anybody.

A gentleman of the most cultivated musical tastes, wishing to change his residence, advertised for rooms in a private family "fond of music." The next mail brought him the following reply:

"Dear Sir: I think we could accommodate you with rooms, and as for music one of my daughters plays the parlor organ and gittar; another one plays the accordeon and banjo; I play the cornet and beats my wife plays the harmonica and my son the flute. We all sing and if you are good at tenner singing you would fit right in. We are also fond of singing gospel hims evenings, for none of us sings tenner. Or if you plays the base viol we have one right here in the house. If you want music as well as rooms and board we could accommodate you and there would be no extra charge for it. Lippincott's.

The extraordinary popularity of fine white goods this summer makes the choice of Starch a matter of great importance. Defiance Starch, being free from all injurious chemicals, is the only one which is safe to use on fine fabrics. She Did Not Fear Death.

An old lady on her seventy-third birthday once said, "I do not mind getting old, and I do not fear death, but I live in constant fear of paralysis."

"For some time I have been wanting to tell you of the great good your wonderful Sloan's Liniment is doing here," writes Mr. James F. Abernethy, of Rutherford College, N. C. "In fact, all your remedies are doing noble work, but your Liniment beats all. In my eight years' experience with medicine I find none to go ahead of it, having tried it in very many cases. I know of one young man, a brick-mason, who suffered from a partial, yes, almost complete, paralysis of one arm. I got him to use your Liniment, and now he can do as much work as ever, and he sings your praise every day. I get all to use it I possibly can and know there is great virtue in it. I have helped the sale of your noble remedies about here greatly, and expect to cause many more to buy them, as I know they can't be beat."

Returns from the state election by Tuesday are coming in slowly as is usual in the so called off years. Complete returns from twenty-two of the ninety counties of the state, and partial returns from practically all of the others do not materially change the estimate of the previous night. Some heavy democratic gains in Gage, Richardson, Saline and Dodge counties cut Reese's plurality down below highest figures claimed for him, but republican gains elsewhere largely offset this. Two years ago Letton had a plurality of 23,212. From these figures the indications are Reese's plurality will be in the vicinity of 20,000. On regents for the State University the majorities are, if anything, a little larger, though no effort has been made to tabulate this vote.—Omaha Bee.

Kentucky is republican by a safe majority, electing the entire state republican ticket. The republican majority in Massachusetts is lucrease.

In Delaware the issue was the local question, license carrying, by a small majority.

Republicans claim the election of their candidate for governor in New Jersey by a small majority.

Election day in Table Rock was very quiet. The vote went overwhelmingly and the result somewhat mixed from a political viewpoint. In the 1st district 189 votes were cast and in the second 108 a falling off in each district. Mr. Potts, the democratic candidate for treasurer carried the precinct by 50, 30 in the 1st and 25 in the 2nd; Mr. Jobe, the democratic candidate for sheriff also carried the precinct by 40 votes; in the contest for justice Mr. Marble received a majority of 1 over Mr. Colwell. There was a three cornered fight for road overseer, Mr. Widdifield being the republican nominee, Mr. Lehman the democratic and Mr. Streib by petition; the result in the second district was a tie between Streib and Widdifield, Lehman running 21 ahead. In the 1st district Lehman and Streib tied while Widdifield ran ahead 10 votes, so on the precinct Mr. Lehman received a plurality of 1 and was elected. The following is an abstract of the vote cast:

LAND LAND LAND

Land that grows 15 to 25 tons of sugar beets to the acre, 200 to 400 bushels of potatoes, 40 to 100 bushels of oats, 25 to 60 bushels of corn to the acre, and all kinds of fruit berries and melons in abundance. Rich, virgin soil, that grows immense crops like magic, when the water that the U. S. government provides at cost is flowed upon it. There is no such thing as crop failure under irrigation. The farmer plants his crop and absolutely controls the amount of water his crops need at exactly the proper time, and he can grow more profitable crops than he can grow in any natural rainfall country, such as sugar beets and alfalfa. Government statistics show that irrigated land will produce from one third to one-half more crops than any natural rainfall country. Officials of the U. S. Reclamation Service say that the North Platte project, which will irrigate the land we are selling, is best adapted to irrigation of any land in the country, and the supply of water is unlimited.

Renters, Why pay from $3 to $10 an acre rent for land when you can get 160 acres of fine irrigated land for about the same money you are paying for one year's rent of an eastern farm?

Come to the New Land and own a fine farm that will grow larger crops than the high-priced land you are renting. Uncle Sam will supply you with water to irrigate 160 acres of the most productive land in the country at cost. I can secure you a fine 160-acre, irrigable farm for from $1 to $5 per acre.

Don't Wait. It won't last long. Thousands of people are flocking to this country, and the sooner you come the better bargain I can get you. Don't waste your life renting somebody else's farm at a high price. Come to the rich and fertile North Platte valley, and make a home and fortune for yourself and family. Don't neglect this splendid opportunity. There's big money in it. This land that you can now secure for practically nothing, will be worth from $100 to $300 per acre as soon as irrigated and improved. It is better land than Colorado land, that is now selling for as much. You can live all the work done on sugar beets for $45 an acre, and at the average yield of 20 tons an acre, you can clear $25 an acre and do no work on it yourself.

Farm Owners, Why farm $100 eastern land when you can buy irrigated land here from one-tenth to one-fourth the money, and get land that will produce larger crops and increase rapidly in value? Sell out and come to the rich North Platte valley. We are not pioneering. There are no hardships in this country—towns, railroads, schools and churches are close at hand. The Platte Valley is centrally located and convenient to all markets. Railroad communications are unexcelled to all good shipping points. All kinds of produce, cattle, hogs and sheep command a high price. The Burlington R. R. now runs through the valley and the Union Pacific is rapidly pushing work on a through line to the coast, which line also runs through the valley. Thousands and thousands of tons of hay are cut in the river bottoms every year.

Investors: We can sell you deeded land that is increasing rapidly in value and will continue to increase in value for years to come. Irrigated land is not subject to the depression in land values that always go with a period of crop failures in any natural rainfall country. No matter what the weather you can grow a crop every year under irrigation. I control the sale of thousands of acres of irrigated and dry lands, ranches and ranches. I can secure you any kind of land at a price that will make money quickly for you.

Write today for further information. Local real estate dealers correspond; we can make some money for you.

We had the pleasure of being one of the party that escorted the governor to Table Rock last Saturday night. We can never forget the good treatment that was bestowed on us while in the city. That bountiful supper that made us all feel so good shall never be forgotten, and we wonder if all the ladies of Table Rock can cook as well as those who prepared that supper. We know we may count another visit from the governor, and we face the hospitality of Table Rock away before Pawnee's pride. Clay County Pawnee Republican

"What's the matter—got something in your eye?" long tried Con Hennessinger the other day of an individual suffering from a foreign substance that had found lodgment beneath his eyelid. Let me take it out for you, said Mr. Hennessinger, and he went over his associate, ran his tongue over the pupil of the man's eye and in a jiffy had the particle removed. The tongue removes many things better than handkerchiefs or fingernails. It sweeps the eye as a good broom a room. Moreover it is painless. The passage of the tongue over the eyeball is a rather pleasant sensation. As regards the sensations of the owner of the tongue—well, to do good to others we should be willing to undergo a little.

Samuel Steiner Dies

July 25, 1871, died Nov. 3, 1907, age 36 years, 3 months and 5 days. He was united in marriage to Miss Helen Bernart March 14, 1900. Two children were born of this union both of which are still living. He was converted and united with the Christian church at Humboldt, Nebr., when a young man. Having moved away from church privileges for a while, he again renewed his fellowship with the same church last winter. He has been a member of the A O U W lodge for several years. He leaves a father, mother, three brothers, three sisters, a wife and two small children to mourn his death. Truly it may be said of him, "His sun went down at noon." In his death the community at large have lost a true friend, his father and mother a dutiful son, the brothers and sisters a kind brother, his wife a loving husband and his children a tender and indulgent father. The funeral services were held at the Christian church Tuesday afternoon conducted by B F Livelsperger, for which the remains were laid to rest in the Table Rock cemetery.

New Outlook in Chemistry.

As is well known, the logical process of inductive reasoning based upon carefully planned experiment is relatively a new manifestation of the power of the human intellect. The philosophers of old imagined, observed and reasoned, but neglected experimentation; the artisans, who alone came into close contact with realities, were unable except in the crudest fashion to generalise concerning their results. Because of this separation of thought and deed, man's knowledge of his environment remained for thousands of years in a wholly undeveloped state. From this dormant condition natural science emerged but slowly, although with steadily increasing pace. Little by little, in spite of occasional pauses of inactivity, or apparent forgetfulness, human acquaintance with the fundamental laws of the universe has grown. Each century has added something to the total; says the Harvard Graduates' Magazine; and usually each century has added more than any century before. What a contrast such a development presents to that of sculpture, for example, which reached nearly if not quite its highest point of perfection more than 2,000 years ago. In chemistry especially has the acceleration been great; and the effect of recent growth is by no remarkable that, looking back, one is inclined to deny the existence of any real science in chemistry a century and a half ago. If the accumulation of chemical knowledge is depicted diagrammatically in relation to the progress of time, measuring one in the vertical and the other in a horizontal direction, an upward-pointing curve with steadily increasing inclination is obtained. The curve stops at the present day; but unless a catastrophe annihilates the earth's population and its libraries, this line is bound to be continued. Whither will it lead? What further insight into his own constitution as well as that of his environment may man attain? The answer to these questions is fraught with weighty significance as regards the future of the human race.

A Good Word from Panama.

Leroy Park, European agent for the Isthmian canal commission, replies to some allegations made by Spanish laborers employed on the Panama work, and incidentally gives interesting information as to conditions generally in connection with the enterprise. He states from personal knowledge that the Spanish laborers are well cared for, and he cites an official report from the Spanish consul at Panama showing, as a result of the consul's investigation, that the quarters of the laborers are entirely sanitary, that the rations are content and are sending for their families and that those who are going to the isthmus are taking their wives and children with them, in full confidence that they will be safe; happy and contented. Mr. Park states that there are now 43,000 laborers on the isthmus, and that more will come from Europe with the beginning of the dry season. It is evident that the big undertaking is being pushed as rapidly as is consistent with effective work.

The immigration question has many sides, and while some objectionable persons may manage to obtain access to this country, it is evident that the great bulk of the new arrivals is composed of desirable elements. In fact, it is certain that, enormous as is the influx, aggregating nearly a million and a half yearly, it is not sufficient to meet all labor demands. The bureau at Washington having the matter in charge is informed that 250,000 immigrants can be placed at once in localities where workers are urgently needed, and that three states are seeking settlers, and could readily accommodate at least 1,000,000. This is still the land of promise to the honest and industrious alien who desires to better his condition.

Caran d'Ache, a French caricaturist, has invented a toy which bids fair to be as popular in Europe as the Teddy bears are in America. It is a wooden dog painted in fantastic fashion. The dog—he is not always of the same breed—was intended as a plaything for children, but the Paris shopmen have taken such a fancy to it that 40 men are working every day turning out the quaint animals, and the inventor is getting rich.

One hundred and forty million dollars will have to be raised by taxation to pay the expenses of New York next year, according to the estimates made by the heads of the various departments of the city government. This is an increase of $40,000,000 in less than ten years.

The statement that the winter will be a warm one does not bring much comfort to the average woman, as the price of furs is just as high as usual, and the furs are just as becoming.

SOME WEAK POINTS

COMMERCIAL CLUBS SOMETIMES MAKE BLUNDERS.

STARTING NEW ENTERPRISES

Within the past few years a commercial club organization fever has taken hold of many towns in the western country. It is a kind of good fever to have, but quite often, like other of the less harmless fevers that affect the physically, passes away and doesn't make much difference with the our general health.

Town-building is much like erecting a good bridge. It is essential that a good foundation be laid. Natural conditions have much to do with it. Cities and towns spring up where there is a good cause for their existence. Artificial means may be employed for "booming" purposes, but unless there be something substantial and lasting, all the booming that can be done will not result in the accomplishment of permanent good. The average rural town receives its principal support from the business given it by the contiguous territory. The trade of a limited section of country will sustain a comparative number of business establishments. If a town possesses natural advantages, location, etc., for certain lines of manufacturing, so much the better. It would be foolish, as have been demonstrated in a number of western towns, to commence the manufacture of cottons, or silks, or furniture, when the raw material must be transported from a great distance, and also the fuel for power.

Still, if a town assume any great proportions, there must be industries to give the people occupation. The judicious investment of capital in canning factories, in paper mills, in sheeps' wool works and a few other enterprises, if these enterprises are rightly conducted, might prove a valuable factor in some of the western towns. When a commercial club is organized, generally efforts are made to secure some industry for the town that will give the people employment, and which will bring new residents to the town. Quite often bonuses are offered concerns, which are located in other places to relocate. It has been the general experience of towns which have made efforts along these lines that a concern that asks very much encouragement in the way of ready cash, is hardly worth bothering with and is likely to prove a failure.

Another thing that the average commercial club does not take in consideration is that it is overdoing things. Up institutions already located than to encourage new ones of doubtful success. A manufacturing concern is only valuable to the town as a means of placing a greater amount of money in circulation. The greater the pay roll, the better for the town. But it matters not how big the amount is that is distributed among workers on a Saturday night, it results in little good to the town if it is sent to some other town for needed supplies.

Commercial club members should keep in mind that it is far better to devise means of keeping money earned by farmers and laborers from being sent to large cities for goods, than it is to have new concerns started. If there be a few hundred dollars a day sent from the place to mail-order houses, it would be far better to prevent this by devising means for having it spent in the town, than to encourage the starting of a new factory with a pay roll of a like amount.

The first duty of a commercial organization to protect its home industries, and when it does not see that this is successful they will be more likely to seek the place as suitable for the establishment of some other concern.

D. M. CARR.

Home Trade Idea Not New.

Day after day the people are awakening to the fact that the only way the evils of trusts can be combatted is by an adherence to the home trade doctrine. It is nothing new. It was the sentiment that prompted the founders of our government to sound the clarion call of liberty from the summit of Bunker Hill. Then, it was the forcing of a people dependent on another government to pay an unjust tribute for necessaries of life. To-day it is one class of people of a nation, and the greatest nation on earth, to compel the other classes to pay unjust tribute in a commercial way. The wrong was righted by blood in the first case; the wrong can be righted in the present case by the people withholding their patronage from trusts, by merely exercising their prerogatives and the means that lie in their power to prevent the concentration of great wealth in the big financial centers by keeping their surplus earnings at home. It is the draining the dollars from the country to the large cities that results in building up the great combines, the great trusts, which are manipulated to the determent of the people of the country at large. It does not require special legislation for the farmer to buy flour made in his home mill; to use other products made in his county or state, to patronize the merchants of his home town.

Value of Good Roads.

Good roads leading to a town indicate the progressiveness of the citizens of the community. Invariably poor roads mean indifference and lack of confidence in the stability of the town.

TO THE FARMER-BOY.

His Chances Are Best in His Home Town Rather Than in the Big City.

My boy, the farm is all right. Sometimes you may feel that its environs are too narrow for you, its life too much of a humdrum, and that you would prefer to be one of the residents of the big city or town. There have been hundreds and thousands of others just like you, and with just such ideas. They have started from the farm buoyant with hope, and after years have regretted their youthful resolutions. Others have succeeded; have won laurels in the professional field, in business, in statesmanship; but the few who have succeeded thus are so small in number compared to the army of failures that there is little encouragement for the careful thinker to have that which promises security from want and independence for a life time. The farmer is surely the most independent of all workers. He is sure to receive a premium for his labors, is his own manager, and if he will strive diligently can aspire to a place in the public estimate that few can attain in the large towns.

Of course there are times when you think there is almost an unbearable dullness about existence on the farm. Were you a resident of the city, there would be times when you would long for the quietness and the pleasure that the farm affords. Hours of work may be long riding the plow, or harvesting the grain, but far superior is the work than that the great majority of the city workers are compelled to follow, and how much greater the compensation? How would you like to stand behind the dry goods or grocery counter from morning to night, for the small wages that the city clerk receives? Year after year the laborer lives in cheap boarding houses and rarely ever attempts to engage in business. His is a mere subsistence, and a constant struggle. The best years of life are wasted in making money for others, while the industrious farmer is working for himself, saving money year after year, and when the time for rest comes it enables him to take it.

Cities are overcrowded with clerk help. An advertisement inserted in any daily paper for a clerk to fill any position will bring hundreds of responses. The army of unemployed and those seeking to better their conditions is always large. Of late years a large element of workers from cities are looking toward the farms for employment. They realize that the farm offers more permanency of occupation and greater independence than the efforts in the city can possibly afford. Before you concentrate your attention on employment in city or town, weigh every matter well, and then act according to what reason dictates. You will be very likely to conclude that the farm is a good enough place for you, and that your own little home town is preferable to the over-crowded city. Remember that your greatest interests center in what you call your "home town." Do all you can to assist in its improvement, and make it a better business place.

D. M. CARR.

OPPOSED TO LOCAL PROGRESS.

Journals That Help to Concentrate Business in Large Cities.

There are thousands of so-called agricultural papers published in the United States, all of more or less merit. Yet few are all that they should be. There is an inconsistency about them that invites careful study. While they are supposed to represent the best interests of the great class of workers whom they gain support from in the way of subscriptions, the majority of the community work against the progress of farming communities by becoming the mediums, a part of the machinery, which draws from country towns the support which they should have.

It is to be regretted that many of these so-called agricultural papers are merely published for the purpose of securing the advertisements of concerns which seek to secure trade from residents of farming districts to the detriment of the home towns. These establishments take money from the rural communities to the large financial centers. The thoughtful man or woman can see how injurious it is to the interests of the farmers to take away the surplus earnings which represent the wealth of the community. It requires but little observation and study to understand that to a great extent farm values are dependent upon the importance of the towns and cities, and that any system that takes away its business, will result in a decrease of farm values. Such papers as advise the farmers to patronize other than home institutions and which advocate systems that are opposed to the up-building of industries in agricultural districts are not worthy of support.

Education.

Intelligence is the distinguishing mark between the savage and civilized man. Education is one of the greatest of God's blessings, and ignorance a curse. In America there are less no valid reason why every man, woman and child of normal brain should not have an education. There is no phase of life where knowledge is not necessary. In the most progressive communities is where the superior schools are found. Help along your town and help along education in general. By affording your children a chance for a good education, you offer them riches that cannot be destroyed; it is ready cash in hand, assets, that one cannot be robbed of only by act of Providence.

BEST EVER WRITTEN

PRESCRIPTION WHICH ANYONE CAN EASILY MIX.

Said to Promptly Overcome Kidney and Bladder Afflictions—Shake Simple Ingredients Well in Bottle.

Mix the following by shaking well in a bottle, and take in teaspoonful doses after meals and at bedtime:

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. A prominent physician is the authority that these simple, harmless ingredients can be obtained at nominal cost from any druggist even in the smaller towns.

The mixture is said to cleanse and strengthen the clogged and inactive Kidneys, overcoming Backache, Bladder weakness and Urinary trouble of all kinds, if taken before the stage of Bright's disease.

Those who have tried this say it positively overcomes pain in the back, clears the urine of sediment and regulates urination, especially at night, curing even the worst forms of bladder weakness.

Every man or woman here who feels that the kidneys are not strong or acting in a healthy manner should mix this prescription at home and give it a trial, as it is said to do wonders for many persons.

The Scranton (Pa.) Times was first to print this favorable prescription, in October, of 1906, since when all the leading newspapers of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and other cities have made many announcements of it to their readers.

Grieg as a Schoolboy.

Grieg was not a patient schoolboy. In a description of his school he wrote: "Knowing that by arriving late I would not be allowed to enter the class until the end of the first lesson, I used, on wet mornings, to stand under a dripping roof, until I was soaked to the skin. The master then sent me home to change my clothes, but the distance being long this was equivalent to giving me a dispensation. You may guess that I played this prank pretty often, but when at last I carried it so far as to come one day wet through, though it had hardly rained at all, they became suspicious, and kept a lookout. One fine day I was caught, and made an intimate acquaintance with the birch!"

Liquor She Floated In.

On their arrival in New Zealand, according to London Tit-Bits, a party of English people drank the health of the vessel with champagne brought for the occasion in their destination. One of the gentlemen who was asked to join in this ceremony replied: "No, I am a teetotaler; but I'll willingly drink success to the ship in the liquor she floats in." A friend disappeared and returned with a glass of whisky, which he handed to the apostrophe to the ship, the recipient tossed the water off at once, but immediately sputtered: "Ugh—ah—ugh—this—what on earth is this?" "That?" said his friend. "Why, you've drunk success to our noble ship in the identical liquor she floats in."

Terms That Seem Strange.

There are many puzzling differences between Scottish and English law terms. For instance, bankruptcy is in Scotland "an act of sequestration," a solicitor is either a "writer" or a "law agent," a document in a case is the "case debate," and asizes is the jury, a wrongdoer is a "delinquent," an idiot—in Scottish law—is "a fatuous person," a burglar is a "lockfast (with less Scottish caution) housebreaking with an aggravation." Finally, an author is, in Scotland, not a person who writes, but the under or seller of real property, from whom the title to it is derived.

Mutilate Art Treasures.

Authorities who have in charge some of England's ancient treasures try to discourage the habit of carving initials on these relics. A fine of $10 was recently imposed on a man who had chipped his name in letters six inches high on one of the stones in the "Druids' Circle" near Keswick. Close to the giant stone globe at Swanage a special slab is provided for the careless visitors to the Isle of Purbeck who are addicted to this self-advertisement. On popular Alpine summits names are left on cards in emptied wine bottles.

Will Not Supply Pigs.

Bacon curers are usually among the most prosperous firms in Belfast, but they have had to warn the farmers throughout the north not to fill the pigs until the strikes are settled, for it is impossible to handle the carcasses. Business has thus been diverted to other Irish bacon-curing centers, although the majority of farmers have simply resisted their pigs and are making no attempt to supply the market. Dublin bacon factories will thus profit.—London Standard.

But He Wasn't Hired.

Senator Frank B. Brandegee tells a story of a man who wanted to be a trolley car conductor. "This man looked hearty, portly and thrifty, and the manager of the car barns seemed to think well of him. After a number of questions the manager said: 'Well, what say do you drive?' The applicant gave a loud laugh. Then he dug the manager in the ribs and said: 'Oh, never mind about the pay, boss. Just give me the job and I'll have a car of my own in a week or two.'"—Kansas City Star.

REVISITS SCENE OF CRIME.

Thrilling Ghost Story Told by English Magazine.

This ghost story is contributed by a correspondent of an English magazine: "Wycollar hall, near Colne, was long the seat of the Cunliffes, of Billington. They were noted persons in their time, but evil days came, and their ancestral estates passed out of their hands. In the days of the commonwealth their loyalty cost them dear; and ultimately they retired to Wycollar with a remnant only of their once extensive property. About 1819 the last of the family passed away, and the hall is now a mass of ruins. Little but the antique fireplace remains entire, and even the room alludged to in the following legend cannot be identified. Tradition says that once every year a specter horseman visits Wycollar hall. He is attired in the costume of an early Stuart period, and the trappings of his horse are of a most uncouth description.

"On the evening of his visit the weather is always wild and tempestuous. There is no moon to light the lonely roads, and the residents of the district do not venture out of their cottages. When the wind howls loudest the horseman can be heard dashing up the road at full speed, and, after crossing the narrow bridge, he pulls up at the door of the hall. The rider then dismounts and makes his way up the broad oaken stairs into one of the rooms of the house. Dread, indeed, is the sight for a woman, are then heard, which soon subside into groans. The horseman then makes his appearance at the door, mounts his steed, and gallops off by the road he came.

"His body can be seen through by those who may chance to be present when his horse appears to be wild with rage, and its nostrils stream with fire. The tradition is that one of the Cunliffes murdered his wife in that room, and that the specter horseman is the ghost of the murderer, who is doomed to pay an annual visit to the home of his victim. She is said to have predicted the extinction of the family, which, according to the story, has been literally fulfilled."

The Fringe of Art.

Elihu Vedder, the noted painter, lives in Rome, where he has a beautiful apartment, and in Capri, where his white villa looks down on the sea.

"Elihu Vedder," said a New York illustrator the other day, "is as Bohemian as ever. Fame has not spoiled him. I visited him last year, and his Bohemian ways were delightful.

"You know they tell a story of a visit that he once paid to Alma Tadema in London, to Alma Tadema in that glittering house which Mrs. Alma Tadema manages so grandly, comforting cocoa, bought.

"The morning after his arrival, very early, before even the servants were up, Vedder began a thunderous knocking on his host's sandalwood door.

"Alma Tadema turned in his gold bed, threw back the lace coverlet, sat up.

"Who's there? What is it?" he cried in a startled voice.

"'I say, Tadema,' shouted Vedder, 'where do you keep the scissors that you trim your cuffs with?'"

Toothblacks.

"As we have bootblacks so they've got toothblacks in the Sunda islands," said a traveling man.

"What is a toothblack?"

"Don't you know? A toothblack is an old woman with a pot of black paint, a gold leaf book, and a lot of vegetables brushes. From her front passes, and for a small fee a yam, a bunch of bananas, three cocoanuts—she paints the Sunda islander's teeth a glistening black. Over the black teeth these she gilds. And the Sunda islander thereafter goes about with a self-conscious smile revealing a truly knockout dental display, in gold and gold symphony.

"It is a common trick among the semi-civilized to color the teeth. In Macassar, dark brown, the popular tint, and here among the linen-lightened classes, the teeth of wives are always painted black.

"If such countries the toothblack is an institution. She goes from house to house, as full of gossip as a barber."

The Dogsmith.

"The dogsmith will soon be busy in Alaska," said a miner of the Yukon. "He'll have his work cut out for him, too. The winter promises to be very severe.

"The dogsmith," the miner went on, "shoes, of course, dogs, or he wouldn't have such a name. The sledge dogs of Alaska's north get to be the toughest proposition. Their feet are as hard on the feet as broken glass, and hence were they not shod they would soon be so incurably lame that they'd have to be killed.

"Yes, there is a need for the dogsmith up there. A well shod dog can very nearly be a shoe made of wadding and leather."

Buttons for the Offertory.

A Sussex vicar complains that buttons find their way into his collecting-bags. Prebendary Carlile, of the Church Army, supplies buttons at St. Mary-at-Hill for that very purpose. "My people," he says, "come with hardly a rag to wear and nothing to eat, haven't even a button to spare, yet pride keeps them out if they cannot give to the offertory. So we go round the streets with our buttons before service and a friend of the Church Army redeems them at so much a dozen."—London Standard.

GEORGE KEPT HIM BUSY.

Matrimonial Engagements Seemed Always in Order.

A well-known Virginia clergyman, onetime president of William and Mary college, was married three times and on each occasion the ceremony was performed by his brother, an Episcopal bishop. When the first marriage took place, the bishop had to refuse a tempting invitation from an old friend because—in the letter ran—"I am going up to Williamsburg on that date to marry my brother George."

The same friend happened to be on the train with him, years afterward, when he was traveling to the second ceremony. "I am going to marry my brother George," the bishop explained, jestingly, after the business of greeting was over. Again many years passed, and the same journey was taken once more for the same purpose. By a strange co-incidence, the identical friend ran into the bishop as they hurried through the depot to their respective trains. "Where going bishop?" the former sang out as they grasped hands and dashed by each other.

"I am going where I am always going," the answer came back, ponderously, "to marry my brother George!"—Harper's Weekly.

Slight Misunderstanding.

They had been engaged just seventeen minutes by the clock, yet for the last three-seventeenth of that period there had been a proud, scornful look upon her fair face that was calculated to wither the orange blossoms.

"I can't imagine, dear," he said, sadly, "what has come over you so suddenly. I simply asked if you were romantic, when—"

"Oh, George, forgive me!" she exclaimed, with a convulsive sob, as she threw her arms about his neck, "I thought you asked me if I was rheumatic."

An Prayer for Rain.

The minister was having Sunday dinner with one of his brother parishioners. Suddenly the 5-year-old daughter of the house spoke up.

"Dr. Bill, will you please say the prayer for rain tonight, so it will pour tomorrow?" she urged.

"Why, dear?" asked the clergyman.

"Cause I have a dandy new umbrella and mackintosh," replied the eternal womanly.—Judge.

HER "BEST FRIEND."

A Woman Thus Speaks of Postum.

We usually consider our best friends those who treat us best.

Some persons think coffee a real friend, but watch it carefully awhile and observe that it is one of the meanest of all enemies for it stabs one while professing friendship.

Coffee contains a poisonous drug—caffeine—which injures the delicate nervous system and frequently sets up disease in one or more organs of the body, if its use is persisted in.

"I had heart palpitation and nervousness for four years and the doctor said the trouble was caused by coffee. He advised me to leave it off, but I thought I could not," writes a Wis. lady.

"On the advice of a friend I tried Postum Food Coffee and it so satisfied me that I did not care for coffee after a few days' trial of Postum.

"My weight by and I continued to use Postum my weight increased from 98 to 118 pounds, and the heart trouble left me. I have used it a year now, and my stronger than I ever was. I can hustle up stairs without any heart palpitation, and I am cured of nervousness."

"My children are very fond of Postum and it agrees with them. My sister liked it when she drank it at my house, but not when she made it at her own home. Now she has learned to make it right, boil it according to directions, and has become very fond of it. You may use my name if you wish, as I am not ashamed of praising my best friend—Postum."

"Jim, you gave me an awful scare," he said brokenly.

"Don't ever do it again. I have little left to live for. To be sure I have some feeling for mother, Fred, and sisters. But for you I have a love second only to that I should have felt for Beulah had I been allowed to have her. The thought, Jim, that I had wrecked your life, with all you have to live for, would have renewed Dante. My life is a purgatory, Beulah is only an ever-present curse to me—a ghost that rends my heart and soul, one minute with a blind fury to avenge her wrongs, the next with an icy remorse that I have not already done so. If I did not have her, perhaps in time I could forget, perhaps I might lay out some scheme to help poor devils whose poverty makes life unendurable, and with the millions I have taken from the main shaft of hell I might do things that would at least bring quiet to my soul; but it is impossible with the living corpse of Beulah Sands before me every minute and that devil machinery whirling in my brain all the time the song, 'Revenge, her and her father, reverence yourself.' It is impossible to give it up, Jim. I must have revenge. I must stop this machinery that is smashing up more American hearts and souls each year than all the rest of earth's grinders combined. Every day I delay I become more fiendish in my desires. Jim, don't think I do not know that I have literally turned into a fiend. Whenever of late I see myself in the mirror, I shudder. When I think of what I have been your father stood us up in his office and stunned us in this heart-shrivelling, soul-callousing business, and what I am now, I cannot keep the awful memories at bay except with rum. You know what it means for me to say this, me who started with all the pride of a Brownjay; but it is so, Jim. From the night I went home with my soul frozen with thoughts of the past and with my brain ablaze with revenge, intending to end it all. I got out my revolver, and woke Beulah, but as I said, 'Bob is going to kill Beulah and himself,' she laughed that sweet child's laugh and clapping her hands said, 'Bob is so good to play with Beulah,' and then I thought of that devil Reinhart and the other Sands' or the system' being left to continue their work unhindered and I could not do it. I must have revenge; I must smash that heart-crushing machine. Then I can go, and take Beulah with me. Now, Jim, let us have it clearly understood once and for all."

Recovered as he seemed to be, he was the Indian again. "I am going to wreck that hell-annex some day, and that some day will be the most terrible day this country has ever known, don't misunderstand me. To-day you stopped me. I don't know whether you meant what you threatened; I don't care now. It is just as well that I stopped, for the 'System's' machine will be there whenever I start in again. It loses nothing of its fiendishness, none of its destructive powers by grinding, but on the contrary, as you know, it increases its speed every day it runs. Now, Jim Randolph, I want to tell you that you must get yours and the house's affairs in such shape that you won't be hurt when I go into that human rat-pit the next time, for when I come from it the New York Stock Exchange and the 'System' will have had their spines disconnected. Yes, and I'll have their hearts out, too. Neither will ever be able to take from the American people their savings and their manhood and womanhood and give them in exchange unadulterated torment. I am going to be fair with you, Jim; this is the last time I will discuss the subject. After this you must take your chance with the rest of those who have to do with the cursed business. When a strike threatens, none will be spared. I will wreck 'the Street,' and the innocent will go down with the guilty, if they have any stocks on hand at that time."

"My power, Jim, is unlimited; nothing can stay it. I am not going to explain any further. You have seen me work. But one thing you never knew is greater than the 'System,' and you and I and 'the Street' have always known that the 'System' is more powerful than the government, more powerful than are all the courts, legislatures, congress, and the president of the United States combined, that it absolutely controls the foundation on which they rest—the money of the nation. But my power is greater, a thousand, yes, a million times greater than theirs. Jim, they say that I have made more money than any man in the world. They say that I have five hundred millions of dollars, but the fools don't keep track of my movements. They only know that I have pulled five hundred millions from out upon whirls, the ones they have had an opportunity to keep tab on. But I tell you that I have made even more than my estimate, that the amount they have seen me take. I have had my agents with my capital in every deal, every steal the 'System' has rigged up. The world has been throwing up its hands in horror because Carnegie, the blacksmith of Pittsburg, pulled off three hundred millions of dollars in the Steel hold-up—yes, swag, Jim. Don't scowl as though you wanted to read me a lecture on the coarseness of my language. I have learned to call this game of ours by its right name. It is not business enterprise with earned profits as results, but pulled-off tricks with bags of loot—black-jack swag—for their end.

"I got away with three hundred millions when Steel slumped from 106 to 38, and from 38 to 9, and no one knew I'd made a dollar. You and 'the Street' read every morning that year the 'guesses' as to who could be rounding up hundreds of millions on the slump. The papers and the market letters one morning said it was Rockefeller; then it was Frick, Schwab, Gates, and so on down through the list. Of course, none of them denied it. It is capital to all these knights of the road to be making millions in the minds of the world; even though they never get any of the money. Jack Pierpont and Jonathan Wild never were fonder of having the daring hold-ups that other highwaymen perpetrated credited to their names. Jack is the modern bandits of being credited with ruthless deeds, that they did not commit. But Jim, 'twas I who go in too, and with these was to unite that mother hog of them all, "Standard Oil" itself. The trust was to be an enormous company, the like of which had until then not even been dreamed of by the most daring stock manipulators. The "System's" banks, as well as trust and insurance companies throughout the country, had for a long time been getting into shape by concentrating the money of the country for this monster trust. It was newspaper and news bureau gossip that Reinhart and his crowd had bought millions of shares of the different stocks involved in the deal, and it was common knowledge that upon its successful completion Reinhart's fortune would be in the neighborhood of a billion. On October 1st the certificate of the Anti-People's Trust, $12,000,000,000 capital, 120,000,000 shares, were listed upon the New York, London, and Boston Stock Exchanges, and the German and French Bourses, and trading in them started off fast and furious at 106. The claim that one billion of the twelve billions capital had been set aside to be used in protecting and manipulating the stock in the market, had been so widely advertised that even the most daring plunger did not think of selling it short.

"It was evident to all in the stock-gambling world that this was to be the "System's" grand coup, that at its completion its masses would be ruddily awakened to a realization that their savings were invested in the combined American industries at vast, fictitious values, that the few had all the real money, and that any attempt upon the people's part to regulate and control the new system of robbery would be fraught with unparalleled disaster—not to the "System," but to the people.

Since Bob's return from Europe I had seen him but few times. Up to October 1st he had not been near the Stock Exchange or "the Street." Shortly after the listing of the "Peosold Pennsylvania every morning for a year, while the selling was explained away in the newspapers as a break down Gould's telegraph poles. Gould and old man Rockefeller selling Pennsylvania to get even.' Jim Randolph, you've got a billion dollars, not the Rockefeller or Carnegie kind, but a real billion. If I had no other power but the power to call to-morrow for that billion cash, it would be sufficient to tap the wires of the financial world before to-morrow night. You are welcome, Jim, to any part of that billion, and the more you take the happier you will make me, but when I strike in again, don't attempt to stay me, for it will do no good."

Shortly after that Bob left for Europe with Beulah. A great German expert on brain disorders had held out hope that a six month's treatment at his establishment in Berlin might aid in restoring her mind. They returned the following August. The trip had been fruitless.

When he left for Europe "the Street" was more lively, and as time went by and there was no sign of his confidence-disturbing influence in the market, the "System" began to bring out its deferred deals. Prices were ripe for setting up the most wildly inflated stock lamb-shearing traps, it had been advertised throughout the world that Tom Reinhart, now a two-hundred-time millionaire, was to consolidate his and many other enterprises into one gigantic trust with two billions of capital. His Union and Southern Pacific railroads, his Southern lines, together with his steamship company and lead, iron, and copper mines, were to be merged with the steel, traction, gas, and other enterprises he owned jointly with "Standard Oil." Some of the railroads owned by Rockefeller and his pals, in which Reinhart had no part, were to

TO CLEAN PILLOW COVERS.

By This Method Tinted Ones Will Not Be Harmed.

Boiled sofa pillow covers are among the most disgusting of house furnishings.

They certainly cannot be either decorative or useful.

It is a simple matter to do up washable sofa pillow tops, but one hesitates before attempting to clean the tinted ones.

However, they may be done up several times if the following method is used: Make a suds of tepid, not hot, water, and wash the cover rapidly by squeezing in the hands.

Rinse in tepid water and shake in the air until partly dry.

Place face down on a pad, cover with a thin, smooth piece of cotton cloth, and iron rapidly with a hot iron until perfectly dry.

If there are no grease spots or stains it may be dry-cleaned by ripping it apart, placing it right side up on a board, fastening it with thumb screws, and rubbing the surface with kneaded rubber until the cover is perfectly clean.

When cleaning the embroidery be very careful to move the rubber in the same direction as the stitches. A five-cent rubber will be large enough.

ONE WAY TO MEND CURTAINS.

Treatment That Will Make Them Appear Like New.

These curtains were of plain net with border on one side and bottom, and this one side was broken in holes through the border for about a foot above the window sill, says a writer in the Chicago Tribune. A piece of border of clean net to match the bottom carefully following the curves in the design, then, noticing the figure at the edge of the curtain, raised the border till it overlapped a corresponding figure in the side border, which, in this case, occurred at such a distance as to remove all the worn part. Then, with curtain still hanging at the window to insure proper adjustment, fasten border across with pins, remove from curtain pole, lay on flat surface, and baste carefully.

Stitch twice on machine, having tension loose enough not to draw the net, and using care in turning corners, raising the presser foot often. Remove and cut away the old part underneath, and press thoroughly. Then let the curtain hang which had been turned over at the top and rehung them and the mending does not show at all. My curtains are like new and still hang within three inches of the floor.

Mexican Salad.

Cut cold boiled ham, cooked chicken and cold boiled potatoes into fine shreds or Julienne. Take a cup of each and mix with a tablespoonful and a half of olive oil, a scant tablespoonful of vinegar, a teaspoonful of grated onion, also paprika and salt as needed. When thoroughly mixed set away to become cold and seasoned. In the meantime make ready a cup of shredded celery and one-third of a cup of sweet red pepper. When ready to serve mix the celery, pepper and seasoned ingredients with enough mayonnaise dressing to hold them together. Turn them onto a bed of lettuce leaves. Garnish with quarters of hard-boiled eggs and chopped whites and sifted yolk of egg. Miss Hill in Boston Cooking School, May 11.

Clear Lemon Pie.

Dissolve three tablespoonfuls of corn starch and stir in one and a half pints of boiling water until it thickens. Just before setting this aside to cool add the yolks of three beaten eggs. Grate the rinds and squeeze the juice of two lemons, stir with this one and one-half cupfuls of sugar. Before the corn starch is quite cold, add lemon and sugar. Line two pie plates with pastry, stick with a fork to prevent rising unevenly and bake. Fill with lemon mixture when cool. Cover with one inch meringue made of the whites of three eggs and sweetened. Brown lightly. Serve cold.

Oysters in Jelly Are Delicious.

It is essential in modern cookery that the food please the eye as well as the palate, says the September Delineator.

A dainty suggestion to this point was furnished at one of the late spring banquets, when each guest was served with an individual mold of aspic, in the center of which there were several appetising-looking oysters. The molds were of different shapes, and were served on beds of watercress, while the aspic had been generously flavored with lemon juice. The combination, therefore, was as tasty as it was attractive.

Apple Indian Pudding.

Two quarts of milk, put one in double boiler, one cup of corn meal, one-half cup flour. When the milk begins to boil, when all thickened, take off, put in a large baking dish, add one cup of molasses, one teaspoon of cinnamon, one-half nutmeg, one tablespoon salt, one egg, the other quart of milk. Pour in large sweet apples, chopped fine, cooked with one cup of water, at the same time you put on the milk. Now add all together and bake slowly about three hours and serve with whipped cream.

Pumpkin Filling.

Peel and cut the pumpkin into bits, put it over the fire, and stew as for pie. When soft strain through a colander, return to the fire, boil hard, and pour into heated cans, filling each to overflowing with the liquid. Stand upside down for two hours.

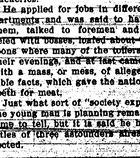
WOULD YOU BE IN STYLE? THEN HAVE A "SHADOW"

NEW YORK.—The very latest style in New York is to have a shadow, and there is scarcely a man of prominence in the city, especially in the great financial district, who is without one. While they are not at all times, these shadows are not those cast by the sun, but real detectives disguised in second-hand rock coats and false whiskers. Never before of his arch-political opponents have made themselves extremely obnoxious. It is also reported that Mayor McClellan is watched by the shadows of Hearst, and Wall street fairly swarms with them.

There is no reason why any shadow should be without a job. The number of private detective bureaus in the city has more than doubled in the last two or three years, and all are kept busy. The New Yorker who has not a shadow nowadays is accredited with little standing.



KNICKERBOCKER families still preside in aristocratic Fifth avenue, notwithstanding the influx of many multi-millionaires from almost every quarter of the globe, who have built palatial residences in the most beautiful thoroughfare in North America during the last decade.

All the talk about Fifth avenue being overrun by outsiders is without foundation, although the personnel of the city's best society is constantly changing. Records of Manhattan's 400 eligibles may have become 4,000 available, and the residents of Fifth avenue come from many states, as befits the cosmopolitan spirit of American life.

But the newer additions to society do not rule. They do not even predominate, because the New Yorkers of still own upper Fifth avenue, and some of the newcomers would be unable to break into their society with a good crowbar.

Next in power is the New York families of four or five generations' standing. Then come the children of New England and New York states, who came to Manhattan after the boom began in the city in the early thirties. When the Windsor, Metropolitan and other of the older hotels were the newer hotels, and apartment houses, by Central park west and the Riverside drive not behind. When the cross streets are considered they are found to offer the same conditions that existed in upper Fifth avenue in a concentrated form.

AUTHOR STUDIES HIGH SOCIETY FROM THE INSIDE

DISGUISED as a servant, Upton Sinclair, the author and socialist, has been absorbing local color for his forthcoming books by hiring himself out as a waiter in the rich at Newport, according to a report.

He is said to have found employment at "The Breakers," the seaside home of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, and to have worked several days until a fellow menial caught him recording observations in his notebook and reported him as a spy. His job ended, says the report, summarily dismissed.

Another of his experiences was on the Niagara, Howard Gould's yacht, he story goes. Sinclair is said to have had no difficulty in getting a job as steward for Mr. Gould. There he had opportunity to stuff the pages of his diary with material gathered to run a book press into the scrap heap. He is represented as having been a model butler, patient and willing, and please every whim of his wealthy employers.

MODEL SUNDAY SCHOOL TO INCREASE ATTENDANCE

At "The Breakers" he is said to have appeared well in livery, and to have passed the ices and opened carriage doors with the alacrity of one born to the place.

Sinclair has in the past made it a point to write from experience, he says. Before he brought out "The Jungle," he lived among the working folk of Packingtown, and managed to look into every corner of the big packing-house.

Before he applied for jobs in different departments and was said to have got them, talked to foremen and quarrymen in the Indiana limestone district, to those where many of the others spent their evenings, and at last came forth with a mass, or mess, of alleged horrible facts, which gave the nation long teeth for meat.

Just what sort of "society exposure" the young man is planning remains for time to tell, but it is said he has the titles of three splendors already selected.

A PUZZLE FROM LIFE.

The Late Warning Cry of Two Poor Wrecks. Do You Know?

There was a lady who from her youth up had many suitors; but as the years wore on they gradually fell from their allegiance, until one day she awoke to the fact that of all the many but two remained. This led to some earnest communing with her soul and caused her for the first time, seriously to consider the question of marriage.

"I am no longer as young as I was," she remarked to herself, "and although my friends are kind enough to call me charming, their very insistence goes to lead me to believe that I should decide at once which of my two remaining suitors I had better accept."

Then she pondered long and spent sleepless nights over the problem, but found it ever more difficult to solve.

Now, one of these suitors was a man of wide culture, with the world. He will view me as a rare and fragile bric-a-brac, whose touch must be shielded from every rude blast, every varying change of temperature. The sun must not shine too strongly upon me nor the wind blow too keenly. He appeals to my feminine sense of dependence and he my love of being loved; but, and she shook her head soberly, there is no use disguising the fact that his excessive care to me will prove a bore.

He will always be solicitous to see that I wear my rubbers when it is damp underfoot. He will insist on deciding for me all the questions of life, whether trivial or important, what books I shall read, what pictures I shall adore and, probably, what breakfast food I shall eat. Within two years I shall be a pampered nonentity without power to will or act in defiance of my own.

Now, I must weigh Jack in the balance. He is a dear, lovable fellow, a charming talker and companion, but with as little sense of responsibility as a kitten. He appeals strongly to my maternal instinct. I feel that he needs my affection and, in a measure, my guidance; but I cannot deceive myself: I shall have to bear the brunt of everything. Gentle and unassuming, and grapple with all the problems that would come to me in our mutual experience, he demands of me the same gentleness and meek submission. Together we would be of storm and stress he would be as a broken reed. And so in the wreck of he would be a needless agent with no chance to let my individuality express and develop, for I should be the head of the house.

Shaw Not a Gourmand.

George Bernard Shaw, critic, dramatist and novelist, asserts that he has no more bones finished than a small cat at a railway station. He admits, however, that he has an address at 10 Adelphia terrace, London. "The gourmets," he explains, "confine themselves to the real center of my domestic life, because my wife lives there. My mother lives there. I live somewhere. He says that any place from will hole a bed and a writing table is an characteristic of him he can do at one of the Socialist conferences, when the delegates assembled after lunch, the well-known writer came in, rubbing his hands and giving thanks for the excellent dinner he had just had. Some one asked him what he had for dinner. "Ah!" replied Mr. Shaw, with all the serenity of a well-fed man, "I've had seven bananas!"

Mourning Vegetables.

"Mourning is not what it used to be," said an undertaker. "In fact, I expect to see it go out altogether in the next century or so. Perhaps it is just as well. No young widow, I've heard say, can wear mourning without looking like an adventuress.

"Back in the seventeenth century widows not only wore mourning, but their bed curtains were black and the cheese and pilau cases had a black border, like mourners. Even their tailors had a mourning band.

"In Italy the nobles of the Renaissance carried their mourning as far as their knives and forks, which are ebony instead of ivory handles.

"Gray cloth superceded black for mourning in the eighteenth century, Mrs. Easton Lloyd about twenty years. Then it died out, as it had sprung up, mysteriously."

The Swan Song.

The nature writer, Dr. William J. Long, the nature writer, "is always harmful. A striking instance of this occurred not long since at the zoo. You know the old nature fake about the swan—how this beautiful bird, silent all its days, bursts when dying into the sweetest song? Well, at a zoo one day a keeper saw a boy standing behind a swan with a feather in his hand.

"'Here,' said the keeper, 'what are you going to do there?'

"'Ah, lemme alone,' snarled the boy. 'I wanter hear him sing.'

Nice of Tom.

"Yes," she said, "I always like to say nice things about people."

"That's her friend replied, "he seems so stupid. He hardly ever says anything."

"I know. Still, I can sit and tell him my troubles by the hour and he never lets me know by word or sign that he is being bored."

QUEER POWER EXERCISED BY "HORSE WHISPERERS."

Authentic Cases of Recent Where the Most Unruly Beasts Have Been Made Tractable By a Few Words.

The horse whisperers might be an unknown quantity in England and Ireland to-day, but there are not a few men who exercise a wonderful control with their voices over horses which, when the dominating influence is absent, are apt to literally kick over the traces. says a writer in the London Stock Journal. In the thoroughbred stables of England and Ireland to-day there are not a few gentlemen and jockeys who, steeped in holding in check the vice in horses which is demonstrative manner show that they can control the presence of the grooms or attendants.

The horse whisperer of to-day avoids all gesticulation, and treats entirely to a combination of sounds or words. There is no bullying done, and the whisperer can face a mad horse with his hands behind his back and apparently at the mercy of the beast that has to come under the charm. One means of keeping remount horses quiet in shelling during the South African war was that employed by the yeomen, who sat in a ring of head-to-head horses singing as loudly as possible and resting the ears and attention of the otherwise sprawling and hungry animals.

One of the first whisperers to attract public power was Con Sullivan, who migrated in his youth from Killmallock, where he could trace his genealogy through a long line of stable lads, to become almost exclusively employed by Lord Rosebery.

So unaccountable and so magical was the power Sullivan instantly acquired over the most savage brute that his parish priest, who had excellent grounds for not believing him a saint, denounced him as a sorcerer. The whisperer of this man made an indelible impression upon any horse, bringing the pupil to a degree of docility unattainable in the ordinary course of discipline.

Sullivan was soon found, and he was delighted with the opportunity of "whuishperin' before so much 'quality' from all parts." Show us the wife baste," he said, "and we'll soon tache him manners."

When he got within the circle—and a wide one it was—in which King Pepin was playing his antics, he walked up to him, approaching the horse from behind. He mumbled some words as he walked, which, though not quite audible, were as unintelligible as a sermon in the unknown tongue, but they had a most magical effect on the horse, for he stood stock still. Sullivan then patted him on the neck, while he whispered a word or two in his ear, whereupon King Pepin went on his knees and incontinently lay down.

The whisperer then stretched himself on him at full length, took out a pouch containing a pipe and tobacco, flint and steel, struck a light and blew a cloud, as he lounged on the stomach of this high mettled colt with as much composure as if he were seated on a bench in his favorite tap room. After two or three puffs he got up, beckoned the rug to his feet, unbridled him and walked off to the astonishment of the lookers following and fawning upon him like a dog. He was the race is a ranter.

Brave Leader of Arabs.

Most romantic of all the figures brought into the limelight by the troubles in Morocco is the "red raid," a native leader who has ridden at the head of his men in many a gallant charge against the French. A correspondent says of him: "His native name is Raisuli el Hemeri, Hemeri meaning red. He belongs to the Mdkra tribe, near Casablanca. He derives his name from the fact that he always dresses in red. The raid is paralyzed in both hands and cannot shoot, but he is very brave for his gallantry in leading and urging his men. He is said to possess a talisman rendering him bullet proof."

WITH THE JACKASS BATTERY.

Men and Mules Required for Work in the Mountains.

One of the most interesting organizations which took part in the manoeuvers at Camp Tacoma, Washington, of western troops under Gen. Frederick Funston was the 11th battalion, field artillery, Maj. C. A. Bennett commanding.

The battalion consisted of the seventeenth and eighteenth batteries, sometimes referred to as "jackass" batteries, says Leslie's Weekly, because of the use of mules. The battery pieces are transported in sections on the backs of mules, the guns and carriages being divided into four parts, making four packs for the same number of animals.

This enables the batteries to be transported through the most difficult regions accessible to troops, and the moment one can be brought into action in mountainous country. In the United States army these batteries are comparatively new, but they received their baptism in the Philippines and have proved their practical value in many skirmishes upon the cotton and forts of the Moros.

It is surprising how rapidly the mules are unloaded, the parts of the gun thrown together and the gun loaded, sighted and ready to be fired. At a test of the eighteenth battery the men ran the mules back fifty paces, unloaded and assembled the gun and fired in 45 seconds. This was a world's record.

The work requires not only intelligent but powerful men. The gun itself weighs 56 pounds and the trail the same, but the men handle the pieces with ease.

The mules, too, are familiar with the drill and perform their parts in a very intelligent manner. They know their respective positions, and when the load is lifted they immediately jump forward, so the piece can be placed directly on the ground.

The gun used in these batteries has a range of from 5,600 to 4,000 feet. It fires a large shell, but has a lower velocity than the larger field pieces. In design the piece is somewhat similar to the "new" gun of the British army.

Sympathetic Hearts.

"It's dreadful the way the cost of living has gone up. The price of decency has increased so, my husband found where he went to get me that necklace he had promised me, that he can't afford it at all this year."

"Yes, it is certainly hard. I wonder how poor people manage to live."

The Whole Thing.

"It's called a 'loving cup,' you say? Well what a big cup it is!"

"The real punch and things like that."

"But why is it called a loving cup?"

"Because its for people loving from lunch and things like that."

MANOAH B. REESE ELECTED BY LARGE MAJORITY.

FIGURES MAY REACH 25,000

Late Returns Increases His Lead, and Indicate that a Heavier Vote Was Polled Than That of Two Years Ago.

The latest returns available from the recent election indicate that Reese's plurality has been increased. The last returns were from the eastern part of the state and showed a slight falling off from the majority of Letton two years ago, which was 2,215. In the western part of the state, however, this condition was reversed and in the sixty-seven counties reported to date Reese has a plurality of 919 greater than Letton in the same counties. The twenty-three counties remaining from which only partial returns have been received will not, in all probability, change the relative figures to any great extent.

NEBRASKA CITYANS GLAD.

Say They Owe Food Commissioner Johnson a Debt of Gratitude.

A letter written by a citizen of Nebraska City, who did not care to sign his name, states that the people of his town owe Food Commissioner Johnson a debt of gratitude for causing people they are to obey the law requiring milk sold to contain a certain per cent of butter fat. He adds that another debt will be due if his department can see its way clear to stop the sale of rotten eggs. The writer says that three women of Nebraska City recently bought eggs at grocery stores and that of the eggs turned out to be bad. The food law is interpreted by the food department as being broad enough to cover the egg question or any food that is unwholesome or decayed.

Food Commissioner Johnson reports that Inspector Berkhoff took state samples of milk, ice cream and cream at Nebraska City. These were analyzed and showed a very high average. Milk averaged 3.9 per cent, the legal requirement being 3 per cent; ice cream, 17.4 per cent, the legal requirement being 14 per cent; sweet cream, 20.6 per cent, the legal requirement being 18 per cent.

HURT AT GRADE CROSSING.

Several Fremont Persons Seriously Hurt by Being Run Down.

At Fremont, Thomas and Jennie Hicks, and William Edwards were seriously hurt, and Ada Hicks, Mrs. Harry Hicks and a two-year-old daughter were badly shaken up in a grade crossing accident. Thos. Hicks was driving into town with a carriage full when a switch engine struck the vehicle, totally demolishing it and throwing the occupants out. They were rushed to the hospital. Jennie Hicks was so seriously hurt that death may ensue.

FREMONT BOY SHOT HIMSELF.

Was Hunting with Target Rifle When Accident Happened.

Richard Bash, aged ten years, son of Mrs. Geneva Bash of 85 East Eighth street, Fremont, accidentally shot himself with a small rifle while hunting on the bridge island in the Platte river. He sat down to eat his lunch when in some manner he pulled the trigger. He managed to make his way to the wagon road and called to two ladies who were passing by in a buggy. They took him to Fremont and to a physician's office.

Must Obey Fire Escape Law.

Commissioner Ryder has written a letter to architects calling their attention to the fire escape law and pointing out that some fire escapes have not been constructed in compliance with the law of Nebraska. Fault is found mostly with the material and workmanship of the manufacturer, but the architects are asked to see their plans are followed. The law observed in the matter of buildings which they plan and construct. The labor commissioner states that if the escapes do not suit his approval the owner of buildings may be put to considerable trouble. It is therefore important to owners that the law be complied with.

New Creamery for Kearney.

Kearney is to have a new creamery. The other day H. M. DeWitt of Denver was in the city and looked the ground over with a view to starting a creamery and after doing so found the location a desirable one. Before he left town he closed a deal with W. H. Rice for the lease of the cement stone building now under construction on Fifth avenue and left orders that it be completed and ready for occupancy as soon as possible. While there Mr. DeWitt stated that as soon as the building can be completed machinery will be installed for an up to date creamery plant and that it would be ready to run early the coming year.

Narrow Escape from Death.

Thomas Finigan, an employe of the Nebraska City steam laundry, had a narrow escape from death. His clothing caught in some of the fast revolving machinery and he was whirled around a shaft some forty times before the engine could be stopped. All of his clothing was stripped from his body. He was badly bruised, but no bones were broken. He will be confined to his bed for some time.

Students Reach Agreement.

At Peru at a recent convocation the students took important action regarding the use of library reference books. Several students had formed the practice of hiding books in the library so that only themselves and their friends had access to the references. Every one of the six hundred students pledged himself never to engage in the practice and to use his influence against others engaging in it hereafter.

Mr. Bennett Appointed.

George D. Bennett, secretary of the state board of conciliation, has been appointed by the governor delegate from Nebraska to the national conference on uniform local taxation to be held at Columbus, Ohio, November 12 to 15. Prof. G. W. Langworthy Taylor of the state university will attend this meeting and read a paper.

Mrs. Elizabeth Eberly, aged seventy-three years, was found dead in her bed at Arborville.

Kansas Rate Hearing November 19.

The hearing before the board of railroad commissioners regarding the new maximum freight rates schedule which the board purposes to put into effect probably will begin Nov. 19.

Alleged Horsethief Caught.

Sheriff J. M. Babb of Fullerton, Neb., went to Dakota City and got John Hendricks, alias John Wilson, alias John Henry, who was arrested in Dakota City by Sheriff H. C. Hanson, having in his custody a team of horses and a colt from the pasture of Sar. Holcomb Lamb, near Fullerton, and a saddle and bridle belonging to John James, near Missouri Valley, Ia. Hendricks was traced by Sheriff E. C. Rock, of Logan, Ia., and Wm. Neufeld, liveryman at Missouri Valley, who effected his capture.

JOHNSON BY 5,000.

Best Burton Can Do Is to Cut Down His Majority.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 5.—Mayor Tom L. Johnson was today elected for the fourth time as mayor of Cleveland in a hard fought battle, in which the republican ticket was headed by Congressman Theodore E. Burton, chairman of the house committee on rivers and harbors. At midnight Chairman Baker of the republican committee conceded the election of Johnson by 5,000 plurality. At the Johnson headquarters his majority is placed at a higher figure and the election of the entire democratic ticket is indicated by 5,000 or more. The democrats elected a majority of the councilmen.

San Francisco.

San Francisco, Nov. 6.—At 1 o'clock this morning a totaling of the returns indicates the election of almost the entire good government city and county tickets, including the mayor, district attorney, board of supervisors, treasurer, assessor, collector, recorder, city attorney, public administrator, sheriff, coroner and two police judges. The union labor party may have saved its head in the race for offices of auditor and county clerk.

On a basis of a 10 per cent count of the votes in 1904 of the 273 precincts, with the Mission district largely to be heard from, Mayor Taylor's plurality over the union labor candidate, P. H. McCarthy, should approximate 9,000. District Attorney Langdon's plurality over McGowan, the union labor nominee, is 18,000, with Ryan, republican, running a poor third in the mayoralty race. It is not unlikely that the full count of all the precincts, which may not be completed before a late hour today, will materially change the apparent results.

Massachusetts.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 5.—The republicans won a sweeping victory in today's election, re-electing Governor Guild, and all other state officers. The republicans will have their usual majority in both branches of the legislature. The state officers elected:

Governor—Curtis Guild, Jr., of Boston.

Lieutenant Governor—Eben S. Draper of Hopedale.

Secretary of State—William Olin of Boston.

Treasurer—Arthur D. Chapin of Holyoke.

Auditor—H. E. Turner of Malden.

Attorney General—Dana Malone of Greenfield.

SUMMARY OF ELECTIONS.

Condensed Returns From All Over the Country.

New York, Nov. 6.—Elections held throughout the country today passed off comparatively quiet. The returns from various sections shows the following results:

Massachusetts re-elects the entire state ticket headed by Gov. Curtis Guild, Jr. Henry M. Whitney, the citizens' democratic candidate for governor, polled a heavier vote than Charles W. Bartlett, the anti-merger democrat.

Pennsylvania elects John O. Sheatz, republican, head of the ticket for state treasurer, by a large majority.

New York state elects Edward T. Bartlett and Willard Bartlett, joint candidate on the democratic and republican tickets for justices for the supreme court over the candidates of the independence league (Hearst). New York city elects the Tammany candidates by a considerable majority over the independence league-fusion candidates.

New Jersey is claimed by both sides. The early reports indicated a pluarity for Governor-elect Stokes, democratic candidate for governor, but later returns show John Franklin, republican, making large gains.

The Rhode Island returns indicate the re-election of Governor James H. Higgins, democrat, over R. H. Jackson, republican, by a plurality of about 1,500, showing a democratic gain from the plurality of last year.

In Kentucky, Wilson, republican candidate for governor, is making gains, but there is doubt as to his overcoming the democrat majority of 1903.

In Mississippi the election of Noel, democratic candidate for governor, is assured, as he had no opposition.

At San Francisco the union labor candidate is showing unexpected strength.

At Salt Lake City, the American, or anti-Mormon party is leading.

At Toledo, Mayor Whitlock is re-elected.

No Election Returns.

No Philippine election returns are in yet, but it is believed that a majority of the independent candidates have been elected. The vote is reported to have been very heavy.

Actor Under Arrest.

M. B. Curtis, formerly a well known actor, was taken to New York from Wilmington, Del., where he was arrested on a charge of grand larceny. The complainant is Marcilla Marstellar's sister, who claims that she gave Curtis $500 with which to purchase scenery for a theatrical production for her, but she charges that the scenery has never been purchased. Curtis years ago made a fortune on the stage but failed to spend most of it to free himself from the charge of murdering a policeman in San Francisco.

Petition in Bankruptcy.

Karl B. Pomeroy, of Chicago, capitalist, has filed a petition in bankruptcy. Liabilities, $202,000; assets, 903,000. The amount of the assets is the par value of securities which Dumont declares are now worthless.

KICK ON THE WEST

NEW YORK BANKS DECLARE IT IS TOO INSISTENT.

BIG DEMAND FOR CURRENCY

Admit They Owe the Money And Are Trying to Pay. Hope Creditors in Western States Will Show A Little Patience.

The leading New York banks are exerting themselves actively to meet the demands of their country correspondents and depositors for currency. They declare that the suggestions made from several western sources that they are not meeting legitimate demands for currency from the west are entirely unfounded and that they are, on the contrary, taking every practicable measure to aid the west and south. One of these large banks, with several thousand correspondents, has depleted its reserve by about a quarter during the last few weeks to supply currency where it most needed, and has made large shipments to banks in San Antonio, Galveston, Memphis, Mobile, Atlanta and other southern points. Other country banks have been allowed to draw down their balances to a point which affords in many cases hardly more than enough to meet the drafts sold in the ordinary course of business. They have bought paper for rediscount for their New York correspondents in large amounts and the principal difficulty of the New York banks has come from the demand for currency to be shipped against the balance created by these rediscounts.

HER GOLD PILE GETTING LOW.

Europe Is Fighting Hard to Keep Yellow Metal at Home.

The contest of the European money markets to retain their gold resources was indicated the latter part of last week by the simultaneous action of four of the large central banks of Europe. The Bank of England advanced its rate or discount from 6 to 7 per cent, a rate which has not been reached since 1873. The Bank of France made an advance in its regular discount rate from 3½ to 4 per cent, and fixed the rate for loans on securities at 4½ per cent. The National Bank of Belgium advanced its rate of discount from 3½ per cent to 6 per cent, and Dr. Koch, the governor of the Imperial Bank of Germany called a meeting of the board of governors and raised the rate to 7½ per cent, the highest ever known.

These movements are regarded as an indication of the ability of New York to command gold and the efforts of the European banks to protect themselves against this demand.

SMASHES HER BEST RECORD.

Steamer Lusitania Cuts Down Her Time Another Notch.

The marvellous record established less than a month ago by the giant turbine Cunarder Lusitania, when she cut several hours from the passage time across the Atlantic already has been broken. The Lusitania still retains the title of queen of the seas, as it was she herself that established the new low mark and incidentally she added several new records to her credit. These include the best single day's run—618 knots, made November 6, an average of more than 600 knots for every full day and an average speed of 24.25 knots for the full 2,781 miles.

On her last voyage the Lusitania covered the distance in four days, nineteen hours and fifty-two minutes. The voyage ended Nov. 8, over the same course, was completed in four days, eighteen hours and forty minutes, thus clipping one hour and nine minutes from the previous low mark.

SUPERIOR ELEVATORS AFIRE.

Big Los of Stored Wheat Follows Conflagration.

Fire Nov. 8 of an unknown origin caused the destruction of the Great Northern elevator "A" in Superior, Wis., together with six hundred thousand bushels of grain, principally wheat, all of which was fully covered by insurance. The elevator was owned by the Great Northern railroad, but was leased to the A. D. Thompson & Co. company of Duluth. The sparks from the Grand Republic mill on Tower avenue, the Great Lakes Dredge company dock and the Duluth-Superior Storage company, which contained the finishing plant of the Webster Chair company. At midnight it looked as though it would be completely demolished, entailing an estimated aggregate loss of two million dollars.

New Building is Offered.

Alfred Gwinne Vanderbilt has offered the Newport, R. I., Y. M. C. A. a new building to be erected as a memorial to his father, the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, at a cost of $100,000. The offer was accepted.

CROPS TO START

MONEY FOR THE MOVEMENT GOING TO NORTHWEST.

NEW YORK WILL CONTRIBUTE

Strain About Over and Cash to Flow Outward.—Runs on the Two Trust Companies Have Practically Come to an End.

Now that the momentary strain has been lessened locally, the New York banks began preparing November 6 to ship all available currency to the northwest in aid of the movement of the crops. While there is concerted action among the city's banking institutions to meet the demands for currency now being made by banks in the crop country, the individual banks will send all funds that can possibly be spared for the purpose. Estimates of the combined amounts that the many banks will send the northwest within the next six weeks vary. The Chase National bank and the First National bank have commenced to ship daily sums ranging from $25,000 to $50,000 to banks along the route of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads. James J. Hill held a conference with the officers of the Chase National bank and other institutions at which he stated that he asked the northwest be given all possible assistance to move the crops. Mr. Hill was informed that while the local banks could not furnish the usual amount of money for crop moving purposes, they were anxious to do all they could to expedite the speed of cereals to the sea board, whence they could be sent abroad and thereby strengthen this country's position in the foreign money markets.

Find New Quarters.

A Sioux City, Ia., Nov. 6 dispatch says: By courtesy the Journal mechanical and editorial force, which was burned out in a fire Wednesday, took possession of the Tribune plant upon invitation of John C. Kelly, proprietor of the Tribune, and the Journal will be issued from the Tribune press. For the present there will be no afternoon edition of the Journal. The fire was started by a newsboy who struck a match in the mailing room to find a lost dog. The Journal ordered from Chicago six new linotype machines of modern make. It is not expected the Journal will be out before it is not known as yet whether or not the big $20,000 press is fit for use.

Banker Is Sent to Prison.

Dr. F. J. Tygard, president of the Bates National bank of Butler, Mo., when it failed September 20, 1906, was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary by Judge McPherson, in the federal court. The conviction was on the charge of misusing the funds of the bank. Dr. Tygard, known as Captain Tygard, is past seventy years old and is practically paralyzed. He pleaded guilty to the charges and was given the maximum sentence.

Judge McPherson intimated that if application was made for pardon it might be favorably considered on account of the prisoner's age and physical condition.

Nebraska Man Inventor.

The Thomas Cement Construction company of Rockdale, a suburb of Joliet, Ill., is exploiting a cement block process machine patented by O. E. Thomas, head of the Nebraska normal at Peru. The company is incorporated in Delaware with $100,000 capital, largely subscribed by Joliet men who believe the process will be immensely profitable. The blocks made by this process are waterproof.

London Strike is Settled.

Richard Bell, M. P., has announced that the railroad dispute has been settled. The details of the settlement, however, had not been given out up to a late hour. It was understood at the conclusion of negotiations that the danger of a strike had been averted. The terms are satisfactory to both sides.

Will Postpone His Visit.

The Spanish newspapers declare that King Alfonso, desiring to spare the aged emperor of Austria-Hungary the fatigue incidental to the reception of a royal visitor, has decided not to go to Vienna during the convalescence of Francis Joseph, but to postpone his visit until 1908.

Divide a Big Estate.

An estate of approximately $4,000,000 was disposed of in the will of the late J. S. Polk, capitalist and street railway promoter, which was filed in Des Moines, Ia. The large property is equally divided among the widow and four children.

Use Dynamite on the Safe.

A telephone to Sheriff Robert Myers, of Guthrie, Okl., from Marshal, Okl., stated that robbers used dynamite on the safe of the Farmers' state bank, securing all the money and other valuable papers in the vault.

Strikers Enjoined.

Federal Judge Reed at Dubuque, Ia., granted an injunction against the Chicago Great Western railway a temporary injunction restraining Oelwin strikers and unions from interfering in any manner with the company's property or employes.

NEED MONEY TO MOVE GRAIN.

Millions of Bushels in Northwest Awaiting Shipment.

Senator Hansbrough of Grand Forks, North Dakota, sent the following telegram to President Roosevelt:

"Fully 150,000,000 bushels of grain now ready to be marketed in the two Dakotas and Minnesota and there is no money with which to do it. The necessities of the northwest are, therefore, much greater than in any other section of the country, demanding the fullest consideration at the hands of the treasury department. Ten million dollars placed in twin city banks would raise the embargo and start grain shipments to Europe. This would relieve the financial stress in the east much quicker than a deposit of treasury funds in New York. Treasury relief operations should have been begun here, where the congestion is greatest. Our people are not losing their heads. They have no fear of a panic, but in this crop-moving season our business men should have special consideration."

GIVEN EXHAUSTIVE TESTS.

Ordnance Devices Undergo Careful Examination.

Guns, armor plate, range finders, disappearing carriage and all sorts of miscellaneous ordnance devices were subjected to exhaustive tests during the fiscal year by the board of ordnance and fortification, says a Washington, D. C., dispatch. The operations of the board consisted in the main, however, of the supervision of work previously undertaken such as the continuation of the Sandy Hook proving ground and the secondary armor of battleships to determine their resistances to projectiles of various sorts fired at different angles of impact.

The increasing importance of searchlights in warfare also has induced allotments for several experiments with the object of improving this necessary auxiliary.

AN AIRSHIP FOR THE ARMY.

Site to Be Selected in St. Louis for Its Manufacture.

T. C. Mars of the American Airship and Balloon company of New York, arrived in St. Louis from Washington to select a site the aerodrome company will use for the construction of an air craft, and in which the largest airship ever built in the United States for the government will be erected. The airship will cost the government $10,000 and will be modeled after the Beachy, shown here in the recent aeronautic contest. According to the plans it will carry two men and will be capable of a speed of twenty-five miles an hour. A fifty-horse-power engine will furnish motive power. A light gun will be mounted in the frame work.

Refuses to Reveal Identity.

Rather than reveal the identity of the politician who indicted him to the number of ten in two election districts in New York city, Joseph Healey accepted a sentence of not less than four years and six months and not more than five years and eleven months in prison.

Man and Wife Murdered.

Raffle Ruffano, and his wife, Antonette, were murdered at Garfield, N. J. A neighbor found the woman's body on the walk in front of the grocery store, which the couple owned. In the kitchen back of the store Ruffano's body was found lying on the floor.

Fire Loss of $200,000.

Fire which broke out in the Olmstead excelsior works at Lockport, N. Y., destroyed that building, the five-story mills of the Franklin Milling company across the street and Hobey's cost trestle. The loss is estimated at $200,000.

FINE PEANUT CANDY

RECIPE THAT IS USED BY THE CHINESE.

Orientals Know Well How to Make This Favorite Confection—Delicious When Prepared at Home —The Pecan Pralines.

There is no peanut candy better than that made by the Chinese. The sugar and water are not boiled to the "crack," but to the "ball" degree evidently. A slight flavor of lemon peel may be given. The peanuts are added and the soft mass turned into a receptacle which contains a clean layer of little white sesame seeds. More seeds are scattered over the top, and these adhere to the hot candy. When cool it is cut in squares or diamonds with a very sharp knife, for if a knife be dragged over it the candy would pull out of shape.

Peanut Candy.—A homemade peanut candy may be made from three pounds of sugar and a pound and a half of peanuts. Allow one pint of water for the sugar and boil it. As soon as it comes to a boil put in the peanuts and a large teaspoonful of pure cream of tartar. Have a very moderate fire and let it cook until when you lift the wooden spatula you use for candy-making the nuts and syrup will run off easily from it. Have a baking pan well oiled and buttered. When about cold invert the pan and let the sheet of candy fall upon the table. Turn it over and with a sharp knife cut in long strips, or if not so particular, just break it smartly and break it into irregular pieces. Some nuts may be so used.

Pecan Pralines.—Pecan nuts should be made into pralines with brown sugar. Choose the best dark brown sugar and boil it with a little water until it spins a thread. Then put in the nuts and turn into rings, or drop in circles the size of a cooky on paper. If they do not come off easily, a little moistening of the paper on the reverse side will make them loosen.

If you have an old-fashioned grocer who has always confessed he keeps sugar in the sugar barrel, you may be sure his molasses in the good old way is not easily had since sugar mills and trusts came into vogue and rapid methods have driven out old slow ways. People get syrup in cans and molasses does not play the part it once did. Sorghum will not answer for the old recipes in confectionery or ginger bread or steamed puddings.

Cocoanut, when shredded, or brazil nut sliced may be added to white sugar pralines. Boil the sugar and water until it will spin a thread and may be cooled and stirred until it will drop out a creamy mass, but not so stiff but that it will spread easily, and cool in firm cakes.

White Mountain Pudding.

One pint sweet cream, whipped to stiff froth; one cup granulated sugar, boiled until it threads; one cup mixed nuts chopped fine, two ounces candied cherries, one small can sliced pineapples, whites of four eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Pour the syrup over the beaten eggs, then add these to the whipped cream, also the fruit, cut into small pieces, and nuts. Pack in ice and salt to ripen about eight or ten hours. It can be served with or without the following sauce: Yolks of two eggs, over which pour gradually the syrup made as above, with one cup of sugar, juice of one lemon and grated rind of one lemon; also three large bananas, mashed. Serve cold over the pudding.

Sauce for Desserts.

A plain vanilla ice cream, a corn starch pudding, or a minute tapioca becomes a fine dessert when served with chocolate custard sauce. Beat one egg with one-fourth cup sugar until well incorporated, add a pinch of salt and one cupful hot milk, beating constantly to prevent the egg cooking; melt one-fourth ounce chocolate and one tablespoonful sugar with two tablespoonfuls hot water in basin of hot water until it becomes glossy; then add to the milk and eggs and cook in double boiler until custard coats the spoon; when cool add one-fourth teaspoonful ground cinnamon.

Improved Mush.

To improve the flavor and quality of grated or ground mush beat sifted meal on a shallow pan or two pans, if necessary, in a moderate oven till it is deliciously parched, yet not scorched brown or the least blackened. Then stir into boiling water-salted, evidently salted. This is less liable to be lumpy or pasty; also cooks sooner than raw meal.

How to Clean Silver.

The best way to clean silver is to dissolve a lump of soda the size of an egg in a gallon of water; bring it to a boil; Put the silver in a saucepan, well covered with water; boil for ten minutes. Remove the silver and rub with a soft cloth. Do not use polish after.

Bride Cake.

One cup sugar, one-fourth cup butter, creamed together, one-half cup cold water, one and one-half cups flour, one-half teaspoon soda, one teaspoon cream tartar. Last add beaten whites of two eggs and one teaspoon vanilla. Beat all two minutes before baking.

Quince Syrup.

To one pint of quince juice, made as for making jelly, add one pint of sugar; boil to a thick syrup, but not enough to jelly; strain and seal in bottles. Good with buckwheat cakes.

TIED TO A CHAIR.

Unable to Move About On Account of Kidney Troubles.

Mrs. Anna Beebe, River and Monroe Sts., Adona, Minn., says: "I had to sit in a chair day after day unable to move about on account of rheumatic pains in my back, hips and legs. I was short of breath and my heart would flutter after the least exertion. I had dizzy spells and bearing down pains and the kidney secretions were much disordered. I thought I would not live long, but since using Doan's Kidney Pills I am a different woman, can do my own work and have no fear of those troubles returning."

THE FACULTIES OF JUSTICE.

Blind, Perhaps, But No Reasonable Proof of Deafness Also.

Judge Harlan, who lives up on the hill, was a passenger on a Fourteenth street car the other day and was seated next to a couple of clerks who were deeply interested in some discussion, which caused one of them to raise his voice to quite a high pitch, says the Washington Star. This appeared to make the other man rather cautious, as he glanced around to see if any one was listening to the talk of his friend. At this moment he discovered the presence of the dignified justice and nudging hastily to his loud talking comrade, he said: "For heaven's sake, lower your voice; you may have heard that justice is blind but that doesn't mean that he doesn't hear also." Whether Judge Harlan heard the remark it is impossible to state, as he was the same, calm smile fitted over his face at the conclusion of the young fellow's admonition to his friend.

BABY'S ECZEMA GREW WORSE.

Hospitals and Doctors Could Not Relieve Him—But Cuticura Remedies a Speedy, Permanent Cure.

"Eczema appeared when our baby was three months old. We applied to several doctors and hospitals, each of which gave us something different from the other, nothing brought relief. At last, one of our friends recommended to us Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. A few days afterwards improvement could be noted. Since then we have used nothing but Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and now the baby is six months old and is quite cured. All that we used was one cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes Cuticura Ointment, costing in all $1.25. C. F. Kara, 343 East 65th Street, New York, March 30, 1906."

Worse and Worse.

"The late Admiral Walker," said a naval officer in Washington, "believed heartily in marriage for sailors. He always urged young officers to marry. Bachelors were held up to scorn by him.

"Strolling with him in New York one day we met a young ship-broker. Admiral Walker hailed the young man delightedly. He clapped him on the back, wrung his hand and cried:

"'Congratulations on your marriage, my young friend. No more sewing on of buttons now, eh?'

"'Yes, indeed,' said the ship-broker sharply. 'I wear a belt now. It keeps me so busy raising money to pay my wife's bills that I have no time to sew on buttons.'"

A Slight Difference.

"My dear," said a gentleman to his wife, "whose knowledge of astronomy on the library table come from? They are not ours."

"My dear," he then said slowly, his voice husky with emotion, "I never said we must study astronomy. I said we must study economy."

The Peaceful Cow.

She was even more afraid of cows than most girls, so when she spied a placid animal recumbent under a tree, peacefully chewing its cud, she at first refused to go through the pasture at all. Her husband calmed her fears to some extent, but started by, when the cow slowly commenced to get up, bind legs first, as they always do, at this the little lady shrieked with terror, and said:

"Oh, Bob, hurry, hurry, he is getting ready to spring at us!"—Harper's Magazine.

PLEASANT SUMMER.

Right Food the Cause.

A Wis. woman says:

"I was run down and weak, troubled with nervousness and headache for the last six years. The least exciterment would make me nervous and cause severe headache.

"This summer I have been eating Grape-Nuts regularly and feel better than for the six past years.

"I am not troubled with headache and nervousness, and weigh more than I ever have before in my life. I gained 5 lbs. in one week."

TIRED TO THE LAST.

Saying "Hello" to Heart Throbs.

"It is a curious thing," said a prominent lecturer recently, "how some books have a strong radiating personality, so that you feel like saying 'Howdy' every time you come across them. Last Christmas I visited friends back at the old home on the farm. When the supper dishes had been put away, the chores done and the evening lamp lighted we gathered beside the organ for a good old fashioned 'sing.' On the center table were strewn the Christmas remembrances taken from Christmas tree on the evening before. Glancing over them I suddenly exclaimed 'Hello!' my good friend, Hello!' and as the others looked up with surprise, I picked up a copy of 'Heart Throbs' and read to them from its pages the 'piece' I spoke in school 40 years ago.

"That was enough to set in motion the friendly entertaining spirit of Heart Throbs, and the music was forgotten as we took turns in reading the humorous and pathetic bits of prose and verse that have been preserved in this wonderful volume. Some books have great literary value, some have historical significance, but Heart Throbs is the only book I know that shape you on the back in a friendly sort of way, suiting itself to your moods and proving faithful to every emotion. Next to my love of the Bible I love Heart Throbs. It is the most notable book of the times."

Martins' Revenge.

A correspondent tells the story of two house martins' nest built against an attic window of a farm, to which the birds came for several successive years. Last spring, however, before they arrived, a sparrow took up her abode in one of the nests.

Shortly after the martins returned they found the entry to the nest partly blocked up. Next morning a boy climbed up to ascertain the meaning of this, and—not finding any outlet broke away part of the nest, to find the poor little sparrow dead on her eggs.

The house martins had walled her up for daring to take possession of their house.—Country Life.

The extraordinary popularity of fine white goods this summer makes the choice of Starch a matter of great importance. Defiance Starch, being free from all injurious chemicals, is the only one which is safe to use on fine fabrics. Its great strength as a stiffener makes half the usual quantity of Starch necessary, with the result of perfect finish, equal to that when the goods were new.

Want to Know.

Not long ago a Boston municipal official, who is a stickler for the use of good English, had occasion to consult a physician new to the community.

After the examination, the doctor said: "All you need, sir, is a tonic in the shape of fresh air."

With a smooth iron and Defiance Starch, you can launder your shirtwaist just as well at home as the steam laundry does. If you have the proper stiffness and finish, there will be less wear and tear of the goods, and it will be a positive pleasure to use a Starch that does not stick to the iron.

Restricted Choice.

"The people and the corporations," said Senator La Follette the other day, "remind me of a woman and her little boy. There was a very large chicken and a very small duck on the table and the woman, pausing with the carving knife raised, said: 'Johnny, which will you take, chicken or duck?' 'Duck,' piped Johnny. But the mother shook her head. 'No, Johnny,' she said in a firm, yet kindly voice, 'you can't have duck, my dear. Take your choice, darling, take your choice, but you can't have duck.'"

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. STOP WOMAN AND CONSIDER

First, that almost every operation in our hospitals, performed upon women, becomes necessary because of neglect of such symptoms as Backache, Irregularities, Displacements, Pain in the Side, Dragging Sensations, Dizziness and Sleeplessness.

Second, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, has cured more cases of female ills than any other one medicine known. It regulates, strengthens and restores women's health and is invaluable in preparing women for child-birth and during the period of Change of Life.

Third, the great volume of unsolicited and grateful testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time being published by special permission, give absolute evidence of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice.

Guildford, Nov. Nov. 11. A. L. Kuhn, owner of a leading jewelry store, is dead at the Morgue as the result of a battle early with sheriff's officers who detected him robbing the safes of the Nevada Guildford reduction plant.

His companion, Ralph S. Gipple, former railroad, escaped by jumping from a second story window, but was captured by the sheriff shortly after daybreak. He made a confession in which he implicated five other business men whose characters have been above reproach. These men have disappeared, but the sheriff and his men are on their trail.

The disclosure has created the greatest sensation, as both men were of enviable standing. Kuhn was worth $100,000 and is said to have carried the largest stock of diamonds in Nevada. He came here a year ago from Bellingham, Wash.

When trapped he was masked and had blackened his face. Two other bullion robberies, conducted at the same manner, have been traced to him, and it is reported that he netted over $10,000 from his midnight operations during the past three weeks.

Just as we were ready to begin washing Monday morning along came a man with a hay rack and he unloaded an old lady and her daughter from the Maiks Colony, who had come in to spend the day. They lived three miles out and had no way of going as they could catch a ride with a neighbor or borrow an old plug the crows would be ashamed to touch. Living by themselves, hardly ever able to get a man to do a lick of work when they needed it done, not much wonder that country and things generally had soured on her. They had married to her, deceived her, lured her away from a good comfortable home to get her out here and get her money and that was all they wanted, now she must look after herself. Panic? Do you want to go back? Well no, we have put too much money and hard labor onto our place now just as we are getting fixed comfortably. We have just dug and hoed and set out things until it begins to look like now. Yes, I said, and the labor that seemed so irksome has brought you increased health and strength? That is so, she said. We were always sick or ailing back home and we've never had to call a doctor here. We had no colds when we came here but neither of us have had any colds since. That's the reason I don't want to go back. Reason enough sure? This mild climate makes it possible to work out of doors comfortably the year round and those who want themselves of this privilege almost invariably gain in health and strength. Ten acres would keep one man busy enough and that would yield quite an income the way things grow here. The grapes from a five year old vineyard would sell at a hundred dollars an acre and the older vineyards from 175 to 200 and the buyers did the picking and packing.

Some men value their American citizenship very highly so highly that they do not vote. It may take an hour of time to go to the polls and think it too valuable to be used for taking part in the system of Government which protects your life and property, guarantees the liberty which the citizen of no other country in the world enjoys to the same extent the American citizen does, and yet, when it comes time to help manifest in a tangible and practible way, perpituity of government, these men are to busy to, selfish, too indifferent to do their duty.

LAND LAND LAND

Land that grows 15 to 25 tons of sugar beets to the acre, 200 to 400 bushel of potatoes, 40 to 100 bushels of oats, 25 to 60 bushels of corn to the acre, and all kinds of fruit berries and melons in abundance. Rich, virgin soil, that grows immense crops like magic, when the water that the U. S. government provides at cost is flowed upon it. There is no such thing as crop failure under irrigation. The farmer plants his crop and absolutely controls the amount of water his crops need at exactly the proper time, and he can grow more profitable crops than he can grow in any natural rainfall country, such as sugar beets and alfalfa. Government statistics show that irrigated land will produce from one third to one-half more crops than any natural rainfall country. Officials of the U. S. Reclamation Service say that the North Platte project, which will irrigate the land we are selling, is best adapted to irrigation of any land in the country, and the supply of water is unlimited.

Renters, Why pay from $8 to $10 an acre rent for land when you can get 160 acres of R.R irrigated land for about the same money you are paying for one year's rent of an eastern farm?

Come to the New Land and own a fine farm that will grow larger crops than the high-priced land you are renting. Uncle Sam will supply you with water to irrigate 160 acres of the most productive land in the country at cost. I can secure you a fine 160-acre, irrigable farm for from $1 to $5 per acre.

Don't Wait! It won't last long. Thousands of people are flocking to this country, and the sooner you come the better bargain I can get you. Don't waste your life renting somebody else's farm at a high price. Come to the rich and fertile North Platte valley, and make a home and fortune for yourself and family. Don't neglect this splendid opportunity. There's big money in it. This land that you can now secure for practically nothing, will be worth from $100 to $300 per acre as soon as irrigated and improved. It is better land than Colorado land, that is now selling for so much. You can hire all the work done on sugar beets for $45 an acre, and at the average yield of 20 tons an acre, you can clear $55 an acre and do no work on it yourself.

Farm Owners, Why farm $100 eastern land when you can buy irrigated land here from one-tenth to one-fourth the money, and get land that will produce larger crops and increase rapidly in value? Sell out and come to the rich North Platte valley. We are not pioneering. There are no hardships in this country—towns, railroads, schools and churches are close at hand. The Platte Valley is centrally located and convenient to all markets. Railroad communications are unexcelled to all good shipping points. All kinds of produce, cattle, hogs and sheep command a high price. The Burlington R. R. now runs through the valley and the Union Pacific is rapidly pushing work on a through line to the coast, which line also runs through the valley. Thousands and thousands of tons of hay are cut in the river bottoms every year.

Investors: We can sell you deeded land that is increasing rapidly in value and will continue to increase in value for years to come. Irrigated land is not subject to the depression in land values that always go with a period of crop failures in any natural rainfall country. No matter what the weather you can grow a crop every year under irrigation. I control the sale of thousands of acres of irrigated and dry lands, buy land and ranches. I can secure you any kind of land at a price that will make money quickly for you.

Love Me, Love My Dog.

A curious incident, involving a young and good looking French woman and her dog, occurred recently on a Continental railway. For several hours the young woman bestowed more attention and tender care upon the pretty little creature than the majority of women do upon their first born, and at every station it was taken out for exercise, and between stations it was fed with dainty nibbles taken from its special basket, which also contained extra wraps, fresh shoes and a gay collar with a huge bow. What attracted most attention was, however, the purchasing of a bottle of mineral water, the taking out of a tiny folding traveling cup into which some of the water was poured and the lapping of it up by the [illegible]—Dundee Advertiser.

Mr. B—and his brother-in-law are both members of a certain Evangelical church in a city where the weekly prayer meeting forms an important feature. Mr. B—, who is living in the same house as his brother-in-law, on Sunday, the latter being absent at the prayer meeting, thought fit to present to the congregation a request that may be called upon publicly to give testimony. He is a bashful man, and such an ordeal was a terror to him.

But one morning recently he rose and in his manner of a confirmed and devoted one of the congregation at the address, arose and said:

After two or three others had been called upon and responded, the searching eye of the pastor lighted upon Mr. B—. Bowing with approval and feeling, apparently, that public recognition would be an encouragement to the backward soldier, he answered:

"And now, Brother B—, will Please lead us in prayer."

The unhappy victim was thunderstruck. Exactly what he had always feared had happened. He was fairly paralyzed with fright, and he knew that even should he open his lips he would not be able to utter a sound.

But what escape was there? The congregation had already devoutly bowed their heads, waiting for him to begin. The delay had become noticeable, and Mr. B—'s torture grew momentarily, when sudden relief came in an unexpected form. His brother-in-law, who is somewhat deaf, nudged him heavily, and inquired in an anxious whisper:

"What is the matter, John; did he call upon me to pray?"

"Certainly, John," shamelessly responded the other, with ready presence of mind. "He called on you."

The difficulty was solved. Praying and speaking at the meetings were familiar to the brother-in-law, and he took up the task which had been laid upon Mr. B—. The latter breathed freely again. He a man who had escaped a great danger. Some members of the congregation looked surprised, but a look of comprehension passed over the face of the minister, and Mr. B— believes that, should he have courage to attend again, he would be passed over as a silent parishioner.

Some times men say they do not care for politics—tie to busy to take up their time, and they don't want to contaminate the purity of their lives by coming in contact with it, at least not often. Yes politics very steeps, it is at work every minute of time. Politics gives value to human effort; it gives safety to life, matches your home, gives stability to prosperity, and security to the pursuit of happiness. With out politics the weak would be at the mercy of the staong. Individual passion would control, all liberty and progress would be unknown quantities—for politics is the science of government, with all that goverment implies.

Happy By Comparison.

"Whenever I get lonely," said the flat dweller who lives by herself, "I go to see two sisters who live in a long flat, on yet each end, and who quarrel all the time when they are not speaking to each other. Then I come home satisfied."

Almond Meal.

Nothing is better than almond meal to keep the skin smooth and white. Use it in place of soap or rub on the hands when almost dry.

Recipe for Breadsticks.

For breadsticks take two cups of scalded milk; half a cup of butter, four tablespoons of sugar, one teaspoon of salt, whites of three eggs, one cake of yeast dissolved in one-fourth of a cup of lukewarm water and sever and a half cups of sifted flour. Mix the milk, sugar, butter and salt. When lukewarm add the yolks, yeast and the whites of the eggs, well beaten. Knead well; let rise and then shape in long thin strips, about eight inches long and one-half inch thick, keeping them of an equal thickness. Let rise again, then bake. Have your oven very brisk and reduce the heat at the end of five minutes. The sticks should be very crisp and dry.

To Iron Shirt with Collar Attached.

To iron a shirt front with a collar attached, when dry, it is placed upright on the table and slightly curved to enable the front to lie flat on the table. The front is rubbed with a damp rag, the stitching stretched and the plaits then regulated. It is then ironed like an ordinary shirt front, only being detached, it may be ironed on the wrong and right side alternately until it is dry. It is then polished in the same manner as collars.

Old Brooms.

Brooms and scrubbing brushes that have seen better days can be converted into excellent mop sticks. Saw off the broomcorn and use this for kindling; nail on to the flat end of the scrubbing brush. I prefer this to the jointed ones, for you are spared the labor of continually unfastening and replacing the scrubbing cloth when wringing it out.

Russian Mince.

This is a good way of using up scraps of a joint. Cut up a shound of cold meat into dice. Chop up also any vegetables, ham, bacon, or suet pudding. Season lightly with a little pepper, salt, finely-chopped onions, parsley and a tablespoonful of vinegar, stir all together over the fire to serve very hot. Garnish with sippets of toast.

Meat Pies.

Cook the bones and drippings of cold roast beef and a small sliced onion for two or three hours. Strain, and to the broth add the cold meat cut into small pieces. Season with salt and pepper and cook slowly until tender. Pour into a baking dish and cover with potato crust. Bake until the crust is done.

How to Clean Silver.

The best way to clean silver is to dissolve a lump of soda the size of an egg in a gallon of water. Bring it to a boil. Put the silver in a saucepan, well covered with this water; boil for ten minutes. Remove the silver and rub with a soft cloth. Do not use polish after.

Classics in the Modern School.

My subject raises two questions, one of which depends on the other: 1. Should the classic form part of modern education? 2. If so, what part? It is not safe to assume the answer yes to the first question, because we are so often urged to do away with the classics on the ground that to study them is useless; I must, therefore, briefly consider both questions, writes Dr. Rouse, headmaster of Perse school, Cambridge, in the National Review. What is meant by useless? Some persons mean that which cannot be turned to direct account in wage earning. That view is the common view of the parents of our boys, and it underlies most of the criticisms of education which we read in the press. Take the ideal, which seems to be dearest to the heart of the public, to sit on an office stool for 40 years and then have a pension; for such a life nearly every study is useless in the accepted sense. Of what use to the government clerk are history, literature, algebra, Euclid, Scripture, geography—this we know on high authority is useless also to the diplomat and the ambassador—not to mention French, German, Latin or Greek. To be consistent a boy ought to spend all his time on the three Rs, pence, and tots, and his parents would expect him to save five years and be ready at 12 years of age for the civil service. But I need say no more. In its extreme, this wage-earning fallacy is ridiculous; it is, however, the hardest of our tasks to convince the people at large that this is so.

Bubonic Plague.

San Francisco is dealing in the right way with the present outbreak of the bubonic plague. Five years ago, when cases of this terrible disease occurred in San Francisco, there was, for a time at least, a disposition to conceal and minimize the epidemic; but experience soon showed, as has been proven emphatically in yellow fever visitations in the south, that the way to fight disease is to fight it openly, and that the way to avoid panic is to publish honest and complete reports, says the Outlook. Dr. Rupert Blue, of the United States public health service, is in charge of the present fight with the plague, and is vigorously enforcing modern, scientific methods. While the ratio of deaths to cases is absolutely large, it is less than has been noted in epidemics elsewhere, and the system of serum injection is regarded as of value. The terrible mortality usually attendant upon bubonic plague is offset in some measure by the fact that its spread is slow. It is believed that infection is largely caused by rats, and that from them it is spread in many cases by fleas, which carry the germs of the disease. Every effort is being made to extirpate the plague-bearing vermin. Twelve government surgeons, 12 San Francisco physicians, 40 sanitary inspectors, and a large force of laborers are working with scientific intelligence and skill to conquer the "black death."

The British youth of the present generation is not in quite so bad a way as the recent discussions of physical deterioration would indicate. Attention was lately called to the interesting conclusions revealed by a series of the measurements of the schoolboys at Marlborough for the past 20 years. The 14-year-old boys of 1906 are five pounds heavier and one and one-half inches taller than boys of the same age in 1886, and the 16-year-old boys are eight pounds heavier and three-fourths of an inch taller. A batter who provides hats for the boys in six schools says that a few years ago he rarely was asked for a hat 21½ inches in circumference, but now he is frequently called upon for hats an inch larger. It is not at all unlikely that the revelation of the poor physique of the British youth that followed the Boer war recalling aroused parents to a sense of the importance of getting their boys into the fresh air, where they could take a proper amount of wholesome exercise.

A man in Philadelphia who killed himself by inhaling gas left two dollars behind to pay for the gas. This is somewhat encouraging to believers in human nature when one stops to reflect how shamelessly the conscienceless public takes advantage of condoling and generous-hearted gas companies.

Now if professional theatricals on board some of our steamships could only diminish professional poker playing, many verdant passengers would have more of the "long green" in their wallets when they arrive on the other side.

HERE'S A NEW DEFINITION.

And Many There Are Will Say Senator Platt Was Right.

A rather cynical joke has been recently credited to Senator Platt.

The senator, on his last visit to the Manhattan Beach hotel, allowed a pretty little girl, a western millionaire's daughter, to be presented to him.

The little girl, in the course of one of her many chats with the aged statesman, said:

"Tell me, won't you, senator, what political economy is?"

"Political economy, my dear child," Senator Platt is said to have replied, "is the art of never buying more votes than you actually need."

Mary Knew.

Little Mary's father had been teaching her to walk properly. "Walk slowly and turn out your toes," he admonished her.

While she was undergoing this teaching she attended Sunday school one day. The golden text was, "Teach me to walk honestly." After reciting it several times, the teacher asked:

"Who knows what that means?"

"I do," replied little Mary. "Walk slowly and turn out your toes."

Taking Immediate Steps.

Ruggles (the bookkeeper)—I'm more than half sick with the hay fever.

Ramage (the cashier)—That's bad. You ought to go to some place where you would be sure of finding frost.

Ruggles—I'll do it, Ramage. I'll go this minute and ask the old man for a raise in salary.—Chicago Tribune.

TO PRETENDERS.

A Wholesome Word for Guidance.

Just a word to you, "Collier's" and other glaring examples of Modern Yellow Journalism and Cigarettes.

Environment gives you a view-point from which it is difficult to understand that some people even nowadays act from motives of old fashioned honesty.

There are honest makers of foods and healthful beverages and there are honest people who use them.

Perhaps you are trained to believe there is no honesty in this world. There is, although you may not be of a kind to understand it.

Some of you have been trained in a sorry class of pretenders, but your training does not taint the old fashioned person trained without knowledge of pretense and deceit.

These letters came to us absolutely without solicitation. We have a great many thousand from people who have been helped or entirely healed by following the suggestions to quit the food or drink which may be causing the physical complaints and change to Postum Coffee or Grape-Nuts food.

You are not intelligent enough to know the technical reasons why the change makes a change in the cells of the body. Your knowledge, or lack of knowledge, makes not the slightest difference in the facts.

You can print from old and worn plates all the cheap books a press will produce and sell them as best you can, but such acts and your "learned" editorials are but commercial, and seek only "dollars" and much by pretence.

When you branch out into food values you become only ridiculous.

Stick to what you know. The field may be small but it is safe.

New York, Oct. 2, 1907.

Postum Cereal Co. Ltd.,
Battle Creek, Mich.

Dear Sirs:

I am, this morning, in receipt of the enclosed mighty good letter from one of my subscribers, which I forward to you, and which I am sure you will be glad to use. I am personally acquainted with this lady, and know that she has no object in writing other than to do good.

Cordially,

John W. Pritchard, Pres.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 1, 1907.

Dear Mr. Pritchard:

Noticing Postum Food Coffee advertised each week in your reliable paper, I concluded to try it, and feeling it a duty towards those who may have suffered as I have from indigestion, desire to state what wonderful benefit I have received from Postum although using only a short time, and not do. I alone realize and appreciate the good effects, but friends remark, "How much I have improved and how well I look", and I tell the facts about Postum every time, for since using it I have not had one attack of indigestion. It is invigorating, healthful; does not affect the nerves as ordinary coffee, and if properly made, a most delicious drink. Although I have not had much faith in general advertising, yet, finding Postum has done so much better for me than I expected I am more inclined to "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good." I am so thankful for good health that I want it known what a blessing Postum has been to me. You may use these few lines as an ad. if you so desire and my name also.

Very truly yours,
Mrs. Anna B. Reeves.

275 McDonough St., Brooklyn.

Coffee hurt her, she quit and used Postum. She didn't attempt to analyze but she enjoyed the results. Underneath it all "There's a Reason."

NEED CO-OPERATION

ESSENTIAL TO SUCCESS IN ALL BUSINESS UNDERTAKINGS.

ON SOME LATE IMPOSITIONS

Schemes Devised to Deceive the People and to Gain Support for Unsound Financial Propositions.

Harmonious co-operation is essential in any successful business. By co-operation is not meant such organization as the communistic and monastic societies found in parts of the European countries, and occasionally existing in America. As co-operation relates to manufacture and commercialism, it simply means a righteous regard on part of employer and the employed for the liberty and privileges of both. It means of the laborer, a just day's work for a just day's compensation; and for the employer, services rendered for the wages he must pay. Interests of both are parallel. One has his capital invested, money employed and the other has also his capital represented by his ability to labor, either in a mental or physical capacity.

In England and in parts of Germany, there are numerous societies, the employes sharing common stockholders and participating in all profits according to their holdings. In fact these societies are nothing more than the great railroad companies and industrial concerns of America, only that in the latter the stockholders seldom take an active part in the work performed. Co-operation takes the care to study into conditions in the countries where this form of co-operation exists, will find environments far different from what obtains in the United States. In various places and at different times attempts to copy after the English co-operative societies have been made in the United States. Failure has rewarded the efforts made. Some few communities flourished for a time, then decayed.

Propped up by the success of the few successful organizations in the old country, shrewd schemers have started different commercial enterprises in cities of the United States, supposed to be operated upon the co-operative plan. When carefully studied, and the plan of operation dissected, it will be found that co-operation in these cases seems simply the getting into business on other people's money, and wearing around the enterprise such appearances as leads the unsophisticated to believe that from few dollars invested, great savings can be made. In fact the co-operative plan is more for the purpose of advertising a private business proposition and gaining trade from those who invest their dollars in the plan.

It is a foolish thing for the resident of any town or farming community to invest money in such enterprises, which means competition for his home trade, the killing off of his business and the building up of concerns in large cities. The earnest man or woman can see in their own home place splendid chances for co-operation. Established business systems as found in the rural towns, are splendid examples of what co-operation should be. The home merchant supplies the residents of the place with the commodities that they require; the merchant is the medium of exchange for the products of the farmer. In the transactions employment is given to home labor, and the little profits are kept at home for the benefit of all in the community. Co-operation can be simmered down to a strictly home-trade principle, and there can be no other form so system inaugurated that will bring better results to the masses. Before you invest in co-operative mercantile schemes, which in the end ruin business men in the large cities, study every phase of the question well, and you are likely to conclude that in your own town there is plenty of room for co-operative work.

Duty of Good Citizens.

Home and its protection is the safeguard of all government. That citizen who fails to support the good fealty to home interests, is a worthy representative of a commonwealth. It is the mass of such men that are the backbone of any community, and, figuratively, the mainstay and the rock upon which the nations are founded. Whoever lives in a community and fails to support the public institutions and does not assist in the building up of industries that add to the greatness of that community, is like an alien. While he reaps the profits of his labor in one place, his heart is in another. He is not the ideal citizen, for he is not in harmony with those who are his neighbors. It is the duty of every resident of a town or community to do his utmost to advance its interest, and in doing so he not alone assists himself, but his neighbors, his town, his county, his state and his nation.

Time to Awaken.

Any plan devised that tends toward greater business centralization makes easier the building up of harmful combinations. During the past ten years billions of dollars have been sent to the large cities by the resident of rural communities, and these billions have been used in building up trusts that work against the best interests of the masses who reside in agricultural sections. Is it not time to awaken to the dangers of sending money away from the home town?

FIGHT AGAINST CORRUPTION.

Prosecution of Oppressive Combines Afford a Lesson to Home Traders.

Never before has there been such a stirring up of the masses and an awakening as to rottenness in financial affairs among the large corporations as at present. Some one at one time said that "when thieves fall out the devil gets his reward." So it seems at present when faction is arrayed against faction in exposing crooked operations in great financial and business deals, in which the little fish are swallowed by the big ones, and the men in control, like wolves, lead the lambs to slaughter.

It is amazing how farespread are the frauds practiced, and how high up in public estimation are the manipulators of the rotten deals. The stealings of the millionaires and multi-millionaires, the intrigues and their pedantic lying and misrepresentations to accomplish their aims; the intricacy of the machinery used in their operations, the perfection of the means, the combinations employed to fleece the people of dollars, would do credit to a Gagliostro or a Machiavelli, or a Capt. Kidd.

There cannot be doubt that these various articles appearing in the magazines and general newspapers will have the effect of opening the eyes of the public to things that few heretofore ever gave serious consideration. They will have the effect of making the people more cautious in making investments of their earnings, and will result in lessons that are beneficial to the country at large. Home trade principles, the importance and duty of people losing by the operations of such gigantic schemers. Money invested in your own community in the development of its latent resources will give excellent returns, is ever under your own observation, and while the percentage of profit from some home investments may not be up to the representations made by the manipulators of stocks and the shearers of lambs in general, you are not so likely to be a loser.

MARKET DAYS IN TOWNS.

Successful Plans to Entertain Visitors and Attract Trade.

How to attract trade to towns is a question that interests every business man. There must be some attraction for people of the surrounding country; some entertainment to please. Many means have been put in operation by different towns to bring about the objects desired. The people of the small towns in different western states have inaugurated street carnivals, fall festivals and similar enterprises to entertain people from the surrounding farming sections. These methods have been universally successful, and have resulted in bringing trade to the towns that otherwise would have gone elsewhere. Not alone this, but the residents of the rural districts are brought in contact with the city people on a friendly basis and harmonious relations established that are highly desirable.

In many towns market days have been established. From early spring until late in fall one day in the month is set aside for "market day." For this occasion bands of music are engaged, balloon ascensions, baseball games, races and other attractions are employed to interest the people. All these are free, the expense being borne by the business interests of the town. The farmers are invited to come to the town their horses, cattle, hogs, in fact, every product that they have for sale, and the same is auctioned off to the highest bidder. On these market days all kinds of articles are sold at bargain prices. Each storekeeper makes special efforts to offer bargains, and everybody seems to be enjoying a few enterprising small towns that have adopted the market-day idea have become noted for many miles around, and lively visitors and take trade away from territory in the neighborhood of less enterprising towns. The market-day idea is worthy of consideration by business men in small towns who desire to pursue an inexpensive method of attracting trade to the place.

SERIAL STORY

FRIDAY THE 13TH

A Novel by
THOMAS W. LAWSON
Author of
"Frenzied Finance."

(Copyright, 1907, Dodd, Mead, Page & Co.)

"All right, Fred," I answered. "I will go over to Bob's right now. I hate to do it, but there is no other hope."

I dropped the receiver and started for Bob's office. As I went through his counting-room one of the clerks said, "They have just broken Anti-People's to 90 on a bulletin that Tom Reinhart's wife and only daughter have been killed in an automobile accident at their place in Virginia. They first had it that Reinhart himself was killed. That has been corrected, although the latest word is that he is prostrated."

I rapped on Bob's private-office door. I felt the coming struggle as I heard his voice call, "Come in." He stood at the ticker, with the tape in one hand, while with the other he held the telephone receiver to his ear. My God, what a picture for a stage! His magnificent form was erect, his feet were as firmly planted as if he were made of bronze, his shoulders were made of bronze, his shoulders were thrown back as if he were withstanding the rush of the Stock Exchange hordes, his eyes afire with a sullen, smouldering blaze, his jaw was set in a way that brought into terrible relief the new, hard lines of desperation that had recently come into his face. His great frame, trembling and filling as though he were engaged in a physical struggle; his perfect-fitting, heavy black Melton cutaway coat, thrown back from the open vest and a low, turn-down white collar formed the setting for a throat and head that reminded one of a forest monarch at bay on the mountain crag awaiting the coming of the hounds and hunters.

I hesitated at the threshold to catch my breath, as I took in the terrific figure. Had Bob Brownley been an enemy of mine I should have quailed at fear, and I do not confess to more than my fair share of cowardice. Inwardly I thanked God that he was not in his office instead of on the floor of the Exchange. His whole appearance was frightful. He showed in every line and lineament that he was a man to whom defeat was nothing, even as killing, if he should find a human obstacle in his road and his mind should suggest murder. He was the personification of the most awful madness. Even when he caught sight of me, he hardly moved, although my coming must have been a surprise to him.

"So it is you, Jim Randolph, is it? What brings you here?" His voice was hoarse, but it had a metallic ring that went to my heart. Bob Brownley in all the years of our friendship had never spoken to me except in quiet and loving regard. I looked at him, struck dumb, and then with a low hurt I was. But if he saw it, he gave no given to those words, straight into mine, changed to hear what I had been addressing his deadliest enemy.

Again his voice rang out, "What brings you here? Is the game played out for that dastard Reinhart after the warning I gave you?"

I clenched both hands until I felt the nails cut the flesh of the palms of them. "No, Bob Brownley. I would have done anything to make him happy, would willingly have sacrificed my own life to protect his from himself or others, but this madman, this wild brute, was no more Bob Brownley as I had known him than the bleak, cold northeast gale of December is the gentle, welcome zephyr of August; and I felt a resentment at his brutal speech that I could hardly suppress. With a mighty effort I crushed it back, trying to think of nothing but his awful misery and the Bob of our college days.

I said in a firm voice, "Bob, is this the way to talk to me in your own office?" At any time before, my words and tone would have touched his all-generous southern chivalry, but now he said harshly—"To hell with sentiment. What——" He did not take his eyes from mine, but they told me that he was listening to a voice in the receiver. Only for a second; then he let loose a wild laugh, which must have penetrated to the outer office. "Eighty and coming like a spring freshet," he said into the mouthpiece, "and the boys want to know what that dastard Reinhart is down? Go back and smother them with all they will take down to 60. That's my answer. Tell them if Reinhart had ten more lives and daughters and they were all killed, I'd rend his damned trust to help him dull his sorrow. Give the word at every pole that I will have Reinhart where he will curse his luck that he was not in the automobile with the rest of his tribe——"To hell with sentiment!" He was speaking to me again. "What do you want? If you are here to beg for Reinhart and his pack of yellow curs, you've got your answer. I wouldn't let up on that fiendish hyena, not if let up on that fiendish hyena, not if let up on that fiendish hyena, not if his wife and daughter and all the dead wives and daughters of every 'System' man came back in their graves and begged. I wouldn't let up a share." I gasped in horror.

"When did these robbers of men and despoilers of widows and orphans ever let up because of death? When were they ever known to wait even till the corpse stiffened to pluck out the hearts of the victims? It is my turn now, and if I let up a hair may I, yes, and Beulah, too, be damned, eternally damned."

I could not stand it. If I stayed, I, too, should become mad. I reached for the doorknob, but before I could swing the door open Bob was upon me like a wolf. He grasped me by the shoulders and with the strength of a madman hurled me half across the room. I sank into a chair.

"No, no, Jim Randolph, no, you don't. You came here for something, and by heaven, you will tell me what it is before you leave. You know now I am the only human being who does. You know what I was, you see what I am. You know what they did to me what I am. You know, Jim Randolph, you know whether I deserved it. You know whether in all my life up to the day those dollar-frenzied hounds tore my soul, I had done any man, woman, or child a wrong. You know whether I had, and now you are going to sneak out and leave me as though I were a cur dog of the Reinhart-Standard Oil breed gone mad!"

He was standing over me, a terrible yet a magnificent figure. As he hurled these words at me, I was sure and if you don't think you do better work, in less time and at smaller cost, return it and your grocer will give you back your money.

"No, You Don't Jim Randolph, No, You Don't."

my horror, my anger turned to a great, crushing, all-consuming agony of pity for Bob. I wrung my hands and wept. It is hard to admit it, but it is true—I wept uncontrollably. In an instant the room was quiet, except for the sound of my own awful grief. I heard it, was ashamed of it, but I could not stop. The telephone rang again. Bob began writing. The silliness became so oppressive that even my own sobs quieted. I gasped as the pump in my throat choked me, then I slowly raised my eyes.

Bob's towering figure was in front of me. His head had fallen forward, and his arms were folded across his breast. But that he stood erect I should have thought him dead, so still was he. I jumped to my feet and looked into his face. Not a muscle had been sadder. He slowly raised his head, then staggered and grasped the ticker-stand for support.

"Don't, Jim, don't," he said low to forgive you. Oh, Jim, Jim, my old friend, forgive me for my madness; forget what I said to you, forget the brute you just saw. Forgive me as you would have plucked out my tongue if I had caught it saying a harsh word to it here in the trust friend of her dad. Jim, forget it all. I was mad, I am mad, I have been mad for a long time, but I cannot last much longer. I know it. Jim, forgive me all our past love, for the memories of the dear old days at St. Paul's and at Harvard, the dear old days of hope and happiness, when we planned for the future, try to think of me only as you knew me then, as you know that I should now be, but for the 'System's' curse."

The end came with a sounding on the door; through the glass showed many forms. They had been gathering for minutes while Bob finished his low, sad tone, a tone that no one could believe came from the same mouth that a few moments before had poured forth a flood of brutal heartlessness.

Bob went to the door. The office was in an uproar. Twenty or 30 of Bob's brokers were there, aghast at not getting a reply to their calls. Many were pouring in through the outer office. Bob looked at them coldly. "Well, what is the trouble? Is it possible we are down to a point where the stock exchange rushes over to a man's office when his wire happens to break down?"

They saw his bluff. You cannot deceive stock exchange men, at least not the kind that Bob Brownley employed on panic days, but his coolness reassured them, and when they saw me it was odds-on that they guessed to a man why Bob had ignored his wires—guessed that I had been pleading for the life of "the street."

"Well, where do you stand?"

Frank Swan answered for the crowd. "The panic is in full swing. She's a cellar-to-ridge-pole ripper. They're down 40 or over on an average. Anti-People's is down to 35, and still coming like sawdust over a broken dam. Barry Conant's house and a dozen other of Reinhart's have gone under. His banks and trust companies are going every minute. The whole street will be overboard before the close. The governing committee has just called a meeting to see whether it will not be best to adjourn the exchange over to-day and to-morrow."

Bob listened as if he had been a master at the wheel in a gale, receiving reports from his mates.

There was no trace now of the scene he had just been through. He was cold, masterful, like the seasoned sea-dog who knows that in spite of the ocean's rage and the wind's howl, at the wheel will answer his hand and the craft its rudder. "Jim, come over to the exchange." The crowd followed along. I would have but a minute I want to have you say good-bye to give me," he said to me. "I know, Jim, you understand it all, but I must tell you how sorry I am that in my madness I should have so forgotten my admiration, respect, and love for you, yes, and my gratitude to you as to say what I did. I'll do she only thing I can to atone. I will stop this panic and undo as much as possible of my work; and now that I have wrecked Reinhart, I am through with the game forever, yes, through forever."

He pressed my hand in his strong, honest one and strode into the exchange ahead of the crowd. All was chaos, although the trading had toned down to a sullen desperation. So many houses, banks and trust companies had failed that no man knew whether the member he had traded with early in the day would be solvent enough to carry out his trades. The man who had been "long" in the morning, and had sold out before the crash, and who thought he now had no interest in the panic, found himself with its stock again on hand, because of the failure of the one to whom he had sold, and the price cut in two. The man who was "short" and who a few minutes before had been eagerly counting his profits now knew that he had been forced to lose, because the man from whom he had borrowed his short stocks for delivery would be in no condition to-day for them, the next day, when they should be returned to him. The "short" man was himself, therefore, "long" stocks he had bought to cover his "short" sale. In spite of the price he had been working against his own pocket instead of against the bulls he had thought he was opposing. It was confusion and black despair. There is, indeed, no blacker place than the floor of the stock exchange after a panic cyclone has swept it, and is just lingering in its corners, while the survivors of its fury do not know whether or not it will again gather force.

A $2,500 DRESS SUIT.

Worn by One of Our Battleships and Consists of Flags.

Few realize the number of flags carried by a warship nor the color of all the gay bunting which flutters from mast to mast at holiday time. In addition to fleet communication, necessary during maneuvers in home waters, says Army and Navy Life, the ship must be equipped with an extensive array of flags on board for various forms of ceremonial and official occasions.

This dress suit outfit of bunting consists of 250 different flags the material and making of which cost just $2,500. Each ship is entitled to a new flag equipment every three years, though owing to their constant use a flagship will often require a new set of signals in about a year.

A great deal more time and labor is required to finish certain of these flags than is generally supposed. The president's flag requires the longest time of any to make, as it takes one woman nearly a whole month to complete it. The life-sized eagle with outstretched wings and other emblems of all band-sewed and involve the most painstaking work.

The most difficult to make are the foreign flags. This is especially true of the South and Central American ones.

A half dozen specially skilled hand device sewers are continually kept busy making these flags. Every battleship carries flags, 25 feet by 13 wide. The most expensive ensign to make is the German, which, owing to the heavy gold fringe and the large imperial cate scrollwork of the large imperial eagle and royal crown necessitating delicate, slow and careful sewing, costs $56.50.

The dragon flag of China consists of 200 separate pieces. Twelve to 14 days are ordinarily consumed in finishing this flag, which costs $45.

The flag of Siam with the white elephant costs $38. The Mexican with its center design of a large eagle holding a serpent on the cactus costs $30.50. The cheapest foreign flag made is the Moorish, which costs $21.

Praised Edgar Allan Poe.

When H. G. Wells, the English novelist, was in Boston he praised Poe at a dinner. "I think hardly of your New England writers," he said, "for their contempt of Poe. I shall never be able to forget that Emerson called him 'that jingle man.' To-day a thousand read Poe where one reads Emerson, and not to know Poe's work is rather a disgrace. There is a little inn at home. It is rather a poorly conducted little inn. The landlady gets every now and then to write something about it in a kind of autograph album that she keeps on her drawing room table. One visitor wrote in the album many years ago: 'Quoth the raven——' The landlady did not understand that quotation. She was not well up in Poe. And ever since that time she has shown the cryptic line to every guest, entreating him to tell her, if he can, it's meaning. But the guests are always too polite to tell her. They pretend they do not know. And hence, year after year, to every visitor that comes, the poor landlady with her album gives herself away."

New Relationship.

"Probate court is a great place for untangling relationships and such things," said Judge Merle N. A. Walker, "but an entirely new relationship, new at least to me, has been sworn in at our court here recently.

"A case on trial rested largely on the establishment of the fact that one of the parties in the suit—a woman—was compelled to 'work out' for her living. One of the witnesses testified he knew she did so.

"'How much money?' he was asked.

"'I've seen her——'

"'Are you around there often?'

"'Well—yes—you might say so.'

"'Kind of relation of the family, huh?'

"'Well—no and yes. I'm the main man.'"—Indianapolis News.

Used No Use for "Jockey Pants."

John Sharp Williams is extremely careless about his dress and does not care about fine clothes on anyone else. In a recent session he ordered his servants to the Democratic speakers' bureau and was sent north to help out a congressional nominee. When he returned to headquarters and was questioned to his experiences he said: "Don't you know that fellow came down to meet me in a pair of rainbounder clothing breeches and started to go around with me. I just up and told him that if he wanted to go to congress he had better take off those jockey pants. After he left the blamed thing off we got along all right."—Chicago Tribune.

Scientiet's Color Sense.

Rosaline Masson tells an interesting story in Cornhill of Herbert Spencer's color sense. Once he paid a boy to get down on the floor and ink the light spots in the carpet, as they annoyed him. He used to cover the backs of books with drab curtains, as they annoyed him. She also adds one never hears of women doing such things, and how shorn of the mystic halo of talent are remarkable. It is just possible that it is because they have never done such things that few of them have as yet arrived at greatness.—Chicago Daily News.

Lacking a Better Tool.

"Tommy Jones!" exclaimed the teacher, angrily, "why did you chalk your name on this new desk?"

"Had ter," replied the boy. "I ain't got no knife ter carve it on wid."

What Is Going On in New York City Told in Interesting Manner

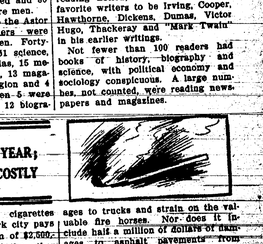
WIDE RANGE OF LUNCHEON PLACES IN WALL STREET

NEW YORK—There is a wide range to the luncheons of Wall street. It is a far cry from the simple elegance of the Stock Exchange Luncheon Club, in the Change building, to the five-cents-a-dish restaurants that afford a reasonable sustenance to that element in the financial district that is "on its uppers."

Stock exchange brokers who are members of the luncheon club, of which John C. Toplis is president, use the club dining-room to a great extent, although a considerable number of men on the floor like to run across the way to Fred Eberlin's for their noonday morsel.

Some of the brokers and bankers have their luncheons served in their offices, where they can keep an eye on the ticker and on the telephone. The Empire building at noon regularly resembles a huge restaurant, and its corridors are thronged with waiters bearing heavy trays at that time.

Cotton exchange brokers lunch most frequently at Delmonico's; produce exchange men at either "The Dutchman's," near the exchange, or at "Chef's" in Stone street, and coffee exchange men at Stetcher's in Hanover square (the place made famous by Johnston, of drink mixing fame), and, strangely enough, at restaurants up in the Maiden lane district.



THE largest "stag" hotel in the world has opened its doors at Thirty-sixth street and Seventh avenue. Within the first hour 85 men had registered. By seven p. m. there were 393, and they were still coming. Within the first 24 hours the management expected to show a total of nearly 500 patrons. There are 1,876 sleeping rooms on the 14 floors for bedrooms. These are all single rooms.

One hundred corner rooms that have two windows each rent for 40 cents a day. All the other rooms are to be had for 30 cents a day. One-day patrons are not accepted before six p. m. A man registering before that hour cannot take a room for more than one day.

Consolidated exchange brokers scatter at luncheon hour, while the men on the curb take a hasty noonday bite at one of the "counter" restaurants that marshal their "surpassing coffee" fronts along Broad street.

At the Mid-Day club, at the Down Town association and sometimes at the Lawyers' club, Wall street men are daily to be seen in table groups. At Savarin you will see many faces easily recognized, and so too at the top of the Mills building. If a dash of Broadway is sought, there is Haan's, and the "fine view with every course" restaurant on the roof of the new West street building.

Wall street—that is, the street proper—is decidedly interesting at the lunch (not luncheon in this instance) hour. There you

HISTORIC OLD HOUSE.

WILDER MANSION AT BOLTON, MASS.

Quaint Old Structure, More Than a Century Old, Was to Have Sheltered the First Napoleon After His Downfall.

Of the great country estates of Massachusetts there is none more famed in historical connection than the Wilder mansion on Wastequonoco hill, in the township of Bolton. It was here that Napoleon was to have sought refuge had he decided to attempt to escape to this country; it was in the mansion house of this estate that Lafayette at one time made his headquarters, and years later the spot was selected as the future residence of President McKinley, but never so occupied. It has been the abode of several millionaires and the scene of innumerable festivities of varied natures.

A little more than two years ago the Boston Herald, the Wilder mansion became the most talked of residence in New England. It was reported with many facts to substantiate the tale that President McKinley would become a resident of Bolton, and that he would occupy the Wilder mansion. At the time negotiations were completed to the extent of transferring the property to the name of J. Wyman Jones, a brother-in-law of the late Marcus A. Hanna. Mr. Jones admitted that he was acting in the interest of President McKinley. As in the earlier history of the famous estate, there was subsequently a change of plan, which caused Massachusetts of the chance to acquire another world famous resident.

—The Wilder mansion is a quaint old structure, built over 100 years ago and several times remodeled. It stands on the west side of the hill road leading from Lancaster "old common" to Bolton Centre, almost at the crown of the highest hill, although this road does not scale Wattoquottoco's height.

Sampson Wilder, the founder of the Wilder mansion, was born in Lancaster, May 20, 1750, and his family tree sprang from the Puritan stock which settled the place. The Wilders emigrated from England and came to Boston in 1638. About the year 1800 Mr. Wilder, having met Talleyrand in Boston and become acquainted with him, went to France to look after certain business interests, obtained through his friendship special privileges from the French government. He made the acquaintance of many prominent men of the day, and preserved among his mementos are many personal letters which were written by them to him. He represented the United States on the occasion of the marriage of Emperor Napoleon, then in the height of his glory, to the Archduchess Marie Louise.

In 1833 Mr. Wilder returned to Bolton to settle down. The following year was made memorable by the coming of Lafayette to America and the reception given the latter by Mr. Wilder at the Bolton mansion was the event of the century for the town. The program was arranged by the host and the then mayor of Boston, the Hon. Josiah Quincy, the older.

It was a very established tradition that the Wilder mansion was selected as an asylum for Napoleon after his defeat at Waterloo. Napoleon delayed in taking advantage of the offer until too late. Passage had been engaged for him on a vessel that was to bring him to America, but he waited in a desire to provide for his faithful friends until he was compelled to give himself up as a prisoner of war.

Be Yourself.

Listen! The linnet sings its song, the rose gives out its fragrance; have you observed that the lark has repossessed its melody or the pink changed its array in order to become the bard? Follow their example and you will come to understand that no one has a right to contend against you, or you to resist him. Man's duty to each of his fellows is to let him manifest himself through what is most individual in him, in order to realise the greatest utility for the whole. Show your own colors, sound your own notes, it precisely for this that you are here. Stand firm, do your duty. Be yourself and be irreverent above all, in your thought, and in the expression you give it in word or action.—Charles Wagner.

Animal Existence.

All the actions and movement of the animal world may be divided into three classes—involuntary, instinctive and rational. The former being common to every vital structure, both animal and vegetable; and the two latter being possessed, in various proportions, both by man and every class of the lower animals. Instinct is a natural propensity prior to experience, and independent of instruction, tending to self-preservation or the perpetuity of the race; while rational actions are always the result of instruction or deliberation, directed to some end of which the animal is conscious and for the accomplishment of which he is capable of selecting and adapting appropriate means.

Of Course.

"What, then," asked the professor, "is the exact difference between logic and sobriety?"

SECRETARY OF STATE JUNKIN CALLS DOWN STATE BUYERS.

BILLS CONTRARY TO RULES

Finds That a Number of Vouchers Issued By Heads of Institutions Do Not Cover Conditions and Sends Them Back.

Secretary of State Junkin has found that heads of state institutions are buying goods not contracted for, goods in excess of permits issued, and goods that are neither contracted for nor covered by a permit to buy, and has sent back a lot of vouchers for correction in this account. This will serve as a reminder that the state board of public lands and buildings means what it says when it adopts rules governing the purchase of goods for the state. The secretary of state has notified Superintendent Sherman of the school for boys at Kearney that hereafter he must keep in his vouchers for travel, he excuses the mission on which he traveled. Mr. Sherman presented a bill for several trips and accompanying the account were receipts for the funds paid out, but the secretary of state desires to know something about the purpose of the visits and will insist on this in future.

The institution to which vouchers were returned for correction to comply with contracts and permits were the institute for feeble minded at Beatrice, Hastings hospital, Lincoln hospital for the insane, school for boys at Kearney, soldiers' and sailors' homes at Grand Island and Milford, the industrial school for women at Milford, home for the friendless and orthopedic hospital at Lincoln. From one to ten vouchers for each institution were found incorrect.

Governor Will Quarantine.

Governor Sheldon has decided to issue a quarantine proclamation in cooperation with the government quarantine to go into effect December 1. The government inspectors will act at state inspectors and the expense of their work will fall upon the government. The same rules that apply in the government quarantine will apply in the state of Nebraska. The proclamation will be issued before Saturday evening. The western part of the state is now under government quarantine. Under the governor's proclamation as it will be operated, inspected cattle will be given a clean bill of health those that are not inspected will have to go to the quarantine pens. This will give those who have been asking for a proclamation to what they want and will leave those who oppose it just where they are in respect to a bill of health for their cattle.

McBrien Discharges His Wife.

State Superintendent J. L. McBrien has discharged his wife from the office force and has told why he employed her. This announcement follows close onto the publication of a list of officers at the state house who employ relatives. Mr. McBrien's explanation and action in this case has caused many eyes to be cast in the direction of Land Commissioner Eaton, State Veterinarian C. A. McKim and Chief Game Warden Carter, all of whom have their wives on the state pay roll, and to other state officers and boards in the departments who belong to what has been termed the amalgamated association of husbands, wives and sons and daughters of protection.

Free High School Ruling.

State Superintendent McBrien has ruled in regard to the attendance of nonresident pupils under the free high school law that if a pupil is in attendance but one day in any one week he is eligible to the free tuition of the high school for that week, and that on such non-resident attendance the public school district, where such pupil is attends, will be entitled to draw 75 cents per week high school tuition therefore as provided for by law. On the other hand he holds that where a non-resident pupil fails to attend a single day in any one week the public school district will nt be entitled to any tuition for that week's non-attendance.

Harris' Record Unique.

According to statistics gathered on the last election R. Clement Harris of Galesburg is the only candidate in the state of Nebraska who ran against a women this year and defeated her. Harriss was a candidate for superintendent of public instruction of Jefferson county on the republican ticket. He defeated Mrs. Olive W. True, the democratic nominee, by a majority of 101.

Charity Ball at Fremont.

The Fremont charity ball was given at Masonic Hall. It was a social success, and a most brilliant one. The decorations were carried out in Teddy bears, and were very elaborate. Preceding the grand march, an automobile parade around the block, in which it had prepared especially for the occasion. The attendance was about 400 and a goodly sum was raised for the fund of the club.

Uniform Telegraph Rates.

There is a well defined opinion at the state house that the railway commission believes it has been bulldozed into giving permission to increase rates and phone companies to increase rates and that changes have been desired by the companies merely to drive out competition. The commission fears so strongly upon the subject that it is likely that some subject may be taken to open up the telephone rate question for the purpose of establishing uniform long distance rates throughout the state. Different rates are charged in different localities, although all telephone companies are said to establish rates on an individual basis. This would mean uniformity, but it is alleged there is no uniformity. Attorney W. W. Morsman of the Nebraska Telephone company contends that the commission has no rate making powers as applied to telephone companies, but he admits the companies must file the changes in rates with the commissions.

Death Warrant.

A death warrant, prepared by Deputy Clerk Victor Seymour of the supreme court, has been sent to Warden A. D. Beemer of the penitentiary. It directs him to hang Harrison Clarke, December 13, between the hours of 11 a. m. and 3 p. m., and was prepared in accordance with the decision of the court. The document recites the record of the case from the trial and sentence by the district court of Omaha, affirmance by the supreme court and denial of a motion for a rehearing and other facts that appear in the record. Unless Governor Sheldon interposes the death sentence will be carried out.

He is considered one of the foremost authorities on law in the country and his friends predict that he will take hold of his new duties with the same energy and enthusiasm that has always characterized his work.

ENDS LIFE IN HOTEL

BANKER OF MISSOURI TOWN SUICIDE AT KANSAS CITY.

NO KNOWN REASON FOR ACT

Banking Institution of Which He Was Cashier Sound—Politician of Some Prominence, and Had Held Many Offices.

J. B. Thomas, cashier of the Bank of Albany of Albany, Mo., a prominent democratic politician and former grand master of the Masonic order of Missouri, committed suicide at the Midland hotel, Kansas City, Mo., leaving no message to explain his act. There is no evidence that the affairs of the Bank of Albany are involved in the tragedy, the surviving officers having asserted emphatically that they know of no reason for the suicide of Cashier Thomas. Thomas registered at the hotel at 8:30 o'clock p. m. and went directly to his room. He was not seen alive by the employes of the hotel. When no response was given to repeated knockings on the door, a carpenter forced an entrance.

Thomas was found dead in the bathroom, fully dressed, with a bullet hole in his right temple and clutching a pistol in his hand. The coroner's jury decided that he had been dead several hours.

Thomas was sixty years old and has been cashier of the Bank of Albany since 1890.

BRYAN WILL MAKE THE RUN.

Leaves Question of Candidacy to Decision of Rank and File.

If the rank and file of the democracy consider that he is the most available man to head the presidential ticket in 1908, and indicate it is their desire to have him as their candidate, William J. Bryan will accept the nomination, irrespective of whom the republican party may choose. In his own words, Mr. Bryan, in his Commoner of November 15, says the question of his availability is one not to be decided by himself nor a few leaders, but one to be decided by the people, that each themselves democratic, but by the voters of the party, and to them he trusts the question. Among other things, the Commoner says:

"Mr. Bryan will not ask for or seek a nomination; and he will not decline to decide the question of his availability. He has been amply recompensed by his party for what he has done and for what he has endeavored to do that he can not claim a nomination as a reward; neither should his ambition be considered, for he has had honors enough from his party to satisfy any reasonable ambition. The only question that ought to weigh with the party is whether the party can be strengthened and aided more by his nomination than by the nomination of someone else. If he can serve the party by being its candidate, he will accept the commission and make the best fight he can. If, however, the choice falls upon another, he will not be disappointed or disgruntled. His availability is a question to be decided not by him, not by a few leaders, not even by the leading newspapers that call themselves democratic, but by the voters of the party and to them he intrusts the decision of the question—they are the supreme court in all matters concerning candidates, as they are in all matters concerning the platform."

Another man lost his life by falling from a rope which he was using as a fire escape.

The fire was confined to the fifth floor, where it started, and the floor below was cut, shortly before 2 o'clock.

When the firemen made their way to the top floor they found four bodies so charred as to be unrecognizable. Two of them were in the room where it is thought the fire started. One of the men was on his knees. The man who was killed by falling from a rope was Isaac Livic, a day porter. H. G. Ackerman, a drummer of New York, is among those missing.

PATIENCE NEEDED

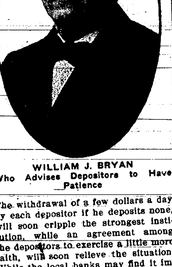
WILLIAM J. BRYAN ON THE FINANCIAL CONDITION.

THE BANKS ARE STILL SAFE

Advises All Depositors to Have Patience and Not Lose Confidence —Situation Will Right Itself in "Good Time."

W. J. Bryan discusses the banking situation in the November 15 issue of his Commoner. The following editorial was printed under the heading, "Be Patient, Depositors:"

"In other editorials the Commoner has pointed out certain remedies that ought to be enacted for the relieving of the present panic and the protection of the public for the future, but it begs to urge patience and confidence in the present banks. The banks are, as upon its readers. The banks are, as a rule, perfectly sound. They are not loaded up with bad paper. Examination will show that prices have been rising and that men are better able to pay their debts now than they were ten or even five years ago, but the depositors can precipitate a panic if they are unreasonable enough to do so



WILLIAM J. BRYAN
Who Advises Depositors to Have Patience

The withdrawal of a few dollars a day by each depositor of his deposits none, will soon cripple the strongest institution, while an agreement among the depositors to leave their money in the banks would relieve the situation. While the local banks may find it impossible to withdraw the deposits which they have on call from the eastern banks, these deposits will ultimately be paid, and there is practically no danger of loss to the various communities unless depositors themselves expect the impossible. When a depositor puts his money into a bank he knows that his ability to withdraw it on demand depends entirely upon the probability that but a few will want to withdraw the money at one time. He has no right to expect, therefore, that he can call for his money at once if all the other depositors do the same thing—still less should he expect it if his timidity makes others timid. This is a time when depositors should recognize the service of the bank to the community, for the bank would not exist but for the local demand for it —and the depositor who thinks only of himself at a time like this is as much criticised as the citizen who, thinking only of himself in time of war, refuses to bear any of the risks or dangers necessary for his country's protection."

FINANCIAL SITUATION.

Secretary Cortelyou Says Outlook Is Steadily Improving.

Secretary Cortelyou said, on leaving a cabinet meeting, that financial matters had not been considered during the session; that the outlook was steadily improving, principally in New York; that relief was being extended quite freely to the middle west, particularly to St. Louis. He did not indicate that the situation was serious, he said, but simply showed a general easing up of the stringent conditions.

On November 12 the United States bought £56,000 in American eagles from the Bank of England.

The United States mint at Philadelphia delivered $1,000,000 in gold double-eagles to the sub-treasury in that city. It is stated that within the next three months the mint will coin $52,000,000 in double eagles. This enormous amount of gold will be distributed among the banks in the various parts of the country and will be employed to relieve the money stringency. The local mint is well equipped to coin the entire amount of the shower of gold that has begun to fall upon every part of the United States.

Fireman Badly Injured.

Ed. Walker, a member of the Council Bluffs, Ia., fire department and driver of the racing fire team of that city which won the world's champion at the state tournament in Clinton last year, was so badly hurt in a runaway that amputation of his right foot was necessary. SIX INJURED IN A WRECK.

A Pennsylvania Passenger Runs Into a Freight.

A Pittsburg, Pa., November 12 dispatch says:—Six persons were more or less seriously injured about 1:30 o'clock this morning when the Pennsylvania special train No. 28, from Chicago to New York on the Pennsylvania railroad, ran into a stationary freight train in the yards at Larimer, near Greensburg, Pa. All the passengers received a severe shaking but only narrowly escaped injury or death. The injured:

Mrs. Jerry Green, Roadboro, Pa., injured about head and body.

Mrs. Mariolle, Roxboro, Pa., head jammed through window and severely cut.

Howard Scott, brakeman, at West Moreland hospital in critical condition.

Edward A. Bilby, fireman, Berry, Pa., cut and bruised, serious.

R. J. Whitaker, Pittsburg, face and body cut.

J. E. Bateman, Pittsburg, cuts.

The passenger train had just received orders to leave the eastbound track and travel east on the west-bound track. According to reports received at Greensburg, a stop order that the freight train was on the west-bound track, and gave the passenger a white block. Engineer Martin, of the passenger train, says he saw the freight about twenty yards in front of him, but at the speed he was traveling he was unable to avoid a collision. The engines were wrecked and the combination car of the passenger was completely demolished. About six coal cars were demolished. The impact was terrific and the passengers were thrown violently to the floors of the cars. That the train escaped a disastrous wreck is due, it is said, to the fact that it was traveling only twenty miles an hour.

A wrecking crew from the city cleared the track when the Pennsylvania road was made up again and with the Manhattan limited departed for the east two hours late.

MONEY MISSING FROM BUGGY.

Payroll of $20,000 Disappears Near Trinidad, Colo.

Some time during last night the twenty thousand dollar payroll of the American Smelting and Refining company was stolen near Trinidad, Colo., says a November 12 dispatch. As yet no arrests have been made, but several men are under suspicion. The money was taken from a buggy which was being driven by the paymaster and another employe.

Abraham Thompson, the paymaster, accompanied by Jim Williams, a guard, left Trinidad at dusk last night for Cokedale, the biggest camp operated by the American Smelting and Refining company. The money, which was in two canvas sacks, was placed under the seat. According to the story of Thompson, they encountered no one on route to the camp, but when they arrived at Cokedale and the miners had formed in line to receive their pay it was discovered that the money was missing.

Thompson and Williams immediately retraced their tracks for several miles, but could not find no trace of the thief or thieves. They came back to Cokedale, where they notified the sheriff by telephone. Some of the miners obtained horses and rode over the surrounding country, but encountered no suspicious-looking characters.

Charles Macomber, driver of the stage, was arrested on suspicion, but he declares he knows nothing about the supposed theft.

DECORATING A LIVING ROOM.

Soft Draperies Do Away with Appearance of Stiffness.

Miss D. C. is dissatisfied with the stiffness of her living room, writes Kate Greenleaf Locke. The chairs, she says, are of oak, with cane seats; there is a piano, a couch, a mirror, a table and a music stand in the way of furniture. The walls are cream and pink in tone, being a design of pink roses on a cream colored background. The rug in center of floor is of dark velvet. She wishes to use about $30 for its improvement.

I can well understand that your room without soft draperies of any kind or easy chairs would be stiff and uncomfortable. You have failed to tell me what kind of curtains you have at your windows.

Then, I see from your diagram, you have a wide bay window on one side of the room, and in this window I see a feature which may be made to add much to the attractiveness of the whole room.

Buy enough flowered muslin (it can be had for 25 and even 20 cents a yard) to make soft, full sash curtains for all of these windows. If you select a design which harmonizes in a general way with your wall paper you can use them on the sashes of your windows whatever the other drapery may be.

You will find that pink roses on a white ground, with green foliage against the light of this window will cheer and brighten your room wonderfully.

Now add to this effect by placing either on the window sill or on a light stand a handsome fern. The money spent for this purpose will be found to be well invested, as there is nothing which goes further toward furnishing than a handsome plant.

Cover the couch with a rich shade of crimson denim, making the cover to fit carefully with a valance of shallow loose plaits. The couch pillows for use should be covered with the same denim.

Norwegian Prune Pudding.

This is an inexpensive and tasty pudding, good at any season. Pick over and thoroughly wash one-half pound of prunes. Put into a saucepan with two cupfuls of cold water, cover and let stand an hour. Bring to the boiling point in the same water and simmer slowly until the prunes are soft. Take out the pits. Crack some of them and add the kernels to the prunes to flavor. Add to the juice one of sugar, an inch stick of cinnamon, a cup and a quarter of boiling water and again bring to the boiling point. Simmer five minutes. Dissolve one-third cup cornstarch in just enough cold water to pour easily, add to the prune mixture and cook ten minutes, stirring constantly. Remove the cinnamon, turn into a mold that has been rinsed out with cold water and chill. Serve with sweetened sugar and whipped or liquid cream, flavored with vanilla.

Use Bran in Water.

To wash pongee, silk, dimities so they will look like new, launder in the following manner: Fill the bath tub half or a little more than half full of warm water, and to each pail of water add a heaping tablespoonful of borax. Put the garments in this water and rub gently with the hands. Rinse and hang out to dry. Iron on the wrong side. Do not starch, as the bran stiffens the material sufficiently. If you have ever had much bother washing silk or pongee you will be delightfully surprised and pleased with the results.

To Fry Kidneys.

Cut up in slices three-quarters of an inch thick two beef kidneys. Let soak in cream and salt about two and one-half hours. Drain and dredge in flour. Cut in thin slices one large onion; fry in butter and turn into vessel. Also fry slices of bacon on both sides and turn into vessel. Make a thick pan gravy. Add three tablespoonfuls of catsup, a good pinch saleratus and season with salt and red pepper. Pour this in vessel and let boil two hours slowly. Enough for four people.

The sauce tartare is made by seasoning mayonnaise with minced pickles and green and red peppers minced.

Cut off the legs of stockings that the feet are past doing anything with, measure stockings you are wearing from waist down to top of stocking. Split cutoff leg down, sew it firmly to top of stocking, by machine is best, then fasten seam of the waist with safety pins back and front. They are comfortable and no coming down or getting out of order.

FOUND OUT JUST IN TIME.

Or Finger Bowl Would Have Been Put to Novel Use.

The late William Cassidy, one-time editor of the Albany Argus, possessed the traditional Irish wit. On one occasion, a number of years ago, he was a guest at a political banquet in Albany. At that time finger bowls were seldom used, and their correct usage (a passing fad) meant to dip a corner of the napkin in the water and there with daintily rub the finger tips. Most of the men present eyed the innovation, when introduced at dessert, narrowly and uncertainly. One after another ended by putting the hand into the crystal dish. But Mr. Robert Pruyn, a well-known Albany gentleman, sat unconcernedly at his end of the table and proceeded to lave his fingers. Mr. Cassidy watched him admiringly, not having as yet touched his own glass.

"That's good," he remarked to his neighbor. "That's good. If Pruyn hadn't done that I should have put my foot in it."—Harper's Weekly.

His Word Not Good.

John and Jim agreed to settle a difference by fighting it out. It was understood that whoever wanted to quit should cry "nough!" John got Jim down and was hammering him soundly, when Jim cried "nough!" But John paid no attention to his cry and kept on pounding him. Again and again Jim called out "nough! But John only beat the head of his enemy with his fists. A boy standing near asked: "Why don't you let the feller up? He's yelled "nough!"

"Yes, he's such a liar you can't believe him."

ENCOURAGING FACTS

THOSE CONTEMPLATING CHANGE OF RESIDENCE SHOULD READ THEM.

The other day the writer was in the Office of the Canadian Government at St. Paul, Minnesota. On the windows of the building were signs to the effect that homesteads of 160 acres were given free to actual settlers, and in the windows were displays of wheat, oats, barley, other grains and vegetables, which he was told were grown in Western Canada. This could be readily believed for in no other country on the Continent would it be possible to grow such splendid specimens. The world is now pretty well advised that in the growing of such cereals as have been named and vegetables as well the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta have no competitor. For several years past specimens have been exhibited at State and County Fairs throughout the United States, and these exhibits are looked upon as one of the chief attractions. They have demonstrated what can be done in the climate of a country possessing the soil that will grow them. But that it was possible to grow vegetables such as were seen there seemed to create some doubt. But it was the writer's own experience. And of course the splendid fruit grown in countries more congenial to such culture, but they were in evidence. Throughout Indiana, the hoosier farmers were forced to stop and think. When a similar exhibit was placed before them during the past few weeks, many of them were forced to stop and remark: "That is much ahead of anything we can do. The quality of the fruit and vegetables and such roots as are also forced. But to think of vegetables and such roots as these. Why, we thought everything was frozen up there, and these turnips, cabbages, cauliflowers, beets, mangolds, pumpkins and squashes are away ahead of anything we ever saw grow." That is the story everywhere. Thousands of Western Canada homesteaders, formerly United States citizens, are growing just such grain, just such vegetables, which yield them a splendid profit with little outlay on the farms they have secured free from the Government of the Dominion of Canada at the nominal cost of $10 for 160 acres. In adjoining land is wanted for the sum of ten dollars per acre. Those in search of healthful homes and independence are fortunate in having such a country at their doors. Write for literature to the Superintendent of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to the Canadian Government Agent, whose name appears elsewhere, a copy of which will be forwarded you all about it will be sent you free.

Not to Be Thought Of.

There was once a multi-millionaire (he was very "multi," indeed) who spent immense sums of money on his children. They had everything, including four automobiles and a steam yacht each.

But they were not satisfied.

"Can you not," they implored, "spend a little time with us, now and then?"

"Prime!" cried the multi-millionaire, greatly shocked. "No, no! You are dreaming. It is impossible."

This fable teaches that time is not money in any practical sense.—Exchange.

ITCHING RASH 18 YEARS.

Girl's Rash Spread and Grew Worse Under Specialist's Care—Perfect Cure by Cuticura Remedies.

"When my daughter was a baby she had a breaking out behind the ears. The doctor said that she would outgrow it, and it did get somewhat better until she was about fifteen years old and after that she could get nothing that would drive it away. She was always applying something in the way of salves. It troubled her behind the knees, opposite the elbows, back of neck and under neck and the chin, and then it got on the face. That was about three years ago. She took treatment with a specialist and seemed to get worse all the time. We were then advised to try the Cuticura Remedies, and now I don't see any breaking out. M. Curley, 1129 Sixteenth St., Bay City, Mich., May 20, 1906."

NATURE PROVIDES FOR SICK WOMEN

a more potent remedy in the roots and herbs of the field than was ever produced from drugs.

In the good old-fashioned days of our grandmothers few drugs were used in medicines and Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., in her study of roots and herbs and their power over disease discovered and gave to the women of the world a remedy for their peculiar ills more potent and efficacious than any combination of drugs.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

is an honest, tried and true remedy of unquestionable therapeutic value.

During its record of more than thirty years, its long list of actual cures of those serious ills peculiar to women, entitles Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to the respect and confidence of every fair minded person and every thinking woman.

Every month brings to some women with irregular or painful functions, weakness, displacements, ulceration or inflammation, backache, flatulency, general debility, indigestion or nervous prostration, they should write Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for kind and motherly advice. Such letters are received, read and answered by women only. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

No other remedy in the country has such a record of cures of female ills, and thousands of women residing in every part of the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable compound and what it has done for them.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. For twenty-five years she has been advising sick women free of charge. She is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and her assistant for years before her decease advised under her immediate direction. Address, Lynn, Mass.

As the Rock Island passenger train west bound was pulling into Pawnee City at about 8 o'clock Monday evening some one near the track threw a stone through a window of one of the coaches and struck a passenger on the cheek, making a severe wound. Whether or not the deed was committed out of malice is a question, but it is certainly time to call a halt. Company detectives may locate the offender. —Pawnee Clifer.

The kickers on the farm are not so hard to get along with as the kickers in town, declares the Breckinridge Bulletin. On the farm there is the kicking cow, and our long-eared friend, the mule, while in town there is the old horseback who wants all the municipal improvements with out paying for them. The cow may be sold for beef, the mule traded for a shotgun, but nothing but a funeral will get rid of the town kicker.—Johnson County Tribune.

Destroys Hair Germs

Recent discoveries have shown that falling hair is caused by germs at the roots of the hair. Therefore, to stop falling hair, you must first completely destroy these germs. Ayer's Hair Vigor, new improved formula, will certainly do this. Then leave the rest to nature.

LAND LAND LAND

Land that grows 15 to 25 tons of sugar beets to the acre, 200 to 400 bushels of potatoes, 60 to 100 bushels of oats, 25 to 60 bushels of corn to the acre, and all kinds of fruits berries and melons in abundance. Rich, virgin soil, that grows immense crops like magic, when the water that the U. S. government provides at cost is flowed upon it. There is no such thing as crop failure under irrigation. The farmer plants his crop and absolutely controls the amount of water his crops need at exactly the proper time, and he can grow more profitable crops than he can grow in any natural rainfall country, such as sugar beets and alfalfa. Government statistics show that irrigated land will produce from one third to one-half more crops than any natural rainfall country. Officials of the U. S. Reclamation Service say that the North Platte project, which will irrigate the land we are selling is best adapted to irrigation of any land in the country, and the supply of water is unlimited.

Renters, Why pay from $3 to $10 an acre rent for land when you can get 160 acres of the irrigated land for about the same money you are paying for one year's rent of an eastern farm?

Come to the New Land and own a fine farm that will grow larger crops than the high-priced land you are renting. Foote farm will supply you with water to irrigate 160 acres of the most productive land in the country at cost. I can secure you a fine 160-acre, irrigable farm for from $1 to $5 per acre.

Don't Wait! It won't last long. Thousands of people are flocking to this country, and the sooner you come the better bargain I can get you. Don't waste your life renting sometody else's farm at a high price. Come to the rich and fertile North Platte valley, and make a home and fortune for yourself and family. Don't neglect this splendid opportunity. There's big money in it. This land that you can now secure for practically nothing, will be worth from $100 to $300 per acre as soon as irrigated and improved. It is better land than Colorado land, that is now selling for as much. You can hire all the work done on sugar beets for $45 an acre, and at the average yield of 26 tons an acre, you can clear $35 an acre and do no work on it yourself.

Farm Owners, Why farm $400 eastern land when you can buy irrigated land here from one-tenth to one-fourth the money, and get that will produce larger crops and increase rapidly in value? Sell out and come to the rich North Platte valley. We are not "pioneering." There are no hardships in this country—towns, railroads, schools and churches are close at hand. The Platte Valley is centrally located and convenient to all markets. Railroad communications are unexcelled to all good shipping points. All kinds of produce, cattle, hogs and sheep command a high price. The Burlington R. R. now runs through the valley and the Union Pacific is rapidly pushing work on a through line to the coast, which line also runs through the valley. Thousands and thousands of tons of hay are cut in the river bottoms every year.

Investors: We can sell you deeded land that is increasing rapidly in value and will continue to increase in value for years to come. Irrigated land is not subject to to the depression in land values that always go with a period of crop failures in any natural rainfall country. No matter what the weather you can grow a crop every year under irrigation. I control the sale of thousands of acres of irrigated and dry lands, hay land and ranches. I can secure you any kind of land at a price that will make money quickly for you.

Write today for further information. Local real estate dealers correspond; we can make some money for you.

Prosperous Germany.

New histories are springing up like mushrooms in the Rhine country, and all are built substantially. There is a general complaint, in consequence, of the scarcity of labor. It has been said that no man in Germany is idle unless he chooses.

Self-Made Man.

Edward Yates, who recently died in Walworth, England, leaving a fortune of $6,000,000 in real estate in and about London, began business life as a soda fountain boy.

Mexican Salad.

Cut cold boiled ham, cooked chicken and cold boiled potatoes into fine shreds or Julienne. Take a cup of each and mix with a tablespoonful and a half of olive oil; a scant tablespoonful of vinegar, a teaspoonful of grated onion, also paprika and salt as needed. When thoroughly mixed set aside to become cold and seasoned. In the meantime make ready a cup of shredded celery and one-third of a cup of sweet red pepper. When ready to serve mix the celery, pepper and seasoned ingredients with enough mayonnaise dressing to hold them together. Turn them onto a bed of lettuce leaves. Garnish with quarters of hard-boiled eggs and chopped whites and sifted yolk of egg.—Miss Hill in Boston Cooking School, May 1.

Clear Lemon Pie.

Dissolve a heaping tablespoonfuls of corn starch and stir in one and a half pints of boiling water until it thickens. Just before setting this aside to cool add a tablespoonful of butter. Grate the rinds and squeeze the juice of two lemons, stir with this one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, the yolks of three eggs and one cupful and lemon and sugar. Line two pie plates with pastry, stick with a fork to prevent rising unevenly and bake. Still with the lemon mixture and return to the oven until thoroughly heated; spread with a meringue made of the whites of three eggs and sweetened. Brown lightly. Serve cold.

Bachelor's Fry.

Place the oysters flat and smooth in a frying basket and dip for a half moment in boiling water deep enough to cover them. Take basket out, dip for a moment in cold water and then lay the oysters smooth between a folded napkin to dry. Sprinkle them with pepper, salt, a little chili powder and a squeeze of lemon juice, and let them dry for an hour or so. When ready to use dip them in a thin batter and fry in hot olive oil, a few at a time. Serve on hot plates.

Becoming Fond of Tea.

The Americans are growing almost as fond of our cup of tea as the hours as the English. Even our men, of late years, do not disdain their afternoon tea drinking, which is certainly better than a number of ill-mixed number of cocktails, though they have scarcely reached the stage of going home from business early for tea, as does the brawny Englishman.

Barberry Preserve.

Take twice as many sweet pears or apples as barberries and three-fourths as much sweetening, half sugar, half molasses. Put sugar and molasses on to boil. When boiling put barberries in; cook 15 minutes, then skin out barberries and put in pears or apples. Cook till soft; can and put back barberries and let boil up.

Whole Wheat Gems.

Beat two eggs, without separating; add to a cupful of milk, together with a tablespoonful of melted butter, a teaspoonful salt and one cup and a half of whole wheat flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls baking powder. Beat thoroughly; put into hot gem pans well greased and bake in a quick oven for half an hour.

Scrambled Eggs With Cheese.

Break three eggs and slip them into a saucepan, or blazer, of the chafing dish; beat them with a generous lump of butter, two tablespoonfuls of grated cheese, with salt and pepper to taste. It cooks in five minutes, and when just the right degree of softness is a delicious dish over some fried toast.

ALL ARE INJURED

BY SENDING MONEY TO ENRICH MAIL ORDER HOUSES.

VALUE OF FARM LAND HURT

Prosperity of Town and Prosperity of Country Surrounding It Identical—Local Merchant Is a Friend of Farmer.

A writer in the Fullerton (Neb.) News-Journal gives some pointed reasons why the farming community surrounding every town should get behind the town and push its business interests, urging consideration of what that would mean compared to patronizing mail order houses. If the town grows, land values grow all around it. If business men are compelled to reduce their stocks or go to other fields in order to get business, it is not the town only but the farming community that suffers. The question is asked, what personal interest is it to any one in that country to enrich the mail order houses? The money spent away from home is taken from the prosperity of the town, and just as directly from the prosperity of the country surrounding it. The writer declares that it is as much to the interest of every man who owns a farm in Nance county to keep Fullerton flourishing as it is for the people in one of the city to keep it flourishing. The continued growth of a good town always gives added value to all farm lands adjoining. The local merchant is a town is the friend and neighbor of the farmer. The mail order house is nothing of the kind, and it cares nothing for the individual interests of the farmer except to get his money. The local merchant, besides bearing his share of taxes, is always assisting the churches and charities of the community. No such help comes from mail order houses. The larger business that is given to the home merchant allows him to carry the larger stock and to sell at a smaller margin. To sacrifice your home town is to depreciate local real estate values and to retard the growth of values of both town and farm property. The town that seems prosperous and looks prosperous invites investment not only in the town, but in the locality, so that a stranger, looking for a location, becomes interested and a purchaser, while he would ordinarily leave the dead town and its surrounding territory out of consideration.

Deal in Shoddy Clothing.

Many of the old-timers these days wonder why the clothing they used to wear years ago was so much better than is now securable unless extremely high prices be paid. A little thought makes an explanation easy. This is an age of advancement in every way, and trade increases along with improved machinery, scientific methods, etc. In fact the whole system of improvement seems to involve means of lessening cost of production.

Thirty years ago such a thing as shoddy was not known. When one purchased a suit of clothes it was "all wool," but at present it is an exceptional thing in cheaper garments to find this the case. The reports of the government show that each year hundreds of tons of shoddy, or woolen goods ground up, are imported into the United States, and a heavy duty paid on the same. This shoddy is manufactured into cloth by various processes. It is most often woven around a cotton thread, and sometimes is forced into the texture after the cloth is woven. In samples sent out by the cheap clothing concerns this shoddy can be picked out. Often it is so loosely woven that a bit of the cloth be crumbled between the fingers, it will fall out in the form of dust. Great quantities of this cloth are utilized by the makers of cheap clothing who do business through the mails direct with the wearers. A suit of this kind can be purchased from eight to $20—and dear at that. The goods generally look well, but lose shape, and in a few weeks show all their defects. Seldom do these goods sold by regular clothing merchants, who have a reputation to maintain, and if they are, they are sold without misrepresentation.

Objected to Outside Supplies.

Master plumbers in Newburgh, N. J., have declared war against the mail order business as applied to their line, and have refused to handle stock bought of mail order concerns. The decision was arrived at in the case of a man who is building on Washington Heights. The plumbers said the man sought for bids for doing the plumbing and was not satisfied with the prices. He then asked how much he would take off the cost to do the work if he would furnish the materials. The plumbers refused to consider this at all.

They said they are content with a reasonable profit on their supplies, but if these are not purchased from them they may as well go out of business for all the profit they will make on the wages of the men alone.

The man had sent to Chicago for his materials and they had arrived before the last one after another of the plumbers refused to touch them. One reason assigned was that the western connections were such as local men were not familiar with the work.

The man was in quite a quandary for a time, because to have sent to Chicago to bring a man here or is fact to bring anyone here from out of town would mean an expense of at least $25, this being the sum demanded for a license to do plumbing work in Newburgh. Under a state law, master plumbers must have a license.

GOODS MADE IN SWEATSHOPS.

Workers in Large Cities Compelled to Labor for Little Compensation.

The average resident of the small town or of the farming district has little conception of conditions which prevail among the working classes of the large cities. Now and then some article may appear in a magazine or newspaper relating to the "sweating" system, but few understand what this means. It is simply this: In the garment-making line and kindred industries different articles of goods are made by contract for so-called manufacturers. The sweatshops are found in the closely crowded tenement districts, and generally are small rooms into which the workers are crowded. The different garments are cut out at another place, and are sent to be sewed together to the "sweatshop" which serves as a living place as well as a work shop. Each worker receives so much per dozen for garments sewed and the price is barely sufficient to pay living expenses. A woman will work all day sewing shirts together and will receive from 40 to 50 cents for her labor. Those who work off shirts confine themselves to this particular line; the ones who sew trousers, the same, and the coatmakers and vestmakers are all confined to their particular classes of work. What they receive is so scaled down as to allow the poorest kind of an existence. These shops are visited by men who dispose of their goods to houses which compete with the regular dealers throughout the country. The goods are sold at "prices at the lowest," though the small opening caught in the middle of the shoe, and scrambled to the ground with it.

A rope was strung through the pulley with the aid of the twine halyard, and "Jimmy" munched happily of the biggest piece of cheese he had ever seen at once.

First Lesson for a Child.

"The first time a child has a sense of responsibility is when he has to decide whether his shoes fit or not," said a mother of five little ones. "We have to put the decision on the little tots themselves, for no mother, no matter how many intuitions she may have, can possibly tell whether a shoe pinches there, fits tight there, or slips on the heel. It is always a delight to me when I have taken my children in for their first pair of hard shoes, to hear what they call them. At first they are bewildered when I insist that they alone know whether the shoes hurt or not, for they have been so used to the idea that mother knows best and that I am the one to approve and ultimatum on all matters of clothes. Then they look serious, almost ready to cry, and finally they get down on business and start to tackle this problem of the fit of shoes. It worries them a good deal and I always feel a little sorry when I see their anxious faces, for it means they've had their first taste of responsibility and begin to realize that mama is not going to settle everything in life for them."

Tiger's Courage Above Lion's.

A curious story as illustrating the difference in courage between a lion and a Bengal tiger is told by an old showman: "One day, in order to make a test, we placed a firecracker in the respective cages and lighted the fuses. As soon as they began to burn and attracted the attention of both animals, but in a widely different manner. The lion withdrew into a corner and watched the proceedings with a distrustful and uneasy eye. The tiger, on the contrary, advanced to the burning fuse with a firm step and unflinching gaze. In reaching the cracker he touched his paw, and began to roll it over the floor, and when it exploded beneath his very nose, he did not flinch, but coolly kept his attention until perfectly satisfied. The lion betrayed great fear when he heard the report of the explosion, and quite a time could not be coaxed out of his den."

Napoleon as a Subaltern.

As a lanky subaltern Napoleon appears in the "Memoirs of the First Empire," by Gen. Vionnet. The Little Corporal himself, when emperor, told a party of officers, among whom was the writer, how he played practical jokes on his comrades when he was a lieutenant of artillery. "We had a neat way of astounding our chiefs by the accuracy of our gun practice," said Napoleon. "I just laid a string to the target, and after the shot, before the smoke had risen, a gunner crept up and pulled the string, overturning the target. Thus our chiefs were deceived. We also had a colonel who was stone deaf and we used to fire blank cartridges, telling him we had been ordered to fire a salute in honor of his birthday. Nothing could be more unfortunate than this circumstance compel them to thus labor in order to buy food.

Benevolent associations and societies for the prevention of cruelty are repeatedly tried to break up these horrible places, but they manage to exist in every city of any size, particularly in eastern cities. People who live in the country can assist in preventing the operations of these shops by not patronizing any concerns which make extraordinary offers in the line of clothing for men and women in catalogues and circulars sent through the mails. Any such concerns that support the sweatshop system. No reputable clothing dealer handles sweatshop goods. So therefore the entire output of the factories of the concerns that do a miscellaneous class of business by mail throughout the country. It is only the very cheapest kinds of clothing that come from the sweatshops. The better classes are manufactured in large and roomy factories, where there is plenty of fresh air and light, and where men and women are paid good wages, and these are the classes of goods sold by the regular trade. There is never a time when clothing made in the sweatshops, as owing to the closely crowded rooms and general squalid conditions, germs of disease are present. It has been known that smallpox, measles, scarlet fever and other infectious diseases have been carried and spread throughout the country by clothing from these infected places.

Sales to Mail Order Houses.

Proprietors who sell mail order houses directly should, by every lawful means, be induced to discontinue marketing their goods through these avenues. A desired result can be accomplished in no other way, the proprietors should be given the alternative of choosing between the retail druggists, the logical distributers of their goods, and the demoralizers named. It is the opinion of your committee that druggists are necessary to protect them from all the proprietors if aggressive efforts were made by each druggist individually to discourage the sale of proprietary stuffs by catalogue, those that are not protected in any way against price demoralization, and those that are supplied by propositions, as a rule, with the least possible knowledge that they are to be sold to the consumer at wholesale prices.

As for the specials that are promptly forthcoming whenever this subject is broached to the proprietors that they are supplying mail order houses the free use of electrotypes (illustrating some of their lines of goods) as are constantly appearing in the catalogues of these houses, electrotypes that are identical with those the proprietors themselves are constantly using, certainly demands explanation.—Detroit Retail Druggist.

Mail Order House Competition.

The competition of the mail order houses, one of the most threatening perils of the country druggist, particularly in eastern cities, People who live in the country can assist in preventing the operations of these shops by not patronizing any concerns which make extraordinary offers in the line of clothing for men and women in catalogues and circulars sent through the mails. Any such concerns that support the sweatshop system. No reputable clothing dealer handles sweatshop goods. So therefore the entire output of the factories of the concerns that do a miscellaneous class of business by mail throughout the country. It is only the very cheapest kinds of clothing that come from the sweatshops. Benefit for Boston Strangers.

The Rev. Eugene C. Webster, of Boston, has begun work to establish a "Little Church Around the Corner" for the benefit of the theatrical persons and other strangers in Boston, whom he believes need such an institution.

The Up-to-Date.

"I suppose you go to the city at least once a year," said the summer boarder.

"I used tew," replied the old farmer, "but I ain't been near for high onto three years now. Sense we got rural free delivery I kin git hunkoed jist as well by mail, b'gosh!"

RAT HELPS TO RAISE FLAG.

Little Animal Did the Work of Expert "Steeple Jack."

Edmund P. Condit, a wealthy resident of Verona, recently gave a birthday party to a dozen young friends of his nine-year-old son.

When he attempted to celebrate the occasion by raising an American flag on the top of the 50-foot flagstaff that had stood on his lawn for years the pulley rope broke. The pole was too frail to permit of even the lightest lad climbing up to pass another halyard through the pulley at the top.

"Wo and Jimmy'll fix it for you, Mr. Condit," piped up Able Wolff, a neighbor's son, and he scooted off to his father's barn, returning with a little white rat clinging to his shoulder.

Abe uncoiled a big ball of twine, put the loose end in "Jimmy's" mouth, and sent the little animal climbing up the pole; but when he reached the pulley he didn't know what to do next.

Abe found another pulley, called the white rat down, and spent ten minutes teaching him to run back and forth through the contrivance with the twine between his teeth.

Then he sent "Jimmy" up the pole again and this time the rat without a moment's hesitation tried to get through the pulley. It was a tight squeeze, but "Jimmy" deliberately took the string in one paw, passed it through the small opening, caught it with the other paw, and scrambled to the ground with it.

A rope was strung through the pulley with the aid of the twine halyard, and "Jimmy" munched happily of the biggest piece of cheese he had ever seen at once.

Blow at Wagnerians.

A hard-headed old Pittsburg manufacturer, who made his fortune, as he expresses it, "with his coat on," was induced by his daughters to accompany them to a Wagner concert, the first he had ever attended. The next day he happened to meet an acquaintance, who had seen him the night before, who asked:

"I suppose you enjoyed the concert last night, Mr. Smith?"

"Well, no," replied the old farmer, "I can't say I did. I'm not much on Wagner. Sense we got rural free delivery I kin git hunkoed jist as well by mail, b'gosh!"

DOCTORS IN GRAND JURY NET.

Two Indicted in Iowa for Conspiracy to Force an Independent Physician from a Surgical Case.

Waverly, Ia.—The Bremner county grand jury, which a few weeks ago indicted fourteen members of the county medical association, alleging violation of the anti-trust law, recently reported additional indictments against Dr. W. A. Rohlf and Dr. O. L. Chaffee on the general ground of conspiracy. Their alleged offense was of forcing an independent doctor from a surgical case, in which he as well as one of the accused doctors had been employed, after he had refused to sign the union scale.

An Acute Observer.

A one-armed man sat down to his noonday luncheon in a little restaurant the other day, and seated on the other side of the table was a sympathetic individual from the rural district.

The big fellow noticed his neighbor's left sleeve hanging loose and kept eyeing him in a sort of how-did-it-happen way. The one-armed man failed to break the ice, but continued to keep busy with his one hand supplying the inner man.

At last the inquisitive one on the right could stand it no longer. He changed his position a little, cleared his throat and said: "I see, sir, you have lost an arm."

Whereupon the unfortunate man picked up the empty sleeve with his left hand, tucked it into it, looked up with a surprised expression, and said: "By George, sir, you're right."

True to His Promise.

A teacher in a tenement district hurried from the school to find the mother of a pupil who had been taken quite ill.

"Can you show me where Mrs. Angelo Scandale lives?" she inquired of a cherub transplanted from the sunny south to a dark, sunless alley.

"Yes, teach', I show you," and a willing, sticky hand dragged her on with such speed as to make her stumble over an Italian dame seated on the threshold.

After the teacher's breathless flight toward the clouds, the little hand stopped tugging.

"There where Mees Scandale live," indicated the horizontal arm on the left, "but she downstair sitting on the step," finished the smiling lips.—Harper's Magazine.

FRIDAY THE 13TH

A Novel by

CHAPTER IX.

The governing committee was holding a meeting in its room. Bob rushed in unceremoniously.

"One word, gentlemen," he called. "I have more trades outstanding, both buys and sells, than any other member or house. Before deciding whether to adjourn in an attempt to save 'the Street,' I ask your consideration of this proposition: If the exchange will suspend operations for 30 minutes, and allow me to address the members on the floor, I will agree to buy at the market at least half their drop—all of it, if possible.. I will buy until I have exhausted to the last hundred my resources of a million dollars. This should make an adjournment unnecessary. I know that this is a most extraordinary request, but you are confronted with a most extraordinary situation, the most remarkable in the history of the stock exchanges. Already, if what they say on the floor is correct, over 500 banks and trust companies throughout the country have gone under, and new failures are being announced every minute. Half the members of this and the Boston and Philadelphia exchanges are involved and have closed their doors, or will close them before three o'clock; and the shrinkage in values so far reported runs over fifteen billions. Unless something is done before, the 'Street' there will be a similar panic in every exchange and bourse in Europe to-morrow."

The committee instantly voted to lay the proposition before the full board. In another minute the president's gavel sounded, and the floor was still as a tomb. All eyes were fixed on the president. Every man in that great throng knew that upon the announcement they were about to hear, not the downfall of a few, temporarily, the welfare, not only of Wall street, but of the nation, perhaps even of the civilized world. The president spoke:

"Members of the New York Stock Exchange:

"The governing committee instructs me to say that Mr. Robert Brownley has asked that operations be suspended for 30 minutes, in order that he be allowed to address you. Mr. Brownley has agreed, if this request be granted, be will upon resumption of operations purchase a sufficient amount of stock to raise the average price of all active shares at least one-half their total drop—all of it, if possible. He agrees to buy to the limit of his resources, which, I believe, are now put Mr. Brownley's request to a vote. All those in favor of granting it will signify the same by saying 'Yea.'"

A mighty roof-lifting "Yea" sounded through the room.

"All those opposed, 'No.'"

There was an awful, ominous hush.

"Mr. Brownley will please speak from this platform, and remember, in 30 minutes to the second the hammer will fall on the gavel for the resumption of business."

Bob Brownley strode to the place just vacated by the chairman. The throng was growing larger every minute. The ticker was already blazing a fiery biography of this extraordinary situation in every office, hotel, store and banks throughout the country, and in a few minutes the news of it would be in the capitals of Europe. Never before in the history of the world has such an audience—the whole civilized world. Already arose from Wall, Broad and New streets, which surround the exchange, a hum like the low roar of the gathering hordes. Before the ticker should announce the resumption of business these would number thousands. Every messenger boy in the district for more than an hour had been a surging mob.

For once at least the much-abused broker, "the man on the part," could be used in all truthfulness. As Robert Brownley threw back his head and shoulders and faced that crowd of men, some of whom he had hurt, many of whom he had beggared, and all of whom he had tortured, he presented a picture such as a royal lion recently from the jungles and just freed from his cage might have made. Defiance, deference, contempt, and pity all blended in his mien, but over all was an I-am-the-one-to-be-feared many atmosphere of confidence that turned my spinal column into a mercury tube. He began to speak:

"Men of Wall street:

"You have just witnessed a record-breaking slaughter. I have asked permission to talk to you for the purpose of showing you how any member of a great stock exchange may at any time do what I have done today. Weigh well what I am about to say to you. During the last quarter of a century there has grown up in this free and fair land of ours a system by which the few take from the many the results of their labors. The men who take have no more license, from God or man, to take, than have those from whom they take. They are not endowed by God with superior wisdom, nor have they performed for their fellow-men any labor or given to them anything of value that entitles them to what they take. Their only license to plunder is their knowledge of the system of trickery and fraud that they themselves have created. No man can gainsay this, for on every side is the evidence. Men come into Wall street at sunrise without dollars; before that same sun sets they depart with millions. So all-powerful has grown the system of oppression that great men take in a single lifetime all the savings of a million of their fellows. To-day the people, so to speak, are assembled here for the first time, and their pay is their board and keep. I saw this robbery, I felt the robbers' scourge. I sought the secret. I found it. Here it is, this gambling-hell. I found that the stocks we bought and sold were mere gambling chips; that the man who had the most chips could bust his opponent off the board; that his opponent was the world, because all men directly or indirectly put into the stock-gambling pot. Again, I found that because of the organization of that labor and by "turning pebbles into money he took away from the laborer money which he had put them to work with. Every dollar in all the land were slaves of the moneymaker. These few tricksters said: We will arbitrarily manufacture chips—stocks. After we have manufactured them, we will sell the world what the world can pay for, and then by the use of the unlimited supply we still have we will win back the world what it has bought, and repeat the operation, until we have all the wealth, and the people are enslaved. To do this there was one thing besides the manufacturing of the chips—stocks—that was absolutely necessary—a gambling-hell, the working of whose machinery I marvelled that men could for so long have been asses.

"From the very nature of stock-gambling it is necessary, absolutely necessary, that it be conducted under certain rules, unchangeable, unbreakable rules, to attempt a change or break which would destroy stock-gambling. The foundation rule, the rule absolutely necessary for the existence of stock-gambling is: Any member of the stock exchange can buy, or sell, between the opening and closing of the exchange as many shares of stock as he cares to. With this rule in force his buying and selling cannot be restricted to the amount he can take and pay for, or deliver and receive pay for, because there is not money enough in the world to pay for what under this same rule can be bought and sold in a single session. This is because these have been arbitrarily created by these few tricksters many times more stocks than there is money in existence. The amount of stock that any man can sell in one session of the exchange is limited only by the amount that he can offer for sale, and he can offer any amount his tongue can utter; and he is not compelled and cannot be compelled to show his ability to deliver what he has offered for sale until after he has finished selling, which is the following day. You will ask as I did: Can this be possible? you will find the answer I found. It is so, and must continue to be so, or there will be no stock-gambling. Mark me, I make the statement that at the height of this year he dug up a big cherry tree by the roots and cut it into firewood.

Spread of Block Signals.

It is said that out of a total mileage on the Pennsylvania railroad system of two lines of 4,000 miles of track more than 1,500 additional miles have within the last three years been equipped with block signals. The annual report shows that the company now has every mile of its main lines protected by block signals, and of the entire mileage of the lines east of Pittsburg 500 miles are not equipped with block signals. Most of the latter, however, are short industrial lines or branch lines, on which the use of light and of such a character as to render the block signal unnecessary.—Engineering.

Doing a Good Work.

In addition to the Pennsylvania Railroad company's superannuation and pension fund, one of the latest reports of the company's relief fund shows that since the organization of this department in 1886 the payments of beneficiaries have been paid in death claims $6,815,409.27, and that members have received on account of disablement $9,660,483.91—and to-tal: $16,595,843.69.

Railroads in British India.

The length of railroads in operation in British India was especially extended during the decade ending with 1906, inclusive; the length of line working at the close of 1906 being 29,087, and the increase made during the decade 7,980 miles.

ARE USING HEAVIER RAILS.

Changes Being Made on All Belgian State Railroads.

Consul H. J. Johnson of Liege writes that experiments are being carried on with a view to replacing the rails now in use on the railway lines owned and operated by the Belgian government by rails of heavier weight—a change made necessary by the increased weight of the rolling stock. He writes:

"What is formerly the maximum weight of locomotives used on the Belgian lines was from 40 to 45 tons, the weight of locomotives now in use has doubled, being from 80 to 90 tons, with cars of from 20 to 25 tons in weight. So far the heaviest used on any one line are those on the Vigneul rails, having a maximum weight of 40.65 kilos, or about 125 pounds a meter (39.37 inches). A limited number of the heavyweight rails, it is true, have already been placed on these lines, but their use is confined to crossings, branchings and switchings only, their weight being 52 kilos, or 114 pounds a meter.

"The weight of the new rail selected for experiments are being made is 57 kilos, about 125 pounds a meter. The line selected for experimental purposes is that from Liege to Germany, the immediate locality of the experiment being on that part of the line between Liege and Welkenraedt, a distance of some 8 kilometers (kilometer = 0.62 of a mile), bringing the total length of double track to about 60 kilometers, making necessary the use of something like 6,000 tons of rails. It is obvious that the use of these heavier rails will compel corresponding modifications in other sections on the lines affected by the change."

Side Doors as Railway Cars.

Coaches with doors at the side instead of at the end are to be introduced on the Southern Pacific railroad, according to the Scientific American. This paper states that President Harriman has given orders to have a number of new fine passenger coaches built on this plan at the company's car shops at Sacramento. Says the paper just named:

"Harriman believes that cars thus constructed will be much stronger and more durable than the style now used and also that in case of wreck, there will be little danger of the coaches telescoping each other. These new cars will have a small passenger platform at each end. Each of the cars, after leaving the coach that they will at first hardly be recognized as a passenger vehicle. Some of these cars will soon be completed and placed in commission on the Southern Pacific western roads."

Railroad Seeking Big Loan.

The South Manchurian railroad is transferring its head office from Tokio to Dalny, Manchuria, with a branch office at Port Arthur. The company is endeavoring to raise a foreign loan of $40,000,000 in London and Europe, but the effort is dragging at present. Baron Goto, president of the company, has received absolute power to fix the rate of interest. The money is to be spent for additions, improvements and extensions and for capitalizing the coal mines, buying land and erecting warehouses.

Argentine Railroads.

The railroads in operation in Argentina, at the close of 1906 aggregated 20,814 kilometers, an increase during the year of 595 kilometers. Under construction, 5,547 kilometers are reported, of which a large portion will get to make known."

MADE INITIAL TRIP

NEW YORKER A PASSENGER ON FIRST AMERICAN TRAIN.

Stephen Smith Dubois Still in Fine Mental and Physical Vigor at Age of 94—Remembers the Ride Well.

As an example of mental and physical vigor at the age of 94, Stephen Smith Dubois, who a few days ago completed the task of cutting and stacking the product of a five-acre field of corn down at Norwood, Long Island, is probably one of the most remarkable men in the country of whom there is a record. He is the only living man who rode on the first passenger train run on a steam railroad in America—the Mohawk and Hudson —whose rails connected Albany and Troy. Not only is Dubois the only living link that connects the railroad history of the past and present, but he was one of the two passengers who rode in the coach, drawn by an engine called the Yankee. The other passenger was his uncle.

It was the first official trip, and with a foresight, which has not been followed in later years, the inhabitants of Troy insisted that the directors of the road should assume the first risk, for there was nobody willing to take the chance of a ride behind a "contraption" that they believed was likely to blow up at any moment.

"I was born up in Cayuga county," said the old gentleman, as he rested for a moment from sawing a thick stick of timber, "and came to New York in 1847. My wife died in 1843. My youngest son, the baby of the family, is 43, and a very good boy. That I am the only living man who rode on the first railroad train must be true, because I was only a boy then at the time, and the directors I rode with were grown men, some of them old men.

"When I first came to New York the northermost house in the city was on Twenty-sixth street, near Madison avenue. Beyond that was all green fields. Corporal Thompson's cottage was built a few years later, I think, or if it was built it was not used as a half-way house in 1847. Over on the east side there were only a few shanties above Twelfth street. You had a clear view of the East river from what is now Central park.

"When I was a boy up in Cayuga, Indians of the Seneca tribe—you know Seneca county is close by—used to come into Waterloo, where I lived for a time, but we didn't pay much attention to them. They were always peaceable, and never harmed anybody so far as I know. I was 14 years old when I came to New York in '47, and if I do say it myself, I wouldn't give way to any man in any kind of a contest when I was that old. I was as good as most men at 25.

"I have lived the greater part of my life in the open air, eaten and drunk everything in moderation, and have chewed tobacco for about 75 years. I gave up smoking 30 or 40 years ago, and my quids of chewing have become smaller from year to year now."

The old man took from his vest pocket a tiny cube of tobacco. It could not have contained more than the amount of a dollar bill.

"Lost all my teeth something like 30 or 35 years ago," he continued, "so I can't chew like I used to, and that piece of tobacco will last me about six weeks. I don't sleep well at night now, but when I was young I used to take long naps. Sleep is a great thing —better than food or drink."

The most remarkable physical achievement of the old man this year was cutting the corn on the five-acre field single handed this up to 200 "stunts," and it is standing to-day as a monument of his prowess. He cleared the same field a year ago, and there were 200 "stunts" also. But the handling, each ear and scraping over a bar laid across a bushel measure. When the measure was full it would empty it into a bag, which it also handled. Early in the spring of this year he dug up a big cherry tree by the roots and cut it into firewood.

HANDCAR UP TO DATE.

The Gasoline Motor Car to Be Used by Street Railways.

A new device which has just been put into use on the Pittsburg & Butler street railroad line sounds the death knell of the old-time handcar. This new device is a gasoline motor car, or as a matter of fact, an automobile handcar, with cushio

Who Is Dead Head.

New Zealand solves the following year: "The tobacco habit was even credited with the introducing the dead-head system, which was a wrinkle of the Maoris, the tribe of the district having been at war, had suffered many of their braves had been "dead head" The Maoris decided at once to find out by experiment whether the corpse was observed to move slightly to one side on which it was first laid for rest from the people. The movement was interpreted as a sign of future victory. This test was often performed by the tohungas of olden times."

Popular Hatred.

Let no man slight the scorns and hate of the people. When it is direct, it is a wolf at noon; it is just as dangerous though the greatest high ones think so may contemn their malice; yet he ought to remember that they have many heads while he hath but one only. If he being single, be dangerous to many, these many will to him alone be dangerous in their rage. The contempt of the people, though they be but barren dust and lightness, yet, angered by the winds, they bury both the horse and traveler alive. Against the hatred of a multitude there is no force but what must come by miracle; for wealth, nor nor bands of armed men can keep them safe that have made themselves the hate of an enraged multitude. It is thunder, lightning, storm and hail together.

Overcame All Obstacles.

At 18 years of age Keir Hardie, the well-known labor member of the British parliament, could neither read nor write and the only kind of schooling he received was a rough drubbing in the elements of reading, which he obtained by studying books and notices in shop windows. Writing and shorthand Mr. Hardie taught himself, practicing the latter in the coal mine with the aid of a white stone blackened with smoke from his pit lamp and used as a tablet upon which he scratched the symbols with a pin. At 23 he left the pits and became secretary of a miners' union and two years later he obtained a position as subeditor of a local newspaper at Cumnock, the town in which his present home is situated.

SNAKES SWAYED BY TUNES.

"Wearing of the Green" Charms Ope, "Boyne Water" Another.

There are some residents of the Cokesackie section of Belleville, N. J., who are said to believe this story, which is being told there, says the New York World.

Mrs. W. P. Scully was hanging clothes on the line in her yard when she happened to whistle a few bars of her favorite air, "The Wearing of the Green." To her amazement a whip-snake glided from the woodpile near by, halted and seemed fascinated by the music. When Mrs. Scully ceased whistling the snake vanished in the woodpile.

On her husband's return from the copper works, where he is employed, Mrs. Scully told him how unwittingly she had played snake charmer.

"There are others," laughed Scully, and he went to the yard and whistled "The Wearing of the Green." In a few moments the snake appeared and seemed greatly to enjoy Scully's wind music. Since then all the Scullys, young and old, have been whistling to the snake, which has become quite tame.

Recently James Ryan, a native of Ulster, moved near the banks of the Morris canal and next door to the Scullys. Ryan was cutting grass in his yard Saturday when he chanced to whistle "Boyne Water." He had heard of Scully's snake and so was not surprised when a whipsnake appeared.

"You're a particular reptile, but I'll make you dance to my music," exclaimed Ryan.

Hearing the tune the angry Scully strode from his house and loudly whistled "The Wearing of the Green."

Out from the wood wriggled a whipsnake as much like the other as are two blackthorns of the same growth. The snakes attacked each other fiercely.

Scully and Ryan were about to pitch into each other when their wives intervened. The snakes doubtless would have fought to the death, but Scully grabbed Parnell's tail and Ryan seized William of Orange's tail and they tore the snakes apart. One made for the woodpile, the other crawled under a small shed.

GoldCoinTonics

6 Feeds for One Cent

Your stock needs tonics. They aid digestion, also cure and prevent diseases. They will make you extra profits.

Why is it that so all Gold Coin Stock Tonics are considered extra better than stock foods? Why is it that all the feeders and farmers who feed one and will not use stock foods are making and feeding Stock Tonics? So it is in the College. Prof. Thomas Shaw, Prof. Dinkel, Leander Farm Agt. and many officials endorse Gold Coin Tonics. Gold Coin Tonics increase digestion, stock only digests 65 per cent of what they eat. Gold Coin Tonics increase digestion, gives up the system, strengthen and build up the constitution, thereby making your farm animals worth more money.

A Large Chart like the above picture on Animal Digestion and a Valuable on Feeding and Diseases given free to all who call at our place of business.

The Truth About Digestion

The Record is for us that the digestive apparatus of the four different classes of animals are entirely different and therefore naturally quite different in treatment and diet-ment feeding. For example, clean shells and grits are good for fowl but would be bad for cattle. Science has proven that different medicines and foods act differently on different animals. Therefore it stands to reason that a tonic to be correct must be prepared according to the class of animals for which they are intended. That is just why Gold Coin Stock Tonics are prepared in four separate forms, namely, "Gold Coin Horse Tonic" for horses, "Gold Coin Tonic" for cattle, "Gold Coin Hog Tonic" for hogs and, "Gold Coin Poultry Tonic" for poultry.

NEBRASKA NEWS

MR. AND MRS. ISAAC WALDEN WRITE TO GOVERNOR.

PRAISE SCHOOL FOR BLIND

Have a Child Therein and Are Thankful for the Way in Which the State Take Care of the Little One—Other State News.

Like an oasis in a desert of anonymous letters finding fault with state institutions is the outspoken missive of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Walden to Governor Sheldon giving thanks for the good done by the state school for the blind at Nebraska City. The following letter directed to the governor may be taken as a Thanksgiving offering from two grateful parents to the people of Nebraska who pay the expenses of maintaining state institutions:

Carroll, Neb., November 18, 1907.

Hon. George L. Sheldon, Governor of Nebraska. Dear Sir: As Thanksgiving draws nigh we all stop to think what we have to be thankful for. Our little girl and only child, eight years old is blind. By kind friends' advice we sent her to the state school for the blind at Nebraska City. After visiting that wonderful institution and seeing the great headway our child makes in learning, we stop to marvel at our inconstancy to our Great Maker. We feel that we have a great deal to be thankful for. The people of this state cannot appreciate the wonderful good such an institution is doing for them until they are brought face to face with a terrible affliction.

Then another thing to be thankful for is that our child is under the care of such good Christian people as Mr. and Mrs. Moore. Not until there frequently and know they have the students' interests at heart. They treat them all as if they were their own. The children are well provided for in the way of food and beds. I shall certainly recommend it to people who have blind children and are afraid to send them away from home among strangers. Accept this note as a thanks offering from two grateful parents. Respectfully,

MR. and MRS. ISAAC WALDEN.

State Must Pay in January.

Remittances from counties is increasing and in a short time it is believed the treasury will be in good condition to meet the semi-annual school apportionment. This fund now amounts to $256,327 and collections will not cease until in the early part of December. The state treasurer must then certify to the state superintendent the amount available for the apportionment. Last year $251,000 was apportioned in December. The state auditor draws warrants later and receipts are sent to the various counties to be returned and signed and when these are returned the warrants are sent to the counties. All this will require until the first of the year and by that time it is believed the financial situation will be normal.

Truant Law in Force.

The Plattsmouth truant authorities have been putting forth every effort during the past six weeks to enforce the compulsory school attendance law, and they say that they are succeeding. If any children of school age who are not in attendance. An amusing incident occurred on the streets the other morning, when the truant officer rounded up a fourteen-year-old lad who was leisurely riding about on a delivery wagon with his thoughts far from educational subjects. He was compelled to alight, requested to go home and report at Superintendent Bumby's office at the opening of the afternoon session. He reported and has since been faithfully attending school.

Roller Skating at Tecumseh.

The roller skating craze has broken out anew in Tecumseh. Two young men from Omaha opened a rink and it seems as though some one is sliding about on the waxed floor any hour of the day. The club ladies have caught the craze and have private parties on certain afternoons. Other clubs have been formed and the rink is rented on certain evenings.

Passed Bogus Money.

The two men taken to Geneva from Wahoo on a charge of passing bad currency, pleaded guilty in Judge King's court Saturday, and were fined $75 each and costs amounting to about $80. In default of payment they will serve a term in jail. The men are wanted in two or three other places for similar offenses.

Rejected the Appraisement.

In the matter of the application of Boyd county settlers to buy state school lands, the board of educational lands and funds has rejected the appraisement and called for a new one. About 2,200 acres are involved. The land was appraised at from $7 to $15 an acre, but Land Commissioner Dodge believes it is worth from $20 to $32. The proposed appraisement will be made for the purpose of ascertaining the value of the land as it was in September, 1905, when the occupants applied for permission to buy it.

Bids Exceed Appropriation.

Five bids for the construction of three buildings at the Norfolk asylum were opened by the board of public lands and buildings but the law was so worded as made public and no action was taken pending an effort to get the contractors to substitute certain material in order to bring the cost within the appropriation. The lowest bid was said to be $97,000, not including heat and light, while the appropriation available is $87,000. As some of the bidders put in figures for different kinds of material an effort will be made to get them to bid on the same kind of material in the hope that the cost will be reduced. Brick may be substituted for stone in the proposed $60,000 wing. Dr. Young, superintendent of the institution, attended the meeting of the board. A store house and a cottage for patients are to be built besides the "wing." The latter is really a separate building, and is to be fireproof.

Ignores Mileage Book Law.

The Rock Island railroad has been reported as having failed to observe the Knowles law passed by the last legislature. It requires roads to sell 1,000 mileage books for $20, good in the hands of any one and for fares limited only by the amount of mileage in the book, good for use any time within two years after purchase. Chief Clerk Meggi of the governor's office called at the city ticket office in Lincoln, Thursday and asked to see one of the books. He was told that the company did not have any except the old style. It is said the company will have the new books December 15. Some other roads in this state are said to be ignoring the Knowles law in that their mileage books are good for one year instead of two years.

Girl Decides Election Tie.

The recent election it became difficult to settle on who should be road overseer for London and Brownville precincts, Nemaha county, each having a candidate. London gave the republican candidate, George Sanders, eighteen majority, while Brownville gave the democrat, J. W. Boice, eighteen. The names of the rival candidates were written on slips of paper and placed in a box and Miss Grace Kleckner, who assists in the county clerk's office, was permitted to draw one of the slips to decide who should be overseer. Mr Boice was the lucky man and a certificate of election was issued to him by County Clerk Teare.

Johnson County Land High.

It would seem that farms in Johnson county had about reached the highest prices they will ever go to, but increased prices are weekly reported. Last week Mrs. J. M. Osgood, who lives nine miles southeast of Tecumseh, sold her well-improved quarter section of land to her neighbor, Richard Utterman, for $10,000. Mrs. Osgood will not leave the farm, her family having lived on the place in question for thirty-five years.

Alcohol Plant Projected.

The projectors of the denatured alcohol plant to be erected in East Omaha have been in conference with the United States revenue authorities and no further doubt is felt but the plant will be built as soon as the season will permit. It is the presentation to manufacture the denatured alcohol from city garbage and arrangements to that effect will be made with the present contractors who have control of the city garbage and its disposal.

ATTEMPTS TO KILL

DISMISSED KANSAS CITY EDITOR SHOOTS WITH EFFECT.

SAYS HE WAS BEING ROBBED

Theatrical Manager O. D. Woodward Badly Wounded, and Managing Editor H. J. Groves Is Slightly Hurt.

A Kansas City, November 23, dispatch says: General Richard C. Horn, editorial writer on the Kansas City Post, today shot and seriously wounded O. D. Woodward, president of the company that publishes the paper, and then shot H. J. Groves, managing editor. Woodward was shot three times, twice in the right arm, one bullet passing through and breaking the bone, and once in the right side, the bullet shattering a rib and falling out of the wound. Groves sustained a flesh wound in the right hip.

The shooting took place in the editorial rooms of the Post. Horn, who is a stockholder in the paper and one of its founders, was discharged last night, the cause assigned being the financial business depression. This morning Horn bought a pistol, went to the office, and when Woodward appeared, Horn, raising the pistol, exclaimed:

"You scoundrel, you robbed me!" and began to shoot. Woodward fell, and Groves, who was in the room, tried to escape and was shot while running. Horn went to the street and surrendered to a policeman. Woodward is widely known as a theatrical manager and controls two theatres here, one in Omaha and one in Sioux City.

Horn, who was a brigadier general on Governor Stone's staff, has been prominent in Missouri state politics for many years and formerly published a newspaper at Marshall. He has been president of the board of managers of the Fulton asylum and chief statistician of the state bureau of labor.

At the police station Horn justified his action, saying his whole fortune was invested in the paper and he considered that he was being robbed. Horn is being held at the city jail with no charge filed against him.

Groves, who was shot in the fleshy part of the hip, is in a serious condition tonight. The surgeons fear blood poisoning may result from the fact that the bullet carried with it into the wound particles of foreign matter from the cloth of his suit. Owing to the nervous condition of the patient the surgeons will make no effort until tomorrow to remove the bullet, which is lodged in the muscles of the back.

Friends of General Horn tonight said that the shooting resulted from a disagreement in the editorial rooms that Groves and Woodward Horn with abuse and threatened him with violence before he used his pistol.

MANY NEW PLANS.

Schemes for Financial Relief Are Being Submitted.

Details of many new projects for improving the currency are being submitted to the president and Secretary Cortelyou and are receiving such attention as the other exigencies of the financial situation permit. Measures relating directly to the currency which are being discussed among bankers and incoming members of congress may be roughly grouped under four heads: A central bank of issue; a central organization of the existing national bank; the issue of additional circulation against various classes of bonds other than United States bonds, and the issue of circulation upon general assets with the security of a guaranty fund. The project of a central bank based upon the general outlines of the bank of France or the imperial bank of Germany, has apparently been attracting most attention of late than at any previous time in recent years. Senator Hansbrough of North Dakota, who is a member of the finance commission, has announced that he will introduce a bill for such an institution.

Rockefeller Adds to Gift.

The board of directors of the Rockefeller institute for medical research of New York have announced an additional gift from John D. Rockefeller of $2,500,000. The money is to form an endowment fund, the proceeds of which may be used in any way the directors see fit.

Russia Pays Japan.

Russia has wiped out the balance of her indebtedness to Japan arising from the war, the Russian embassy Saturday handing over to the embassy of Japan a check for $24,302,200. This represents the balance due Japan for the maintenance of the Russian prisoners.

Job Printers Will Strike.

A compromise has been effected between the typographical union of Fall River and three daily newspapers whereby the printers will receive an increase wage of $2 per week. The men demanded an increase of $3 per week and had threatened to strike. The employes of the job printing houses had been asked for an increase of 20 per cent. As the demand has not been granted the union voted to call a strike.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S LETTER

Written to Secretary Cortelyou, Approving the Bond Issue.

President Roosevelt, in his letter to Secretary Cortelyou, approving of the bond issue said:

"What is most needed just at present is that our citizens should realize how fundamentally sound business conditions in this country are, and how absurd it is to permit themselves to get into a panic and create a stringency by hoarding their savings instead of trusting perfectly sound banks.

"There is no particle of risk involved in letting business take its natural course, and the people can help themselves and the country most by putting back into active circulation the money they are hoarding.

"The banks and trust companies are solvent. There is more currency in the country today than there was a month ago, when the supply was ample. Fifty-five million dollars of gold has been imported and the government has deposited another $60,000,000.

"These are facts, and I appeal to the public to co-operate with us in restoring normal business conditions. The government will see that the people do not suffer if only the people themselves will act in a normal way. Crops are good and business conditions are sound; and we should put the money we have from circulation to order to meet the needs of our abounding prosperity.

"There is no analogy at all with the way things went in 1893. On November 30 of that year there was in the treasury but $161,000,000 in gold. On November 14 of this year there was in the treasury $337,000,000 in gold. Ten years ago circulation per capita was $23.23. It is now $33.23.

"The steps that you now take, the ability of the government to back these up, and the fact that not a particle of risk is involved therein, give the fullest guarantees of the sound condition of our people and the sound condition of the treasury. All that our people have to do now is to go ahead with their normal business in the normal fashion and the whole difficulty disappears; and this end will be achieved at once if each man will act as he normally does act and as the real conditions of the country's business fully warrant his now acting. Sincerely yours,

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

CONGRESS MAY ACT.

Members See Need of Financial Legislation.

There are now in Washington so few members of either house of congress who deal directly with financial legislation that it is impossible to make any definite prediction as to what course financial legislation will take at the approaching session. All who are there, however, agree that the conditions are such that some step must be done and the preponderance of opinion favors the view that relief legislation will be more prompt than has heretofore been predicted.

One reason for believing that there will be comparatively little difficulty in reaching an agreement on something to be found in the fact that the so-called conservative element in the republican party is in complete accord with the administration in the opinion that some form of relief is absolutely necessary in the present emergency, to say nothing of possible future conditions of the same character. The only practical difficulty which presents itself at this time is an agreement on the form of legislation.

SPEAKS FOR A CONFERENCE.

Italian Financier Wants an International Monetary Meeting.

An article in the Vienna Neue Freie Presse written by Signor Luzzati, Italy's foremost financial authority, urging the calling of an international conference to consider the gold crisis, is attracting attention in financial circles. Luzzati proposes that the treasuries and the leading banks of the world be represented. He favors action of late than at any previous time in recent years. Senator Hansbrough of North Dakota, who is a member of the finance commission, has announced that he will introduce a bill for such an institution.

MONEY MEN CALL

PRESIDENT HAS A CONFERENCE WITH BIG FINANCIERS.

MORGAN IS AT WHITE HOUSE

Subscriptions to the 3 Per Cent Certificates Being Received at Treasury Department in Large Numbers.

A Washington, November 22, dispatch says: J. Pierpont Morgan and George F. Baker, the latter president of the First National bank of New York, arrived here today for a conference with Secretary Cortelyou of the treasury department. At 10o'clock tonight Messrs. Morgan and Baker, accompanied by Assistant Secretary Robert Bacon of the state department, went to the White house to see the president. The object was not divulged, but was believed to be in relation to the financial situation. Upon leaving the White house at 11:25, after being with the president an hour and a half, Mr. Morgan on being asked what developments were, replied that everything in New York were reassuring. He said that everything possible was being done to relieve the money situation. He said his object in coming to Washington was to see Secretary Cortelyou in furtherance of the conference with the secretary in New York last week. He saw Secretary Cortelyou at the White house and called upon the president to pay his respects.

Mr. Morgan will return to New York tomorrow. He would not say whether he would again see the president before leaving for New York.

Secretary of the Treasury Cortelyou stated this evening that subscriptions to the 3 per cent certificates were being received in large numbers and that the issue was already a successful one. In addition to subscriptions from individuals, many of the national bank depositories in the crop-moving sections of the south and west are availing themselves of the opportunity to purchase the certificates, receive a large proportion of the proceeds as a deposit on approved securities and increase their circulation to the amount of the registered certificates, in the discretion of the secretary of the treasury. The beneficial results of this increase in circulation will be promptly felt as public confidence is restored, and the government will be enabled to make its collections and expenditures in such manner as not to be a disturbing influence in business relations. National banks entitled to do so will be allowed to increase their circulation by depositing currency for treasury certificates, which, however, would be retained in the treasury as security for the increased circulation.

Simultaneously the secretary would redeposit with the purchasing bank on state, municipal and railroad securities 75 per cent of the amount of currency put up for certificates.

The secretary also stated that a bank not entitled to additional circulation could put up currency for certificates and receive in return as a public deposit 75 per cent of the amount so deposited on approved state, municipal and railroad securities.

As to the purchase of treasury certificates by individuals, the secretary stated with emphasis that the department would endeavor to restrict allotments to persons who had drawn the money from the banks for the purpose of making the purchases. Persons who were hoarding money would be encouraged to invest in the certificates.

One of the most interesting bits of news today was the announcement that $750,000 in gold from the Japanese store of the metal had reached Honolulu on its way to the United States, being consigned to San Francisco banks.

Engagements of foreign gold to relieve the money stringency in the United States has passed the $30,000,000 mark. Lazard Freres announced that they had completed negotiations for an additional $2,000,000. Goldman, Sachs & Co. have engaged $80,000, a portion of it in Paris.

Goldman, Sachs & Co. announced the engagement of $750,000 and Kuhn, Loeb & Co., one of $1,250,000. Lazard Freres announced $1,000,000 from the Bank of France.

Heidelbach, Ickelheimer & Co. announced the engagement abroad of $2,000,000 in gold, part of which will come from France, making the total in the movement $81,150,000.

The United States has purchased $413,000 in bar gold and $200,000 in American eagles from the Bank of England.

MAY MAKE CUT OF MILLION.

Chairman Tawney Favors Reducing Year's Canal Estimate.

Eighteen members of the committee on appropriations of the national house of representatives who have been on a tour of inspection of the Panama zone returned to New York on the steamer Colon. Chairman Tawney, of the commission, said the commission found everything in the canal progressing in a most satisfactory way. He believed, however, that as a result of the inspection the appropriation for the coming year will be at least $1,000,000 less than the $32,000,000 asked for by the estimate.

"We visited the canal," said Mr. Tawney; "spent three days in the examination of the mechanical and engineering work; inspected the quarters, the hospitals and looked into everything in connection with the service in the zone. We found the employes were paid fully 50 per cent more than at home. At the same time the government furnishes quarters for them, a room for a single man and a house for the married men. We looked into the sanitary conditions and found them everything that could be desired. The work is progressing satisfactorily.

"The estimates for the fiscal year under consideration amount to $32,000,000, and of course no statement can be given out as to what action the committee will take, because no meeting or discussion has been held, nor can action be taken until the appointment of the new committee after the first Monday in December. However, it is expected that the appropriation will probably be a million less than asked.

CASH PAYMENTS POSSIBLE.

Chicago Banks Can Resume When Other Cities Are Ready.

Reports made to the national banks November 20 in Chicago in response to the call from the auditor of public accounts, showed that at the time of business November 19 $30,000,000 of deposit liabilities had been dropped since August 20, when the last previous figures were published.

It was further indicated that loans had been reduced by nearly the same amount, and that the banks had added $2,000,000 to their total cash resources, while they adopt liabilities were decreased about 8 per cent, the cash resources were swelled more than 3 per cent. The bankers of the city contend that the showing made by the state banking institutions is exceptionally strong and they assert there would be no difficulty in resuming cash payments in Chicago if banks in other cities were in a position to do the same.

MISSOURI BOX CAR MURDER.

Farmer on Way to Tennessee Killed and Robbed.

J. H. Fowlkes, of Donothan, Mo., farmer, was murdered and robbed of $1,000 in an Iron Mountain box car on a siding at Poplar Bluffs, Mo. His head was beaten to a pulp and the car in which his household goods were being moved from Donothan to New Berne, Tenn., was set on fire. The crime was discovered at 3 a. m., when the department was responded to an alarm and put out the fire in the car. Fowlkes' wife and children had preceded him to New Berne and he was riding in the car with his household goods and farm machinery.

SUFFER DEATH FOR INSULT.

Destruction of Czar's Picture Costs Three Men Their Lives.

The trial by a special military court martial of the Seventeenth regiment, on charges of mutiny and insubordination, came to an end at Odessa, Russia, November 20. Two sergeants and a private who had insulted a picture of Emperor Nicholas were sentenced to death and six other men were sent to the mines for life. Fifteen others were sent to the mines for ten years and the others were acquitted.

Will Investigate Banks.

WAS WILLING TO FORGET.

Young Man Bore No Grudge Against Proposed Father-in-Law.

That the young fellow had grit was evident from the fact that his business, from nothing, had in a few years begun to bring in a fairish income. He made up his mind to get married. The girl—although the daughter of a pompous country resident—agreed with him; but the father did not see things in the same light.

"What! You?" he yelled, angrily. "You want to marry my daughter! Why, it is only a few years since you were caddying for me."

"That's true!" interrupted the young man, "but I don't intend to let that stand in the way. The language you then used was certainly a trifle—say blue-tinted; but then you were under the influence of disappointment. After all, you know, a very bad golfer may make a very good father-in-law. Anyhow, I'm going to give you a chance."

BABY ITCHED TERRIBLY.

Face and Neck Covered with Inflamed Skin—Doctors No Avail—Cured by Cuticura Remedies.

"My baby's face and neck were covered with itching skin similar to eczema, and she suffered terribly for over a year. I consulted a number of doctors, and also to different colleges, to no avail. Then Cuticura Remedies were recommended to me by Miss Clara Sosap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Resolvent Pills, and to my surprise noticed an improvement. After using three boxes of the Cuticura Ointment, together with the Cuticura Soap, and three bottles of the Cuticura Resolvent Pills, I am pleased to say she is altogether a different child and the picture of health. Mrs. A. C. Brestlin, 171 N. Ashland ave., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 20 and 30, 1906."

Very Much Alike.

"See here, Pat," said his employer, "didn't you tell me that when you was out west the Indians scalped you and now you have your hat off to see you have a beautiful quantity of hair! You certainly told me so, didn't you, Pat?"

"Oi did sor," answered Pat, "but Oi bear in mind now that it was me brudder, Moike. It's thot much we be aloike, that Oi think Oi'm Moike an' Moike be me."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

If stove polish be moistened with benzine the blacking will last much longer and be brighter on the stove.

To remove cakes readily from tins place them on a wet towel or cloth immediately on taking them from the oven.

Chopped pecan nuts, almond and pine nuts may be sprinkled over lettuce and covered with French dressing for a dinner salad.

It is said that by sprinkling clothes if a whisk broom is used the clothes will be dampened much more evenly than by sprinkling with the hand.

If when salt and flour bags are emptied you will put them in the clothes hamper to be washed and boiled out, you will always have a supply of jelly strainers. The salt bag is just the thing for the odd glasses of jelly made all during the season.

The next time you make dumplings for an old-fashioned chicken, instead of mixing them with water, use some of the liquor in which the chicken has been cooked. The flavor will be much the same, and the dumplings will be found much more delicate.

TO COOK WESTPHALIA HAM.

Dish Requires Care and Attention to Turn Out Well.

In cutting a Westphalian ham for cooking, one should see that the slices are thick rather than thin; and that all, if more than one is to be cooked, are of about the same thickness. Soak them for an hour in sufficient milk to cover them; then wipe them dry and fry them on both sides, using a little fresh lard for the purpose. They must be cooked sufficiently, and this means that they must not be fried too long, the meat should be placed upon a hot platter when it is done enough, and bread crumbs should be poured into the hot fat in the frying pan. After they have fried for a few seconds, for it will not be long for them to brown slightly, moisten them with about two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and a teacupful of gravy or good beef stock. Boil the sauce for a few minutes longer; then add a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, with enough salt and pepper to season agreeably, and pour this sauce over the slices of ham. You will be astonished at the result.

Chow Chow.

One peck of green tomatoes, two quarts of string beans, one quart lima beans, one dozen ears of corn, one dozen carrots, one dozen onions, one dozen cucumbers, one head of cabbage, five green peppers, three cups sugar, one tablespoon salt, half pound ground mustard, one ounce of celery seed, half ounce of tumeric powder. Slice tomatoes, let stand over night, boil the beans, corn and carrots, chop cucumbers, cabbage and onions and add a little alum about the size of a bean in the vinegar.

Ironing Sleeves.

Be sure to have a small ironing board or sleeve board to iron sleeves on. They come the shape of a large ironing board, smaller at one end than at the other. The sleeve can be ironed in half the time it takes to do it on the large board and then there is no crease in the back of the sleeve. Tucked full sleeves of flannel may be ironed nicely on this sleeve board without mussing the other parts of the waist.

Chestnut Sauce.

Chestnut sauce is an excellent accompaniment to boiled fowl, and forms a pleasant change from parsley, usually served with it. Boil or bake a score of chestnuts in their shells, remove the white part in a mortar, to a paste, with two ounces butter, a pinch of sugar and one-half teaspoon salt. Mix slowly with it one-half pint of cream, stir over the fire till it boils.

Barley and Tomatoes.

Wash half a cup of barley and soak for four hours. At the end of that time put it into the double boiler with one quart of boiling water and one teaspoon of salt. Cook for one hour. Then add one-half can of tomatoes and a medium sized onion cut up fine. Let it cook half an hour longer. About ten minutes before serving mix in one tablespoonful of grated cheese and a piece of butter the size of a walnut.

To Mend a Torn Page.

How often a page which has a slight tear in it is left unmended until the tear gradually grows larger and then finally part of the page is gone altogether. The best way to mend a torn page is to paste it in a piece of thin waxed paper. The printing can be easily seen through this and the page is almost as strong as when new.

A Good Wall Covering.

Burlap makes a very satisfactory wall covering as it lasts a long time and can easily be freshened with a coat of paint. Red burlap walls are charming in a library, especially where the woodwork is in Flemish oak.

Home-Made Mucilage.

Get an ounce of gum arabic crystals and dissolve in boiling water. It should be of the consistency of thin cream, thin enough to pour easily. When cold it is ready for use.—Harper's Bazar.

Clean Patent Leather.

Patent leather shoes should be cleaned with milk, or a little sweet oil may be rubbed into them. The soles and heels of such shoes are, of course, to be cleaned with blacking.

A VALUABLE HOME RECIPE.

Will Break Up a Cold in 24 Hours or Cure Any Cough That Is Curable.

Mix one-half ounce of Concentrated oil of pine with two ounces of glycerine and a half pint of good whisky. Shake thoroughly each time and use in doses of a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours.

The renowned throat and lung specialist who established a camp for consumptives in the pine woods of Maine, and whose remarkable cures there attracted international attention, declares that the above formula is one of the very best remedies obtainable for an acute cold and that it will strengthen the lungs, relieve coughs and heal the bronchial tubes. Also, that it will cure any case of lung trouble not too far advanced if the patient will assist by plenty of outdoor exercise, inhaling deep, long breaths every few minutes.

The ingredients are procurable of any good prescription druggist and easily mixed at home and should take little attention from the busiest man. Concentrated oil of pine is put up for dispensing only in half-ounce vials securely sealed in tin screw top cases intended to protect it from heat and light. The oils sold in bulk and the patent medicines put up and labeled "Oil of Pine," are to be avoided because owing to their impurities they produce nausea and are useless as a medicine, besides they sometimes leave permanent kidney trouble.

WOMAN KNEW HUMAN NATURE.

Personal Experience Counted in Her Indorsement of New Pastor.

A Philadelphia congregation was called upon not long ago to choose a pastor. The last three ministers had been persona non grata with most of the parishioners; and before selecting another the congregation took pains to be pretty hard thinking. There was one woman of experience whose voice carried particular weight. Preacher after preacher was invited to the pulpit for a trial sermon, and all, in the final analysis, were rejected by the female arbiter. At last there came along a possible incumbent who met with her approval.

"The reason I am sure he will give satisfaction," she said, "is because he knows the right kind of a wife for a minister. She allows him to rant around all he wants at home and doesn't nag back. I found out a long while ago—shortly after I was married myself, in fact—that a man who hasn't that privilege at home works off his spleen elsewhere. A minister wants it on his congregation. That was why we couldn't stand the last preacher. This one will be all right. We won't hear a peep out of him."

And upon that unique recommendation the congregation really did give the man a call. According to last accounts both he and the congregation were doing well. The wife has not been heard from.

STILL AHEAD OF AUDIENCE.

Comedian Made Humor of What Was Approaching Tragedy.

"Willie" Collier, the comedian, was an irrepressible member of a barnstorming combination which, some ten years ago did the "tank" towns of the middle west.

The company had been doing a poor business for several weeks when a certain town in Illinois was reached. Just before the curtain went up that night, Collier was standing at the curtain "peep-hole," sizing up the audience.

"How's the house, Willie?" asked another player.

"Well," answered Collier, "there are some out there. But," he added, impressively "we're still in the majority!"—Judge.

Harper's Weekly.

A Delicate Task.

"The subject of the speech," said the orator solemnly, "do not tell the truth."

"Perhaps not," answered the editor, regretfully. "We do our best. But you must remember that sometimes it is difficult than to tell the truth in a way that won't put it up to some one to challenge your veracity."

WHAT WAS IT

The Woman Feared?

What a comfort to find it is not "the awful thing" feared, but only chronic indigestion, which proper food can relieve.

A woman in Ohio says:

"I was troubled for years with indigestion and chronic constipation. At times I would have such a gnawing in my stomach that I actually feared I had a—I dislike to write or even think of what I feared.

"Then a friend spoke of Grape-Nuts. I decided to try it. After a short time I was satisfied the trouble was not the awful thing I feared but was still bad enough. However, I was relieved of a bad case of dyspepsia by changing from improper food to Grape-Nuts.

"Since that time my bowels have been as regular as a clock. I had also noticed before I began to eat Grape-Nuts that I was becoming forgetful of where I put little things about the house, which was very annoying.

"But since the digestive organs have become strong from eating Grape-Nuts, my memory is good and my mind as clear as when I was young, and I am thankful." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little booklet, "The Road to Wellville," in packages. "There's a reason."

REAL CAUSE FOR GLADNESS.

How Young Lawyer Carried Comfort to Convicted Client.

An amusing story is told by Harper's Weekly at the expense of a prominent Baltimore lawyer, who, like most young attorneys, got his first case by assignment from the bench. His client had been indicted for murder, and his conviction was a foregone conclusion, as his guilt was unquestionable.

The result of the trial was a sentence to be hanged; but the man made an appeal to the governor for a pardon and was anxiously awaiting a reply thereto when his lawyer visited him in his cell.

"I got good news for you—very good news!" the young lawyer said, grasping the man's hand.

"Did the governor—is it a pardon?" the man exclaimed joyously.

"Well, no. The fact is the governor refuses to interfere. But an uncle of yours has died and left you $200, and you will have the satisfaction of knowing that your hanging will cost you—you know, was the comforting explanation.

Ingenious, But Unavailing.

Wilton, the five-year-old son of Lackaye, the actor, has inherited the brilliant mind for which his father is distinguished.

Not long ago Mr. and Mrs. Lackaye, who spent the summer at Shelter Island Heights, were invited to attend a card party and the young son was anxious to accompany them.

His mother insisted that he should remain at home with Mary, his governess, but Wilton persisted and as a final argument he said:

"Mamma, I think Mary is a Christian Scientist, and I might be taken sick in the night."

The argument was not effective.

Laundry work at home would be much more satisfactory if the right starch were used. In order to get the desired stiffness, it is usually necessary to use so much starch that the beauty and fineness of the fabric is hidden behind a paste of varying thickness, which not only destroys the appearance, but also affects the wearing quality of the goods. This trouble can be entirely overcome by using Defiance Starch, as it can be applied much more thinly because of its greater strength than other makes.

Tennis and Temperament.

In a tennis tournament (more truthfully than in a confessional) are revealed the good and bad qualities of human nature. The man who loses gracefully plays with a bad partner without afterwards alluding to his deficiencies, and honestly admires an opponent's skill, may be trusted not to fail in any other trial of life.—London Black and White.

TUMORS CONQUERED

The growth of a tumor is so insidious that frequently its presence is wholly unsuspected until it is well advanced.

So called "wandering pains" may come from its early stages or the presence of danger may be made manifest by excessive monthly period accompanied by unusual pain, from the abdomen through the groin and thigh.

If you have mysterious pains, if there are indications of inflammation or displacements, secure a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, right away and begin to use.

The following letters should convince every suffering woman of its virtue, and that it actually does conquer tumors.

Mrs. May Fry, of 836 W. Colfax Ave. South Bend, Ind., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I take great pleasure in writing to thank you for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I also took the Blood Purifier the alterative with the Compound. Your medicine removed a cyst tumor of four years' growth, which I had. Three physicians had declared I had. They had said that only an operation could help me. I am very thankful I followed a friend's advice and took your medicine. It has made me a strong and well woman and I feel it my duty to tell every sick woman I can."

Mrs. E. F. Hayes, of 26 Ruggles St., Boston, Mass., writes:

"I have been under different doctors' treatment for a long time without relief. They told me I had a fibroid tumor, my abdomen was swollen and I suffered with great pain. I wrote to you for advice, you replied and I followed your directions carefully and to-day I am a well woman. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound expelled the tumor and strengthened my whole system."

Mrs. S. J. Barber, of Scott, N. Y., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Sometime ago I wrote you for advice about a tumor which the doctors thought would have to be removed. Instead I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and to-day I am a well woman."

Mrs. M. M. Funk, Vandergrift, Pa., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I had a tumor and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound removed it for me after two doctors had given me up. I was sick four years before I began to take the Compound. I now recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound far and near."

Such testimony as above is convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for Tumor Growths as well as other distressing ills of women. Pinkham's Compound stands Bearing-down Sensations, Displacements, Irregularities and Backache, Kidney Complaints and Nervousness. That is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing so many women. Don't forget it and don't accept any substitute.

LAND LAND LAND

Land that grows 15 to 25 tons of sugar beets to the acre, 250 to 500 bushels of potatoes, 50 to 100 bushels of oats, 25 to 50 bushels of corn to the acre, and all kinds of fruit berries and melons in abundance. Rich, virgin soil, that grows immense crops like magic, when the water that the U. S. government provides at cost is dowsed upon it. There is no such thing as crop failure and irrigation. The former plants his crop and absolutely controls the amount of water he needs to put on it exactly the proper time, and he can grow more profitable crops than he can grow in any natural rainfall country, such as sugar beets and alfalfa. Government statistics show that irrigated land will produce from one third to one-half more crops than any natural rainfall country. Officials of the U. S. Reclamation Service say that the North Platte project, which will irrigate the land we are selling, is best adapted to irrigation of any land in the country, and the supply of water is unlimited.

Renters, Why pay from $3 to $10 an acre rent for land when you can get 160 acres of fine irrigated land for all or the same money you are paying for one year's rent of an eastern farm?

Come to the New Land and we will give you a farm that will produce better crops than the high-priced land you are renting. Come and see us and we will furnish you with water to irrigate 160 acres of the most productive land in the country at cost. I can secure you a fine 160-acre, irrigable farm for from $1 to $5 per acre.

Don't Wait! It won't last long. Thousands of people are flocking to this country, and the sooner you come the better bargain I can get you. Don't waste your life renting when only else's farm at a high price. Come to the rich and fertile North Platte valley, and make a home and fortune for yourself and family. Don't neglect this splendid opportunity. There's big money in it. This land that you can now secure for practically nothing, will be worth from $100 to $300 per acre as soon as irrigated and improved. It is better land than Colorado land, that is now selling at such a much. You can have all the work done on sugar beets for $35 an acre, and at the average yield of 20 tons an acre, you can clear $565 an acre and do no work on it yourself.

Farm Owners, Why farm $100 eastern land when you can buy irrigated land here from one-tenth to one-fourth the money, and get land that will produce larger crops and increase rapidly in value? Sell out and come to the rich North Platte valley. We are not pioneering. There are no hardships in this country—towns, railroads, schools and churches are right at hand. The Platte Valley is empirely irrigated and is given up to alfalfa and sugar beets. Railroad communications are unexcelled to all good shipping points. All kinds of produce, cattle, hogs and sheep command a high price. The Burlington R. R now runs through the valley and the Union Pacific is rapidly pushing work on a through line to the coast, which line also runs through the valley. Thousands and thousands of tons of hay are cut in the river bottoms every year.

Investors: We can sell you deeded land that is increasing rapidly in value and will continue to increase in value for years to come. Irrigated land is not subject to the depression in land values that always go with a period of crop failures in any natural rainfall country. No matter what the weather you can grow a crop every year under irrigation. I control the sale of thousands of acres of irrigated and dry lands, buy land and ranches. I can secure you any kind of land at a price that will make money quickly for you.

Celery and Cream Cheese Salad.

Mash a ten-cent cream cheese and work with a spoon, adding a little cream, until smooth. Mix with a half-cup fine-chopped, crisp celery, season with salt and make into little balls. Put half of an English walnut on each side of the balls, arrange on lettuce leaves, pour a little boiled salad dressing and dust with paprika.

Cream Cheese with Red Peppers.

Cream cheese, by the way, is one of the most popular cheeses this fall in the salad course. One of the newest ways of serving it is in combination with the little canned Spanish peppers. Chop the peppers fine, add to the cheese with salt to season, mix well, form into dainty balls and serve on lettuce leaves.

Be Polite.

Every lovely, kindly grace is worth cultivating and will add much to your happiness and usefulness when you are older. A rude, ill-mannered person is shunned everywhere in every circle, and unless the opposite habits are formed in early life they are seldom formed at all.

Want Women on Juries.

A movement is being made in certain quarters in France to bring about the representation of women on the juries. It long has been felt that to try women for crime before a court where the jury is composed entirely of men is an unnatural and unfair proceeding.

Why Robins Are Loved.

The belief that if a robin find a dead body it will at least cover the face with moss, and the immortal fairy story of Robin Redbreast's ministry to the poor little Babes in the Wood, have secured the protection of the whole robin race.

ROOT-GRANT WEDDING

YOUNG SOLDIER WEDS DAUGHTER OF SECRETARY OF STATE.

IS A BRILLIANT AFFAIR

President, Vice President and Other Distinguished Guests Present—Union Is Purely a Love Match.

Washington.—In the presence of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, the Vice-President and Mrs. Fairbanks, the justices of the supreme court and their wives, several senators, representatives and other distinguished guests, Miss Edith Root on Wednesday became the wife of Ulysses Simpson Grant 2d, Lieutenant United States Engineer corps.

The wedding was generally recognized as the capital as being the second in social and official importance that has taken place during the Roosevelt administration, there being only less interest in the marriage than in that which centered about the marriage of Miss Roosevelt to Mr. Longworth.

The bride is the only daughter of Secretary of State and Mrs. Elihu Root, while the groom, as everyone knows from his name, is the grandson of General Grant, the father being General Frederick Dent Grant of the army. Lieutenant Grant is a nephew of Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Stryker of Hamilton college, who was for several years the pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church at Rush and Superior streets, Chicago, and who was a college friend of Secretary of State Root, a friendship that is to be made the closer by the marriage of his accomplished son to the college president's daughter.

The tying of the bonds united two young people who had long enjoyed a love with each other. There is not a whisper in any quarter that position or name had the least thing in the world to do with the engagement.

The former Miss Root has always rather shunned the gayer life of the capital, and Lieutenant Grant has never been much fond of society. He is studious, and so is his bride and both are of domestic inclinations. It was a good old-fashioned American wedding, with no child's heart engaged in every detail.

The cards of invitation to the wedding read as follows:

> The Secretary of State and Mrs. Root request the honor and pleasure of the company of
>
> at the marriage of their daughter
>
> EDITH
>
> to
>
> LIEUT. ULYSSES S. GRANT, 2D.
> United States Corps of Engineers, on the afternoon of Wednesday, the 28th of November, at four o'clock at 1765 Rhode Island avenue, in the City of Washington.

Present at the wedding were Elihu Root, Jr., and Miss Alida Stryker, daughter of Dr. M. Woolsey Stryker, president of Hamilton college. Mr. Root, who is the oldest son of the secretary, will marry Miss Alida Stryker just ten days from the day that saw his sister married to Lieutenant Grant.

The invitations to the wedding were restricted as far as Washington was concerned to the persons who "must be invited." The local invitations were issued in the name, the bride having acted only the closest family friends and those persons who hold such official positions that they had to of necessity be bidden to be present.

The out-of-town invitations greatly outnumbered those given in Washington, but there were comparatively few of the out-of-town guests present. The wish of the secretary of state and his family, too, for that matter, was to have the wedding company as small as possible, and the ceremony marked by attending simplicity.

Of the groom's family there were present his father and mother, General and Mrs. Grant; his aunts, Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris and Mrs. Potter Palmer, and several of his first cousins, one of whom, Mrs. Sartoris' daughter Vivian, not long ago married Frederick Roosevelt Scovel, a cousin of President Roosevelt, and so, although time—of the leaving of Count Cassini, who passed it for the Russian embassy quarters, and its renting for residence purposes by Secretary Root, while the wedding party was compactively small, the house is big enough to hold a multitude. It stands on a triangular piece of ground with Scott circle at one end, Fifteenth street at the other end and a street on each side.

Lieutenant Grant and Miss Root will remain in the great south room on the first floor of the residence, a room which is as long as the house itself. It is a huge drawing-room such as in the days when the Countess Cassini presided over social affairs in the residence as the "yellow room."

Miss Root had no bridesmaids. Several of Lieutenant Grant's classmates and other army officer friends were present at the wedding, and his cousin, Potter Palmer, Jr., of Chicago, was his best man.

After the wedding Lieutenant Grant and his bride left for a short honeymoon trip. They will go to Clinton, N. Y., to be present, December 7, at the wedding of the bride's brother and Miss Stryker. From there Lieutenant Grant will take his bride directly to Boston, where in the suburb of Brookline there is a pretty little house awaiting their occupancy.

The house was selected by the bride whose mother recently has interested herself in furnishing it completely for housekeeping. Lieutenant Grant was ordered a short time ago from Washington to Boston to carry on his engineering duties under the direction of Major Edward Burr, who has charge of the river and harbor work in the Massachusetts coast.

Miss Root made her debut in New York several seasons ago and has twice been a cabinet girl, although she was extremely young when her father was secretary of war in President McKinley's second administration. She is a gifted musician, an accomplished musician, and is devoted to outdoor sports. She is an expert horsewoman, and her smart trap is familiar to all the uptown sections of Washington.

Lieut. Grant has served as military aid at the white house during the last two seasons, acting with Capt. Archibald Butt, who was lost on the Titanic. He then spent four years in a state military school founded by Empress Maria Theresa. He entered Columbia college in New York on his return to the United States and was graduated from there when he at once joined his father in Porto Rico, where he had his first experience in warfare. At the end of a year he entered West Point, graduating ninth in his class of 1902. He was ordered at once to the Philippines, where he did good service for three years, and, returning to the United States, was ordered to Washington barracks.

Plagues of Nerve Sufferers.

There is a class of well-defined "phobias," as they are called, with which nerve sufferers are plagued. "Monophobia," or fear of being alone; "cæstrophobia," or fear of closed-in crowds or of broad open spaces; "insposcs; a "gonorphobia," or fear of somniaphobia," or fear of not going to sleep, and many others. The one great remedy for all these and similar mental disorders, writes Dr. Samuel McComb in Good Housekeeping, is

HELPS THE TRUSTS

ERROR TOO FREQUENTLY MADE BY THE FARMER.

BUYS THROUGH MAIL ORDER

And in Doing So Contributes Toward Capital's Concentration in the Big Financial Centers, to His Great Injury.

Lord bless the American farmer. He is one of the nabobs of creation and he hardly knows it. In a single year his work adds to the wealth of the nation more by a hundredfold than all the mines of the country. He gives to the world twice the value in crops and produce than the output all the factories and mills of the nation produce. He supplies the lubricant to keep the wheels of progress in motion, and if he only knew it could buy and sell a few hundred Rockefellers and still have enough left to purchase a few kingdoms as large as Spain. Yet it must be admitted that this great American farmer needs some enlightenment as to common economics. While he is the king of wealth producers, and a lot of it sticks to his fingers, he is also a philanthropist and don't know it. He works hard to produce his wealth and then patronizes the machinery that lands a goodly portion of it in the coffers of the Captains of Finance who dictate things in Wall street and elsewhere; in fact he assists the trust magnates in the money required to build up combinations that the good-philanthropic farmer is compelled to support. He does it and he knows not that he does it. Every time the good tiller of the soil sends away to the big mail order house for his supplies, he does his mite toward capital concentration in the great financial centers, and his little mite seeks a resting place among the money held in reserve to feed the wants of the trusts. It is about time western farmers take a tumble to cold facts, and come to a realization that their interests are best subserved by keeping their earnings as close to their homes as possible.

Trade at Home.

Patronage of the big mail order houses is founded largely on shortsightedness. In one way it is akin to patronage of the get-rich-quick schemes. The buyer believes he is getting something for his money that is really not given, and fails to realize either where his money goes or what he gets for it.

No one would think of telephoning to a furniture store and asking the dealer to send up a dozen dining room chairs, without having previously examined the chairs, or of ordering a dress or pair of shoes or a stove in this way. Yet that is practically what the patron of the mail order house does. He orders by mail without having seen the goods or having any idea of their appearance or character. He is taking a long chance. Two things on which he has to base his conception of the articles ordered is a description in the catalogue and the cut given there. In other words, the attractiveness of the offer made depends on the promises of the firm and the engraver's art. It is possible to make a very creditable cut from a flimsy and worthless model. It is possible to describe an atrocity in a way that makes it appear most desirable. Incidentally it seems to be always possible to find some one who will accept the promise and cut at their face value without properly discounting the end on the credulity of these people the mail order business thrives. A little investigation and comparison will convince the average farmer that his money will go further and yield greater returns if invested right here in Beverly, despite the nefarious values offered by outside firms. The articles sold by the mail order houses must be compared as they really are, and not as they are reputed to be in the catalogues.—Beverly (Mass.) Times.

Patronizing Home People.

An exchange says that war has been declared on the catalogue houses of Chicago and other cities by the 500 retail merchants of the west. In one of the most striking economic movements ever known the small dealers are fighting, they say, for their lives. The mammoth institutions, employing thousands of men, doing their business entirely through the medium of their bulky catalogues, spending no money in the communities whence they derive wealth, the millions of dollars of patronage, are forcing increasing numbers of home merchants to the wall and so their opponents claim, are making commercial graveyards of once prosperous towns. People living in country towns ought to get wise and trade at home.—Philadelphia Episcopal Recorder.

Advertise What You Have to Sell.

After all that has been said or can be said about the big mail order houses the fact remains that they get the business by thorough and persistent advertising, showing cuts of goods and giving prices. If home merchants would take the same methods, much of the trade now going to the mail order houses in cities would come to them. A man we know recently made up a list of tools and hardware from one of the mail order catalogues and took it to a home dealer to get prices. He was surprised to find that he could get the same articles at home for less money and save the express charges, and also see the goods he was buying.—Clearfield (Pa.) Spirit.

USE MORE PRINTERS' INK.

Good Advice to the Small Merchant Who Would Succeed.

The mail order question is one that is of perennial importance to nearly every one of the smaller cities and villages in the land, although the danger that these institutions were bound to annihilate the smaller stores does not seem as imminent now as it did a few years ago. For instance, since the passage of the pure food law by congress many, if not all of the mail order people, have discontinued the selling of groceries. It was plain in this case that there was a considerable amount of adulteration in the goods sold or the mail order houses would not have taken this step.

There are aspects of the mail order question which may well give hope to the local dealer. The facts in the case are that the catalogue houses are not enjoying an unmitigated clinch, for they are handicapped in many ways in which the country merchant is not. For example, the entire country press almost without exception is closed to mail order advertising. Here is the never-ending task that the small merchant, although sometimes he is somewhat slow in taking advantage of it. If he is fossilized and walking in the ways of his grandfathers, and a business way, figuratively speaking, he will spring that ancient chestnut that "it doesn't pay" to advertise. But let the newspaper man take an ad from a mail order house and place it in the remotest corner of his paper, and this same business man will be apt to object very strongly.

The mail order houses have advanced their business by advertising. What kind of courage it takes to wear such a looking hat. But she did the best she could.—Atchison (Kan.) Globe.

The mail order houses have appropriated practically only the magazines and the catalogues to tell their story. If the merchants of to-day expect to cope with the mail order houses and hold a fair share of the trade that they ought to get, it means that they will have to use printers' ink and advertising space. Furthermore, they will have to advertise intelligently and in accordance with twentieth century standards. Don't spring the ancient gag about having been in business so many years. The people don't care a rap how long you have been in business. They are interested mainly in two things: First, what goods have you got? Second, what do they cost? Unless your advertising deals with these questions, it will be as sounding brass or tinkling cymbal. The mail order houses have built up trade by doing just these things, and their glowing descriptions and prices have done the business.—San Antonio (Tex.) Light.

Individual Vs. Corporation.

A well-known eastern financier, for some time the president of a large trust company, recently resigned, giving as his reason that a man, according to his belief, can do better work for himself, and that no man can really earn a salary equal to what he can make in business for himself. In these days when all kinds of business are being concentrated into corporations, the number of trades in which a man may engage in business for himself have become so few that for a great bulk of men, even those having the mental equipment which in other years would have been sufficient to make them their own masters, there is now no other opening than that of service for some corporation. For the bulk of the people, outside of those in agricultural pursuits, it is service for the corporation or no work at all. This truth is becoming more evident day by day. Even the farmers are feeling the grasp of corporate methods. It is true that millions must have the products of his lands and his hands, but the corporations are the medium by which they get through, and from him they exact their tithings. It is to the interest of the farmer as well as the laborer to work into that sphere to prevent as far as possible further encroachment of organized capital, and this can be done by as far as possible buying the necessities that you earn in circulation in the community where earned, and thus prevent the further concentration of money and of business in the great cities.

Put in Good Word.

Lord Arlington was arrested the other day in England for speeding his auto. Said the arresting policeman in court the next day: "His lordship was most civil; in fact, it was a pleasure to meet him, and that is more than can be said of most autoists." Still, his lordship had to pay a fine of $15 and costs.

He has been raised from the second to the first rank and appointed a director of the Southern railroad, with headquarters at Shanghai. He will also act as traffic superintendent.

Large Number of Nets Used.

According to Consul-General Soren Listoe, of Rotterdam, about 100,000 nets are in use during the herring season by the 800 fishing smacks of the Netherlands. A net lasts about three seasons, but owing to losses from storms and other causes, between 40,000 and 50,000 new nets are purchased annually.

Dogs in Paris.

In Paris dogs are treated as well as human beings. A cemetery for them, mobile togs when they go motoring, they have a hospital, and they even have a good-sized cemetery, with monuments and headstones and inscriptions and mortuary wreaths.

SERIAL STORY

FRIDAY THE 13TH

A Novel by

THOMAS W. LAWSON

(Copyright, 1907, Doubleday, Page & Co.)

"This was easy, because Barry Conant, not knowing of my newly invented trick, could buy only what he could pay for on the morrow, or, at least, what he believed his clients could pay for while I, not intending to deliver what I sold—unless by smashing the price to a point where I could compel those who had bought to resell to me at millions of dollars—sold at—cold sell unlimited amounts of literally unlimited amounts. When Barry Conant had bought all that he thought he could pay for, he was obliged to beat a retreat in front of my offerings, and I was able to smash, and smash, until the price was so low that he could buy no more. But when he had bought as collateral, borrow sufficient to pay me for what I had sold him. Then he was compelled to turn about and sell what he had bought from me, and when I had rebought it for ten millions less than I had sold it for, the trick had been returned. I had sold him 100,000 shares say at 220. He had sold them back to me say at 120, and he stood where he had stood at the beginning. He had none of the 100,000 shares. Both of us stood, so far as stock was concerned, where we had stood at the beginning. But the difference was the result; others again where twenty was looked for gave twenty-two to twenty-five. One special patch south of town on J. M. McFarlane's farm went as high as thirty bushels to the acre. At Sheho, Saskatchewan, oats yielded from 60 to 65 bushels to the acre. Sam Sparling threshed 3,500 bushels from forty acres. The sample is good and weighs well. At Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, W. Bibby threshed 97 bushels of oats to the acre, and two others were but little behind. Wheat here reached 35 bushels. At Portage la Prairie, Manitoba, from a quarter section all in crop, Alex. McKinnon of Ingleside threshed an average of 33 bushels No. 1 Northern. I. J. Grant had 190 acres, yielding 6,000 bushels of the same grade. These illustrations have been from widely distant districts (and thousands of others could be produced) show that the year 1907 has not felt the serious effects from severe winter, late spring, or unfavorable conditions during the growing season that might have been anticipated. Next morning went back to the stores and "tried on" once more; and thought, and thought, and then bought a hat which is so grotesque and hideous that her relatives and friends blush with shame every time they see her wear it, and strangers stare at her, wonder-

WESTERN CANADA A WINNER

THE CROP OF 1907 IS AN EXCELLENT ONE.

Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta Farmers Doing Well.

The interest that Western Canada has aroused for some years past is growing in intensity. The conditions of the crop of 1907 are such that results can be spoken of with some degree of certainty. The yield of grain will be about 30,000,000 bushels and the price the farmers will realize for it will be upwards of seventy million dollars. The oat crop was good in most places, and the crop of barley will be very remunerative. Those who know of the generally unsatisfactory conditions during the seeding, growing and ripening period in the United States during the past season will look with righteous distrust on any statement intended to give the impression that western Canada conditions were so much different. Generally, they were not, but the conditions of a highly recuperative kind, long and continuous sunshine, are conditions possessed by Western Canada and not possessed by any other country on the Continent. This is why it is possible for the newspaper man to take an ad from a mail order house and place it in the remotest corner of his paper, and this same business man will be apt to object very strongly.

GoldCoin Tonics

6 Feeds for One Cent

Your stock needs tonics. They aid digestion, also cure and prevent diseases. They will make you extra profits

Why is it that all Gold Coin Stock Tonics are considered at much better than usual value? Why is it that all big feeders and farmers who do not and will not use stock foods are using and feeding Stock Tonics? Why is it that College Professors, Farm Experts are using and feeding Stock Tonics? Why is it that College Professors, Farm Experts and State Officials are using Gold Coin Tonics? Because they get results. Because Stock only digests 35 per cent of what they eat. Gold Coin Tonics increase the digestion, thereby making your feed go further. Strengthen and build up the constitution, thereby making your farm animals worth more money.

The Truth About Digestion

Did it ever occur to you that the digestive apparatus of the four different breeds of farm animals are entirely different and therefore naturally require different treatment and different feeding. For example: Gold Coin Cattle Tonic gives cattle just what they need for cows. Science has proven that different medicines and different foods act differently on different animals. Therefore it stands to reason that a medicinal Stock Tonic must be prepared scientifically to the class of animals for which it is intended. That is just why Gold Coin Stock Tonics are prepared in four forms, viz: "Gold Coin Horse Tonic" for horses; "Gold Coin Cattle Tonic" for cattle; "Gold Coin Hog Tonic" for hogs and "Gold Coin Poultry Tonic" for poultry

Makes Hens Lay

Geese: Get a pail of your famous Egg-A-Day Poultry Tonic and 100 of my hens have never before laid as many eggs as they have during the months of October and November. Will recommend it to my neighbors. My flock is a mixed lot of Brown Leghorns, buff Orpingtons and White Leghorns crossed with White Wyandottes. Your Egg-A-Day Tonic is just keeping them for the amount of eggs they lay.

Judge D B Searle Says:

Gentlemen: Your animal tonics are all right. I highly value your Gold Coin Tonic-like pours. My chickens that ate pests and leaves . . . not only relished but will . . . Your Egg-A-Day Tonic makes the stock raisers more profitable. . . . I greatly used Gold Coin Stock Tonics while conducting my stock ranch at the Soldiers' Home, and will say that I have full confidence in your goods certainly possess high merit.

Prof. Thomas Shawe Opinion

Gold Coin Stock Food Company, St. Paul Minn.
The ingredients used in the manufacture of Gold Coin Stock Tonics have been subjected to me and my opinion asked with reference to the influence same are likely to exert on animals. With reference thereto I may say that they are of a character which would be helpful to animals put on a ration of dry fodder. Preparations of the kind used for the different classes of animals named in your letter would be helpful in toning up horses when predisposed thereto by such ingredients should be found in the formulas. Ingredients of the character named are worth and aiding digestion to cattle, and other stock in low condition or out of flesh by excessive feeding.

Rheumatism

I have tested a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism. Not a preparation that will relieve for the moment (but a chronic relief) and then come back worse than before, but a remedy that is intended to drive the disease entirely from the system. I have proved its merits in my own case and in the case of others. I am a Chemist in the City of Racine, Wis., and have been for many years. I have a good laboratory and all the necessary appliances for making chemical tests. I have had many years' experience in the drug business and have studied Rheumatism in all its forms. I have found a remedy that will cure Rheumatism in any form. I will not take your money unless I cure you. I will not even ask you to pay for medicine used. I will not even ask you to pay for medicine used. I will, and in confidence recommend my remedy to you for what it will do for you. NEBRASKA NEWS

OFFICIAL CANVASS BY THE STATE CANVASSING BOARD.

JUDGE REESE HAS 24,406

Large Figures for Regents—W. C. Rogers, Socialist, to Serve as Regent Till Next January.

According to the compilation of the state canvassing board made recently, Judge Reese, republican candidate for judge of the supreme court, received a majority of 24,406 over George L. Loomis, fusion candidate. Judge Reese was at the head of the ticket and bore the brunt of the political contest. The regents received larger majorities. C. B. Anderson, republican, defeated John L. Sundeen, the fusion candidate, by 32,916. George W. Copeland, republican candidate for regent, defeated R. J. Millard, the democratic candidate, by 24,274. Railway Commissioner H. T. Clarke, jr., who had no opposition except from the prohibition party, received a total of 114,094 out of a total of 203,752 cast at the election. Samuel Lichty, the prohibition candidate for railway commissioner, received 14,544, but this does not represent the straight prohibition vote. Julian D. Graves, prohibition candidate for judge of the supreme court, received 5,158 votes. Lucian Stebbins, socialist candidate for supreme judge, received 3,200, while John H. Von Steen, prohibition candidate for regent, received 5,573. J. N. Carter, socialist candidate for regent, received 4,509, and O. C. Porter, socialist candidate for regent received 4,467.

W. C. Rogers, socialist candidate for regent to fill a vacancy, received 34,495, an indication that fusionists and others cast their ballots for him. He will receive a certificate of election showing that he may serve until the first week in January. After that the two republican candidates will take the reins of office.

Decision of the Court Necessary.

Secretary Clark Perkins of the railway commission recently paid into the state treasury $909 in fees received for making transcripts and certified copies of records in hearings filed by the commission. The money cannot be drawn from the state treasury without a specific appropriation according to the constitution and under the writing of the auditor's office and the treasurer's department, the money paid in by the commission must remain in the treasury until its disbursement is authorized by an act of the legislature or by a decision of the supreme court.

The money paid in will be separated, however, under the provisions of the railway commission law as a "general fund for the expenses of the commission." Treasurer Brain is of the opinion that the term "general fund" should go into the general state fund, but he has consented, after consulting the attorney general, to keep it separate. The question of drawing such money from the treasury for the payment of expenses of the commission may become an important one if the $10,000 a year allowed by the legislature for the purpose should prove short. The commission has paid out for extra clerk hire between $500 and $600 in order to earn fees amounting to $909, it may be. Certified copies and transcripts are desired by parties to complaints the $10,000 a year may not be sufficient to pay all expenses.

River and Harbor Delegates.

Governor Sheldon has appointed C. E. Saunders of Omaha, John F. Lacey of Fremont, A. C. Moore of Stockton and Thomas L. Kennedy of Cook delegates to the national river and harbor congress to be held at Washington, D. C., December 9 to 11. The motto of this convention is $50,000,000 annually for the improvement of "deserving" rivers and harbors. Governor Sheldon attended the deep waterway convention at Memphis and if possible will attend the Washington congress. He desires to further the improvement of the Mississippi, Missouri and other rivers and harbors so that may be deserving, if the improvement will help commerce and adjust railroad rates.

Bad Fire Near Tecumseh.

The fine two-story farm house of James Moyer, one mile west of Tecumseh, together with its contents, was burned to the ground. The family was away from home when the fire broke out and the cause is unknown. Neighbors discovered the fire and gathered at the scene, but the fire was so far advanced that but little was saved.

Valentine Man Is Shot.

R. J. Wright of Neligh was accidentally shot while hunting with a party south of Valentine. He and another hunter started out together and then separated and in some way lost track of the exact location of his friend when the latter came up behind of Wright and fired, the shot entering at which the other man shot Wright in the arm and face. He was taken to town at once and given medical attention. It is thought that the wound will prove slight, but that one shot which went close to his eye may cause trouble.

GIRL MEETS HORRIBLE DEATH.

Grand Island Miss Caught in An Elevator Shaft.

Frances, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pool, residing on the Dahlstrom ranch, ten miles from Grand Island, was killed in a horrible manner. While at play in the yard her dress caught in the cog wheel on a water power shafting running to an elevator. No one was about. Just as William Maynard and William Huebner residing in the vicinity were about to leave the place they saw something white being twirled around the shafting so rapidly that they could not distinguish what it was. The attention of Mr. Pool was called to it, the shafting was stopped and the remains of the little girl were taken from the machinery. The cog wheel had caught the dress near the neck and the poor little one's feet in constantly hitting the ground, only eighteen inches from the shafting had worn grooves in the soil. The neck was broken, both arms and one of the lower limbs were broken and the little feet almost worn away by constantly being hurled against the soil. It is believed that the unfortunate child was in the shafting fully ten minutes. Death or at least unconsciousness is believed to have been almost instantaneous.

ARRESTED, TAKES OWN LIFE.

North Platte Man a Suicide in the County Jail.

Mark Schrader committed suicide at the Lincoln county jail, North Platte, by taking strychnine. Mr. Schrader for some time had been in the real estate business but was not successful. Recently he was arrested charged with having forged a check on which he borrowed $30 at Lamb's grocery store. He was bound over to the district court.

While vainly endeavoring to secure bond he purchased the poison and secreted it. stolen secreted it. The unfortunate man was of an excellent family and was about thirty years of age. Following the coroner's inquest the body was taken to Gandy for interment.

GRINDS POWDER IN MILL.

Nebraska City Boy Does It, and Is Still Alive,

Harry Redfield, an eighteen-year-old son of Mrs. Charles Redfield, Nebraska City, lost his left hand and came near being killed. He was making powder and grinding the chlorate of potash in a coffee mill, when it exploded, tearing off his hand, blowing up the table and wrecking that portion of the family home. The boy experimented before and did not know the danger incident to handling things of this kind. The chief surgeon was compelled to amputate the arm at the elbow and may have to cut it off at the shoulder. He is badly burned on the right side of the body in a number of places. He will survive.

Land Appraisement.

Land Commissioner H. M. Eaton has returned from Scott's Bluff where he looked after the re-appraisement of state land ordered re-appraised by the board of public lands and buildings for the purpose of sale to the persons who squatted on the land. The sales was open to settlement. The new price set by the county officers ranges from $20 to $25. The appraisement which the state board refused to approve ranged from $7 to $15. Land Commissioner Eaton had contended that the land was worth from $20 to $22. The settlers do not like to pay the price set by the appraisers, but it is believed the deal will go through and the state will sell on twenty years' payments, 7 per cent interest, which is the legal rate. The land will be sold by the state under a special act of the legislature, the validity of which some attorneys doubt.

Pay for Third Regiment Officers.

Adjutant General Colwell has received notice from B. F. Harper, auditor of the war department, that $5,281.81 has been allowed to pay for the field officers, staff, band and company officers of the Third Nebraska infantry for service prior to the muster into the United States service in the Spanish-American war. Some claims have been disallowed, but the names of the officers whose claims were reduced or disallowed will not be known until it is received from Washington. The officers as a rule have asked for no pay, alleging that they received full pay for their time, but others pushed the claims through a court of claims at Washington.

Loss you need the money. Friends may sympathize but if you want a company which pays cash try the Farmers and Merchants Ins. Co., established since 1888. Over a million dollars already paid to patrons.

Nebraska's Hay Crop.

"This has been the biggest year for hay raisers in the history of Nebraska," said Labor Commissioner Ryder, speaking of the figures he compiled in his office "The production of tame hay shown by our tabs amounts to 1,617,823 tons. At $5.50 per ton, the money value of this is $10,514,849.50. The wild hay made 2,459,156 tons, and allowing $6.66 per ton this represents an income to the hay raisers of $13,496,668. Thus the total value of the tame and wild hay harvested in Nebraska this year is $24,001,407.50.

Women Lack Dignity.

An English periodical writer, that is, a writer for periodicals, says that women do not know how to walk, and get along like mechanical toys. "The deplorable lack of dignity in women," he says, "is one cause of the bad walking." Our forbears were dignified and the oriental of to-day has inherited the trait, but the modern woman has it not.

Drunkenness in 1600.

An English traveler, writing in the year 1600, said that there were more saloons in Dublin than in any other city in the world. The Irish, he said, always got drunk at wakes, weddings and fairs. The English were not far behind them, and over on the continent alcohol was also making great headway. Here in America, too, drinking was becoming a popular sport.

Cheaper Rate Than the Doctor's.

A few years ago on Sutter street in San Francisco an ambitious young Japanese boy began a little store stocked with goods imported from his native land. In his show window was a stack of decorated mush bowls and leaning against their front was a cardboard sign bearing in stenciled letters this announcement, "Fine Bowels, 50 cents a set."—Lippincott's.

Pantomimic Golf.

To play behind a foursome composed of Frenchmen one must resign all attempt to play golf and in place of it you must feel that you are compensated by watching the pantomime of the quartet preceding you. Trust me, you will be amply repaid. That is, if nature has endowed you with a sense of humor.—Golf Illustrated.

Plain Living.

How totally different is the effect of a plain, rational and nutritious diet upon the man who eats to live. His appetite requires no pampering, and yet he enjoys his food, and at the same time, what the gourmand is deprived of, he is thoroughly alive to all the pleasures of life and able for its duties.—Health Record.

In Regular Order.

Two men met at the gate of the cemetery and each with excessive politeness bowed to the other to pass in before him. After a few minutes of this, when neither would give way, the younger of the two called out: "You are the elder of the two, so naturally you ought to go in first."

Many Nations Have Bagpipes.

The Assyrians are the first nation mentioned as using the bagpipes, and they introduced them into India, though they were probably indigenous over nearly all Asia. Certainly the Chinese had them. They are quite as common in Italy and Afghanistan today as in Scotland.

Sharp Tongues.

Men ought to find the difference between sauciness and bitterness. Certainly he that hath a satirical vein, as he maketh others afraid of his wit, so he hath need be afraid of others' memory.—Francis Bacon.

When the Lamp Misbehaves.

If a lamp should ever be overturned, do not attempt to put out the flame with water, for it will simply spread it. Instead, throw down flour, sand, garden earth or salt, any of which will have the desire effect.

Slightly Mixed.

This is told as an actual happening to a Kansas man. He and his family had gathered around the supper table and all heads were lowered for him to ask a blessing. Then the telephone bell rang. The man answered it; and, coming back to the table, again bowed his head, but again the telephone rang He answered that call, then for the third time seated himself and, bowing his head, said "Hello!"—Lippincott's.

Sin and the Nose.

Some industrious deliver into things has called attention to a curious association between the letter sin and the nose. The following words, beginning with the letter sn, commonly all have some connection with that organ: Snout, snar, sneeze, snast, snore, snuffsnarl, snuffy, snort, sneer, snivel, sniff, snuff, sniff, snuffle, snooze, snuffle, snivel.

Typewritten Documents Last.

The tests of the German government have shown great variations in the durability of typewritten documents, but with the best ribbons the work seems as lasting as that written by hand with the best writing ink. While some German ribbons proved good, those of American manufacture showed a higher general average in quality.

First Use of the Cigar.

Not until 1790 were cigars introduced into Europe, when the first factory being established at Hamburg in 1795. The peninsular war served to familiarize the officers in the French and English armies with the cigar, which they found to be the constant friend and invariable companion of all Spaniards.

Women and Elevators.

A man who has a faculty for statistics has made out a statement to the effect that it takes twice as long to transport women in elevators as men, because they take longer to get off and on, and he says on that account the elevator service is slower where women are carried up and down.

Cause of Gray Hair.

Metchnikoff, the famous bacteriologist, says the cause of grayness in the hair is found in the hair of wandering cells, resembling the white blood corpuscles. These cells, assisted by other cells, the aggressive cells, bore into the hair, seize upon the granules of pigment and destroy them.

Moments Rightly Used.

Burns wrote the most beautiful poems in his spare moments while working on a farm. Grote wrote his "History of Greece" during the odds and ends of time snatched from his duty as a banker. "Moments are the golden sands of time," if rightly used.

Black Potatoes.

A late novelty in the way of a black potato has just reached the vegetable markets. The potato was sent from the Congo, and is said to have an excellent flavor. It is to be used for ornamental cookery.—What-to-Eat.

Better Collateral.

The diamond reef in Pike county, Missouri, may be the "real thing," but the tomato crop in little Delaware looks like better collateral. Three million dollars in tomatoes makes a brave show.—New York Sun.

Lead Us Not Into Temptation.

Cecil was much impressed by the Sunday school teacher's plea for missions and decided to save his pennies for the heathen. He made a great effort and failed once or twice. Then he prayed. "Oh Lord," he begged, "please help me save my money, and —dont' let Jim, the peanut man, come down this street."—Lippincott's.

Hypnotism.

The observations and experiments of those who have made hypnotism and hypnotic phenomena their especial study all tend to show that, while the operator has a great control over the hypnotized person, it is by no means complete, even during the deep somnambulic states.—London Hospital.

The Simple Life.

The simple life, then, seems to come to this—the attachment of oneself in absolute devotion to the great things, to the real and the true things, the embarking of our whole fortunes in them, whatever may happen. What we eat, drink or wear will not greatly trouble us.—Christian World.

The Practical View.

"Why don't I make him keep his distance?" repeated the practical young woman. "If you knew men better you wouldn't ask that question. There isn't one man in a thousand who will keep his distance unless seeking his money also. What is a person to do?"

Jewish Needs Watching.

Sharp-shinned hawk, a miniature Cooper's hawk, is fully as destructive to bird life as its larger cousin. Although rarely attacking full-grown poultry, it is very partial to young broods which are allowed to run at large.

And in the Shadow of the Sacred Codl.

Any inattention or neglect on part of employes, if reported to the cashier or head waiter, will be deemed a favor by the management.—From a Boston Hotel Bill of Fare.

California's Possibilities.

William E. Curtis, writing from San Francisco, says the state of California would provide amply for a population of 50,000,000.

Passes the Limit.

A man may have an intense love for children, but it all departs for a time when he clutches the aftermath of molasses candy on the doorknob.

British Postal Employes.

The postmaster general of the United Kingdom has an army of 200,000 employes, 50,000 of whom are women.

Cows with Earrings.

In Belgium all cows over three months old are to be seen wearing earrings. Breeders are obliged to keep a record of all cattle raised by them, and each animal has a registered trade number, which is engraved on the ring fastened to its ear.

The Present the Only Time.

Considering that the past can't turn around and come back and that the future is all "real thing," but the tomato crop in little Delaware looks like better collateral. Three million dollars in tomatoes makes a brave show.—New York Sun.

Frenchmen Troops in Battle.

A serious engagement is reported to have occurred between the French troops and the Beni Nasseu tribesmen at Adjeroudikes, Algeria.

FAILURE AT AN END

JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION HAS CLOSED ITS GATES.

MISMANAGED FROM FIRST

Open to the Public Only One-third Completed—Honored Guests Snubbed and Opposition of the Press Encountered.

Probably no exposition projected in America of either a national or international character ever resulted in such a complete and colossal failure as the Jamestown exposition which closed its gates November 30.

Upon Sewall's Point, overlooking the historic waters of Hampton Roads, stands an exposition costing nearly nine millions of dollars. It stretches over an area of 400 acres. Considering the magnificent site selected on the water front, the type and character of buildings constructed, their artistic arrangement, supplemented by the beauty and magnificence of the great government piers costing $400,000, and the splendid exhibits made by the federal government and various states participating, the Jamestown exposition excels in many respects other projects of its kind ever attempted in this country. To this extent it is a success, and its promoters are deserving of due credit.

But, financially, the exposition is a tremendous failure. According to a financial statement recently issued by the company it is in debt to the tune of something over two and one-half millions of dollars. This amount includes $900,000 due on the government loan of a million dollars.

There are at least four reasons plainly accountable for the failure. First, the opening of the fair at least three months before it was completed; second, mismanagement of the funds; third, lack of harmony among the officials; and, fourth, general incompetency to cope with the numerous and varied duties involved in making a great show a success.

HEALTH OF CANAL WORKERS.

What Is Costs Uncle Sam to Keep Them in Good Condition.

For every dollar used to promote the health of canal residents three dollars are expended to otherwise benefit these people, according to Col. W. C. Gorgas, chief sanitary officer of the Isthmian canal commission, who addressed the New York academy of medicine Friday. This statement was made in defense of the annual appropriation for the sanitary department of the canal zone.

"The sanitary department at Panama," said Col. Gorgas, "does the quarantine work at both ends of the isthmus, cares for the health of the laborers and the civil population, cares for the insane, lepers and destitute and pays the expenses of the church. The commission, in short, pays for the development of church work on the isthmus appointed some dozen or more chaplains to the different hospitals. These chaplains were encouraged to do work outside of the hospitals and have gradually built up congregations everywhere along the canal.

"Of this $2,000,000 I am sure $500,000 would amply cover the expenditures that bear directly upon the health of the employes. Two million and a half of the appropriation is just as necessary, but not for sanitary reasons."

Suicide is Suspected.

Frank D. Myers, a prominent railway official with visiting cards in the chief commercial clubs of the United States and records of deaths from leading railways was found dead in his room at the Nicollet hotel, Minneapolis, Minn. Coroner Eisler inclines to the theory of suicide. Mr. Myers was connected as traveling passenger agent for the Milwaukee and later for the Pennsylvania. It is said he was one of those to run up the 99 cent order of cards dispensing with traveling agents. He had no money and left no note of any kind.

Jail Deli ery at Geneva.

The two men who were serving out a fine in the Fillmore county jail at Geneva for passing "wild cat" money, dug out of the jail here and made a break for liberty while everybody was at the church attending the funeral of C. A. Werner. Citizens captured one of the men in town and the sheriff got the other half a mile west of the city.

Alleged Assassin Acquitted.

B. Fulton French, accused of complicity in the assassination of James B. Marcum, has been acquitted at Hestirville, Ky.

Thirteen Terrorists Hanged.

Since Sunday of last week thirteen terrorists he been hanged at Odessa, Russia. The swift justice which is being meted out by the field courtsmartial is having an excellent effect on the disorderly element and is encouraging the police to a more fearless performance of their duty.

Peculiar Love Making.

A German baron thought the best way to win his lady love was to threaten to tell that she had murdered her mother. There are all kinds of ideas of how to make love in this world.

Just a Literary Thought.

What a sensation it would create, it occurs to one after rereading "Vanity Fair," if Becky Sharp would register at a prominent hotel in Pittsburg to-day!

PRODUCTIVE POWER OF WESTERN CANADA SOIL

Winnipeg Correspondence.

There has never been any who have doubted the productiveness of the soil of Western Canada, but there are sometimes found those who question the fact of its superiority. During the past season it has been shown that in grain raising qualities it possessed the very best. The late spring prevented grain being sown in many cases before the middle of May. Yet, a large percentage of that sown at that time produced excellent yields. Had it not been for the frost early in August, which visited most of the north half of the continent, there would have been a magnificent yield in every district in Western Canada. Throughout the Southern Alberta district where about 100,000 acres was sown to winter wheat the yield will be enormously large. There are vast tracts of valuable grain growing land in Western Canada that are available for homesteads, the Canadian Government giving 160 acres free, and entry may be made by proxy, by any near relative, thus saving considerable cost to the American who may have entry made in this way. Any Canadian Government Agent will give you the particulars.

Your correspondent has just received the following letter from Craik, Saskatchewan, which bears out the statement made in the first part of this letter.

"Craik, Sask., Aug. 1907.

"May 24th we planted a Dahlia root, which we brought with us from Minneapolis Aug. 12th, 90 days later, it was in bloom. The plant is now 4½ feet high and covered with blossoms. We never got half as many flowers on it in Minneapolis, even during September and October, although we had more time to attend to it there."

I mention this only as an example of the great productive power of the soil here in Saskatchewan, Canada.

HIS TURN TO CRITICISE.

Youngster Felt Called on to Manifest Disapproval of Prayer.

Little John, who, at the mature age of four, has learned the Lord's Prayer, is often criticised by his sister, two years older, for slight mistakes which he cannot always avoid in offering the petition. A few Sundays ago he was taken to church for the first time. When the moment for the prayer arrived and the congregation bowed their heads John's mother took the precaution to whisper to him that he must be very quiet. "Listen," she said, "and you will hear the minister pray." This interested John at once, and if I had an automobile I couldn't afford and he took in a look of serious attention, but his mother, watching him covertly, saw his expression change presently to one of surprise and disapproval. A few minutes more and he could stand it no longer. What could this man be saying? Not a word of the prayer did he recognize as the only formula he had ever heard called by that name.

"Why, mother," he exclaimed, in a tone audible over nearly half the church, "do you hear? He isn't saying it right at all!"

AS SHE HAD BEEN ORDERED.

There recently entered the service of a Cleveland family a domestic of Scandinavian origin. She had never seen a refrigerator, before, and the lady of the house, after initiating her into its mysteries, instructed her never to leave anything old or left over in the ice-box, but to keep the refrigerator perfectly sweet and clean by throwing the old things away each morning.

The very next day the mistress, looking out of the window, observed something peculiar in the yard.

"What is that, Sophie?" she asked.

"And how did it get there?"

"That is old ice, ma'am," was the proud response, "left over from yesterday. I t'rew it away lake you tol' me."—Harper's Weekly.

BEGAN YOUNG.

Had "Coffee Nerves" from Youth.

"When very young I began using coffee and continued up to the past six months," writes a Texas girl.

"I had been exceedingly nervous, thin and very sallow. After quitting coffee and drinking Postum Food Coffee about a month my nervousness disappeared and has never returned. This is the more remarkable as I am a lady in my prime and have kept right on with my work.

"My complexion now is clear and rosy, my skin soft and smooth. As a good complexion was something I had greatly desired, I feel amply repaid even tho this were the only benefit derived from drinking Postum.

"Before quitting its use I had suffered greatly from indigestion and headache; these troubles are now unknown.

"Best of all, I changed from coffee to Postum without the slightest inconvenience, did not even have a headache. Have known coffee drinkers who were forced to quit on account of ill health and nothing was ever said about Postum a week without being aware that they were not drinking coffee.

"I have known several to begin the use of Postum and drop it because they did not boil it properly. After explaining how it should be prepared they have tried it again and pronounced it delicious."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the booklet, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

A Real Schemer.

For six months she had been pleading with him to buy an automobile.

"They are too expensive," he protested for the hundredth time. "If I bought an automobile I would have to cut down our expenses."

"What expenses?" she asked.

"Why, table expenses. For instance, if I had an automobile I couldn't afford to have chicken every Sunday."

She laughed.

"Why, you goose! If you had an automobile you could run down somewhere and hook one almost every day, to say nothing of big turkeys and nice roasting pigs. Why—is it—men haven't any brains?"

And the next day he hustled around to the nearest dealer and ordered a racing machine.

Mrs. Lizzie Lohr

MRS. LIZZIE LOHR, 1159 W. 18th St., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I take pleasure in writing you these few lines, thinking there may be other women suffering the same as I did.

"I had my complaints for over a year, night sweats all winter and no appetite. I was run-down so far that I had to sit down to do my cooking, I was so weak.

"I tried many different medicines and doctors also. Nothing seemed to do me any good. The doctors wanted to operate on me.

"At last I wrote to Dr. Hartman. I told him just exactly how I was, and he told me what ailed me and how I should take Peruna.

"I did as he told me for four months, and now I am all cured.

"No one can tell how thankful I am to him, as I had given up all hopes of ever getting well again.

"As a widow and the mother of six small children who depend on my every move, I work all day and seldom get tired.

"I took five bottles of Peruna in all.

"A woman wishing to know more about my case may write to me and I will gladly tell all about it.

"Thank Dr. Hartman for what he has done for me."

EQUAL TO THE OCCASION.

This Servant Girl Was Evidently a Person of Resource.

As a source of humor the Irish servant girl has long since fallen from her high estate, a result probably due to the better class of young women from the Emerald Isle who come here annually to help confuse the eternal "servant girl question." But now and again one of the old, naively ignorant sort turns up in a New York household, as was demonstrated the other day to a caller at a house on the West Side.

The girl who responded to the bell was asked if her mistress was at home. To this inquiry she surprised the caller by putting her arms behind her back and putting in a rich brogue, as she thrust her face toward the caller: "Put th' tickets in me mouth, ma'am, or I'll go an' see. Me hands is wet."—N. Y. Press.

SORES AS BIG AS PENNIES.

Whole Head and Neck Covered—Hair All Came Out—Cured in Three Weeks by Cuticura.

"After having the measles my whole head and neck were covered with scaly sores about as large as a penny. They were just as thick as they could be. My hair all came out. I let the trouble run along, taking the doctor's blood remedies and rubbing on salve, but it did not seem to get any better. I got so that way for about six months; then I got a set of the Cuticura Remedies, and in about a week I noticed a big difference, and in three months was well entirely and I have not had the trouble any more, and as this was seven years ago, I consider myself cured. Mary Porter, Albion, Neb., Aug. 25, 1906."

Going to Be Fined.

When George Ade was a newspaper reporter he was sent to "write up" an Irish laborer who had fallen from a building. When Mr. Ade arrived on the scene, several officers and others were helping the injured man into the ambulance. Mr. Ade pulled out his pad and pencil. "What is his name?" he asked one of the policemen.

The injured man, who had heard Ade and who mistook him for the timekeeper employed by the contractor, rolled his eyes in a disgusted way.

"What d'ye think o' that?" he muttered. "I'm goin' to be fined for the few minutes I lose goin' to the hospital!"—Success.

The Worst Was Yet to Come.

A southern pulpit orator, one Sunday morning, was describing the experience of the prodigal son. In endeavor to impress his hearers with the shame and remorse that this young man felt and his desire to cast away his wicked doings, he spoke thus:

"Dis young man got to thinking about his meanness and his misery, and he tuk off his coat and frowed it away. And den he tuk off his vest and frowed dat away. And den he tuk off his shirt and frowed dat away too. And den he come to hisself."

MEAN FLINGS AT EDITORS.

Tributes by Lafcadio Hearn to Class of Workers He Disliked.

"Lafcadio Hearn, that wonderful writer, worked on newspapers in his youth," said a publisher, "and the ruthless way his studies were changed, cut and butchered was a great woe to his heart.

"In after years Hearn took a malicious joy in collecting stories about editors—editors and their superior and omniscient way with manuscript.

"One of his stories was of an editor to whom a subscriber said:

"'I enjoyed that poem on the three ages of man in to-day's paper, Mr. Sheers; I enjoyed it immensely. Do you know, though, I thought it was originally written the seven ages of man?'

"'So it was, sir; so it was,' said Editor Sheers, pompously. 'Yes, the extract was originally written the seven ages of man, but I had to cut it down for the lack of space.'

"Another story concerned a weather report. A reporter, discussing the weather, wrote that winter still lingered in the lap of spring.

"The editor, as he read over the article, called the reporter to his desk and told him that he would cut out that sentence about winter lingering in spring's lap. He said the idea was good enough, and all that sort of thing; but it would not do to publish because the high moral tone of the paper had to be maintained in a town full of school girls."

Doctor's Prescription Checks an Acute Cold in a Day and Cures Chronic Coughs.

The following formula is a never failing remedy for coughs or colds:

Two ounces of glycerine, one-half ounce of Concentrated oil of pine, one half pint of good whisky, mix and shake thoroughly each time and use in doses of a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful every four hours.

This, if followed up, will cure any cough that is curable or break up an acute cold in 24 hours. The ingredients all can be gotten at any drug store.

Concentrated oil of pine comes put up for medicinal uses only in half ounce vials sealed in tin screw top cases designed to protect it from heat and light. Other oils of pine are insoluble and are likely to produce nausea and cannot give the desired results.

Best He Could Do.

It was his first circuit, and, moreover, he had to defend his first client, who was a better known than respected burglar. In an interval he approached a veteran member of the bar and sought for advice.

"I should say about an hour," said the old hand.

One Waiter with Sense.

Man in a restaurant, happening in just as a new shift of waiters came on, and having eaten a very modest luncheon this man laid down a modest tip, to be exact, five cents.

"Thank you," he said, politely, to the customer, and as he turned away he added to himself: "That's a starter."—N. Y. Sun.

Laundry work at home would be much more satisfactory if the right Starch were used. In order to get the desired stiffness, it is usually necessary to use so much starch that the beauty and fineness of the fabric is hidden behind a paste of varying thickness, which not only destroys the appearance, but also affects the wearing quality of the goods. This trouble can be entirely overcome by using Defiance Starch, as it can be applied much more thinly because of its greater strength than other makes.

"Oh, yes, she left a will and testament," still more sadly.

"You were always a favorite of hers. Your name was mentioned, of course?"

"Yes," he replied, "my name was mentioned. I'm to have the Testament."

Caught Whiskers in Safe.

In locking his safe the other night prior to his going home for supper George Edgemont, a paperhanger who lives at Jefferson street and Hermitage lane, Managuk, shut the safe door upon his flowing whiskers and was held until released by his daughter, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Edgemont had been out collecting bills during the day. Returning to his office he opened his safe and placed the money in it. He then threw the door shut, catching the end of his beard in the door. In the excitement incident to his odd predicament he forgot the combination and could not open the safe himself. With his chin resting on the safe he was discovered about an hour after the accident by his daughter, who came to find what had delayed him. The safe was broken open by a locksmith.

FRIDAY THE 13TH

A Novel by

THOMAS W. LAWSON

"Frenzied Finance."

(Copyright, 1907, Doubleday, Page & Co.)

"Men of Wall street, it is impossible to prevent the repetition of those acts by which in five years we have accumulated a billion dollars, impossible so long as a short sale or a repurchase and resale is allowed. When short sales and repurchases and resales are made impossible, stock speculation will be dead. When stock speculation is dead, the people can no longer be robbed by the 'System.' In leaving you, the exchange, and stock-gambling forever, as I shall when I leave this platform, I will say from the depth of a heart that has been broken, from the profoundity of a soul that has been withered by the 'System's' poison, with a full sense of my responsibility to my fellow-man and to my God, that I advise every one of you to do what I have done and to do it quickly, before the doing of it by others shall have made it impossible, before the doing of it by others shall have blown up the whole stock-gambling structure. In accepting my advice you can quiet your conscience, those of you who have any, with this argument: 'If I start, I am sure of success. If I succeed, no one will be the wiser. The millions I secure I will take from men who took them from others, and who would take mine. The more I and others take, the sooner will come the day when the stock-gambling structure will fall.'

"The day on which the stock-gambling structure falls is the day for which all honest men and women should pray."

Bob Brownley paused and let his eyes sweep his dumfounded audience. There was not a murmur. The crowd was spellbound.

Again his eyes swept the room. Then he slowly raised his right hand with fist clenched, as though about to deal a blow.

"Men of Wall street"—his voice was now deep and solemn—"to show that Robert Brownley knew what was fitting for the last day of his career, he has revealed to you the trick—and more.

"Many of you are desperate. Many of you by to-morrow will be ruined. The time of all times for such to put my trick in practice is now. The victim of victims is ready for the experiment. I am he. I have a billion dollars. With this billion dollars I am able to buy 10,000,000 shares of the leading stocks and so long for them, even though after I have bought they fall a hundred dollars a share. Here is your chance to prevent your ruin, your chance to retrieve your fortune, your chance to secure revenge upon me, the one who has robbed you.

"His name? Some of you, for his astounding advice to connect with his listeners' now keenly sensitive nerve centers: then deep and clear rang out,

"Barry Leland!"

The old antagonist leaped to the rostrum and began to shout:

"I authorize you to buy any part of my holdings and, if necessary, at any price up to 50 points above the present market. There is my check—signed in blank, and I authorize the cashier to fill in any amount necessary to have in his possession at 10 o'clock to-morrow enough funds to meet any checks I may draw. You have failed to-day for millions and, therefore, assumed—but I herewith announce that I pay all the indebtedness of Barry and his house. Therefore he is not insolvent, standing." Bob had his eye on the great clock; as the hand passed his lips, the prearranged descended.

There was a mighty rush the gamblers for the different poles. Barry with lightning rapidity gave way to 20 of his assistants, who, with pencil and pad, rushed on Conant, who cheered around their chief. In a minute the dollar-battle was on, a battle such as no one had ever seen before. It required the natural wisdom for any man or woman to see that Bob Brownley's fall fallen in superheated soil; that now secret battle was being tested. It needed no expert in the mystic art of deciphering hieroglyphics of Old Hat Fate to read the numbers on the cars that were approaching 13. It no ear trained to hear human sound beat to detect the approaching sound of scientific stock-gambling structure. The roar of the brokers that had been the stillness following Robert Brownley's fateful speech had overtaken the cries that threatened to shake the exchange walls. The surging mob on the outside was roaring like a million hungry lions in an Arabian run at slaughter time.

CHAPTER X.

The instant after the gong sounded Bob Brownley was alone on the floor at the foot of the president's desk. His form was swaying like a reed on the edge of the ocean's path. He jumped to his side. His brother, who had during Bob's harangue been vainly endeavoring to beat his way through the crowd, was there first. "For God's sake, Bob, hear me. Word came from your house half an hour ago of the miracle: Beulah has awakened to her past. Her mind is clear; the nurses are frantic for you to come to her."

He got no further. With a mad bellow and a bound, like a tortured bull that sees the arena walls go down, Bob rushed out through the nearest door, which, I thanked God, was a side one leading to the street where the crowd was thinnest. He cast a wild look around. His eyes lighted on an empty automobile whose chauffeur had deserted to the crowd. It was the work of a second to crank it; of another to jump into the front seat. Quick as had been his movement, I was behind him in the rear seat. With a bound the great machine leaped through the crowd.

"In the name of Christ, Bob, be careful," I yelled, as he hurled the iron monster through the throng, scattering it to the right and left. The roar of power scatters the sheaves in the wheat fields. Some were crushed beneath its wheels. Bob Brownley heard not their screams, heard not the curses of those who escaped. He was on his feet, his body crouched low over the steering wheel, which he grasped in his vise-like hands. His fearless head was thrust far out, as though it strove to get to Beulah Sands ahead of his body. His teeth were set, and as I had jumped into the machine I had noted that his eyes were those of a maniac, who saw sanity just ahead if he could but get to it in time. His cars were dead not only to the RO-R of the terrified throng on the corners of the tenements who frantically pulled their horses to the curb, but to my warnings as well. He swung the machine around the corner at New street and into Wall as though it had been the broadest boulevard in the park. He took Wall street at a bound. I was sure we would land us through the fence into Trinity's churchyard. But no. Again he turned the corner, thrilling and paralyzing on its outside wheels from Wall street into Broadway as the crowds on the sidewalk held their breath in horror. I, too, was on my feet, but crouching as I hung to the side. Thank God that usually crowded thoroughfare was free from vehicles as far up as I could see, on beyond the Astor house. What could it mean? Was that divinity which "sits said protects the drunkard and the idiot about to aid the mad rush of this love-frenzied creature to the bedside of his wife-like Sands, whose

WANTED TO SEE MONEY.

Dear Mother Woman Was Satisfied It Was All Right.

A certain bank is never a very popular place. To see smiling young countenances putting aside the proverbial "sour sign" or, still more, smiling young mothers depositing in trust for the first baby there are two sad faces to one in black, many of them with weeper veils.

This was especially true recently when the pants tent anxious depositor was the husband to draw out their savings, and it was therefore especially refreshing to see in the receiving window line not "Lois from Berlin," but Marguerite from Italy, a trim, bright-eyed little woman with a pongee handkerchief around her neck coiled and braided and curled as if for an inauguration ball.

Behind the pongee was a chestnut head with cheerfully—as slowly foot by foot she approached the paying teller's desk, but it was two o'clock before her turn came to look over, but Marguerite was there at 9 o'clock, and when the doors were thrown open at 10 she was in the middle of the street here and hastened that he was a bigger depositor than old William Jennings Bryan, and got a gent in the whole town had patriotism enough to send him! Aw, I tell you, a herd of cowboys could not hit on the mood of the heads of our prominent citizens, but not be disturbed while they were doing it!"—Puck.

Well-Mannered Boy.

A few weeks ago in a village a few miles from Mexico City a citizen went to the races and complained that a boy on the grand stand stole and carried away his donkey. He insisted that the boy had carried the animal on his shoulder. The police laughed at the idea, but when they went to the spot, there was the donkey, and the boy explained that the animal was his own property. He was arrested, but was freed when the donkey's owner declared that the boy had asked permission to borrow the animal, which was true. The boy had carried a good-sized donkey a quarter of a mile on his shoulder without any one's objecting. He was complimented on his politeness by the judge, and the donkey again changed hands.

Valuable Vests.

Vests were made of his wife's old dress, so it was found that he had the smallest of the ordinary men. He is in still new, but when he comes out the people will have to look out that he doesn't carry off their houses some night.

A Bride's Little Scheme.

"Nearly all brides are getting sets of cut glass for wedding presents, because they always get so much more than they can ever use," remarked a jeweler recently, "but I never heard of one going so far to block the cut glass as a little bride that was in here the other day.

"She told me her name and asked me if I wouldn't keep my eyes open for any customer who might come in to buy a wedding present and mention her name. My part of the game was to tell the customer that she had dropped a remark about not caring for cut glass. She said she had been to two other stores and fixed up the same way with them."

LONG YALE MASCOT MANY HAV

RECENT DEATH OF HANNIBAL REGRETTED BY ALL.

Quaint Old Negro Candy Man Had an Interesting Career—Said to Have Been More Than a Century Old.

The death of Hannibal, the negro candy man, has left Yale with no mascot but "Pop" Warner, the three-eye expressman, whose auto truck now takes an official crowd to all the athletic games. "Pop" has just made his debut, and it will be years before he attains the fame of "Pop" Smith, "Davy, the candy man," Murray, the packman," and Hannibal.

In many respects Hannibal was the most remarkable of the long list of Yale favorites. He was gifted with a versatility granted to few men, black or white. He was one of the campus favorites in 1869, when O. P. Woods wrote in "Four Years at Yale:"

"Candy Sam's chief rival is a crafty black man named Hannibal, whose antecedents are a complete mystery. Not wishing to disturb the gentlemen in their studies I call to see if either of the gentlemen would like to invest in purchasing from me some packages of superior old-fashioned home-made molasses candy. This ruse, like the rest of Hannibal's speeches, is delivered with the greatest appearance of gravity and without pause or inflection of any sort."

Hannibal's age was in dispute. He was said to have crossed the century mark. One of his original sayings when asked how old he was used to be that he had a faint recollection of the first thunderstorm in Connecticut.

The mock orations he delivered will live in the memory of Yale men as long as they cherish a recollection of the university, and hardly an alumnus will read of his death without recalling some reminiscence of the old negro, who sold candy, gave boxing lessons, sleight of hand exhibitions, sang and danced and made speeches on all occasions.

Early in life he was an instructor in boxing in the Yale gymnasium. He was one of the quickest pugilists in action who ever struck a blow, and he met George Dixon in several bouts without the former negro world's champion getting the decision. He was thrown into a room with John L. Sullivan when that champion was at the height of his popularity. John L. at that time weighed more than 250 pounds, and when Hannibal was asked if he wished to meet the champion he answered: "Hannibal lagnot Mahomet, and must refuse to mix it up with the mountain."

Approaching a group of college students, Hannibal used to say: "Not wishing to interrupt the gentlemen, and wholly in the dark for knowledge, which has been my unvarying lot, which has been my unvarying custom through life, I would like to ask the gentlemen here a question. What is the first thing a gentleman puts on when he gets up in the morning?"

Everybody took a chance in answering, and when all had finished Hannibal would say: "Not wishing to place myself above the gentlemen present in knowledge, I beg to say that all you gentlemen are wrong. The first thing a gentleman puts on in the morning is his foot—on the floor."

His Latin orations were his specialities. He had attended numerous Events half a century ago, had learned by heart some of the addresses and had copied the pronunciation of the speakers.

Had Extraordinary Taste.

A woman with two little girls alighted from her motor car for tea at a restaurant in a midland town in England, recently, and ate an extraordinary meal. She ordered tea, a Welsh rabbit and a bottle of port wine. When the order had been given she took from the cruet stand a bottle of Worcestershire sauce, put it to her lips and emptied it down her throat. She then lifted the anchovy sauce bottle and drank that. The waitress had now come in with the Welsh rabbit, the port and the tea. Then the woman drank the port, then eagerly emptied the mustard pot on the Welsh rabbit and, while she was eating it, ordered another bottle of port. While her mother was thus engaged one of the little girls picked up the cream jug, put her tongue into it and licked it out.

Hearing Both Sides.

Last summer there died at Washington a lawyer who for many years had shocked a large number of his friends by his rather liberal views touching religion.

A friend of the deceased, who on short a Canadian trip to hurry back to Washington for the purpose of attending the last rites of his colleague, entered the late lawyer's home some minutes after the beginning of the service.

"What part of the service is this?" he inquired in a whisper of another legal friend standing in the crowded hallway.

"They just came myself," said the other, "but I believe they've opened for the defense."—Harper's Weekly.

The ingredients used in the manufacture of Gold Coin Stock Tonics have been used with success and my opinion coincides with reference to the influence they are to exert on animals. With reference to their cost, I do not care to express an opinion, as it would be subject to all changes of time. The difference in the composition of each of the different classes of animals is regarded as a wise distinction. The important ingredients should be helpful in toning up horses, thus promoting spring work and aiding digestion in cattle and other stock to fat conditions with less waste by excessive feeding. "For God and Home and Every Land"

Dear friends, we did find plenty of things to be thankful for even in Galt. I think I have mentioned the Epworth League before. Last Sunday night they gave a missionary program which was excellent. There were readings, talks, and plenty of good music and a fair sized audience. This week the Bible Study club met on Tuesday afternoon and commenced to study the life of Christ. Since August a number of Godly women feeling that some thing must be done to elevate the morals of Galt, having been meeting to study the Bible one afternoon in each week. They have been skipping around taking a chapter here and there without any definite plan or purpose for a time, but thought to take up the life of Christ when others who had been working in the grapes could join them. Now the grape picking is done and we took up the first lesson on "The preparation for Christ coming."

As we read from Genesis the promises made Abraham and from 2nd Samuel 1-17 to David and from Isaiah 35 and 55 the prophecies concerning His coming the interest grew. Then as we read from the Gospel the story of the angels visits to Zacherias and Mary our hearts melted within us. The Golden text taken from Hebrew 10-23 was He is faithful that promised, then a burning desire took possession of us, to so closely follow in the footsteps of the Savior that we could claim that precious promise for ours. If ye abide in Me and My word abide with you, ye shall ask what ye will, it shall be done unto you. It was a season of sweet communion and we are hoping and praying that our number will increase and that the Bible study club may be the beginning of a revival in Galt. Our weather is still lovely though we have had two white frosts, thermometers say. The banks and money matters are tied up here about the same as there but crafts of the railroads are likely as can be or has been any time. Now I have friends scattered over the states from Maine to Texas and Alaska. They hear from me every week, almost, through the Argus, but some of them do not think how glad I would be to have even a postal to let me know where they are and how the Lord is prospering them. Yet that would be the very best Christmas or birthday gift they could send me. I do so long to hear from my girls especially and do not have time to write to them as often as I would like to. Our turkey is roasting and five strangers are to share Thanksgiving dinner. The centerpiece on the table is half a Yankee pumpkin, the seeds taken out, and filled with Muscat grapes, a border of the beautiful colored autumn leaves around. Then make no better wish for you all than that you may be as pleasantly situated and as thankful as I am, to the great Giver of all our good. A delightful letter from Mrs Mathewson assures me of the prosperity and good work of the Union. I feel encouraged for my persistence in years past, of not going to the town of some friend, persuading her to accompany me to the home of the president where we would hold a meeting and have it duly reported.

A new fangled burglar alarm was given its initial workout at the home of a certain prominent family in this city Saturday night. Principal Alexander Stoddard, of Antioch school, was calling on a certain prominent young lady and while he and she were engaged in conversation the members of the family rigged up a burglar alarm of tin pans and other noise producing and creating utensils. These were so placed that when Alex opened the door to take his departure they fell from an elevated perch to the ground and made such a sound like twenty thieves were breaking in. When Alex opened the door to go home the alarm was "sprung and he was it." The noise was enough to wake the dead and it aroused the good people of the neighborhood from the slumbers and it is asserted that some of them rushed to the door with shot guns in their hands. Alex red with embarrassment, and the cold sweat of fright pouring from his individuals, it is alleged, turned the wind in making his way home. Those who set the burglar alarm are very well satisfied with the contrivance and are of the opinion that it works like a charm.—Nemaha Co. Republican.

MESSAGE SENT TO CONGRESS

President's Recommendations on National Legislation.

AS TO CURRENCY QUESTION

Many Defects of Present System Are Pointed Out by Chief Executive.

NOT TIME FOR TARIFF

Postponement of Discussion of Revision of Schedules Until After Presidential Election Urged — Necessity for Improving Waterways of the Country.

Washington, Dec. 3.—President Roosevelt in his annual message deals vigorously with matters of national importance. Referring to the recent disturbance in financial circles he points out that the hoarding of money by the people, instead of keeping it in sound banks, was the first cause of financial stringency and a grave error. He pays a tribute to the general honesty of the men engaged in the banking business.

After quotations from his last annual message which deals with the necessity of governmental regulations, the president asserts that the views have in no way changed and declares it is the duty of the national government to embody fully the principles of these suggestions.

Disclaiming any idea of advocating centralization, the president points out the necessity for federal control of the railroads of the country through the interstate commerce commission, and also urges legislation looking to the proper control of the great industrial combinations engaged in interstate business, this control to be exercised by the fullest publicity and prosperity no less than for the protection of investors and of the general public.

Wants Federal Control.

Declaring that modern industrial conditions are such that combination is not only necessary but inevitable, the president refers to his message of a year ago concerning necessary changes in the antitrust laws. He goes on: "I ask for full power to be given the federal government, because no single state can pass legislation adequate to deal with these powerful corporations engaged in interstate commerce, and, while doing them full justice to others. The conditions of railroad activity, the conditions of our immense interstate commerce, are such as to make the central government alone competent to exercise full supervision and control.

"The antitrust law should be one both more definite in form and more in harmony with actual conditions. It should be so amended as to forbid only the kind of combination which does harm to the general public. Such amendment can be accomplished by, or to be an incident of, a grant of supervisory power to the government over the great corporations engaged in interstate business. This should be accompanied by provision for the publication of accounts and the subjection of the books and affairs to the inspection of the government officials. A beginning has already been made for such supervision by the establishment of the bureau of corporations.

"Among the points to be aimed at should be the prohibition of unhealthy competition, such as by rebates; service at an actual loss for the purpose of crushing out competition, the prevention of inflation of capital, and the control of property by a corporation's making exclusive trade with itself a condition of having any trade with itself. Reasonable agreements between different corporations should not should be permitted, provided they are first submitted to and approved by some governmental authority.

Like National Bank Supervision.

"The congress has the power to charter corporations to engage in interstate commerce, foreign commerce, and a general law can be passed under the provisions of which existing corporations could take out federal charters and new federal corporations be created. Provision for the general principles of such a law should be a method of predetermining by some federal board or commission whether the applicant for a federal charter is fairly entitled to the combination within the restrictions of the federal law. The supervision established might be analogous to that exercised over national banks. At least, the antitrust act should be so amended as to preclude prohibitions of the methods which experience has shown can be usefully employed in enabling monopolistic combinations to crush out competition. The real evil to be remedied is unhealthy competition compelled to do business in their own name. The right to hold stock in other corporations should hereafter be denied to interstate corporations without the approval of the proper government officials, and a prerequisite to such approval should be the listing with the government of the list of owners and stockholders, both by the corporation owning such stock and by the corporation in which such stock is owned.

The Currency Question.

On the question of the currency the president calls attention to his last annual message wherein he pointed out that our present system is defective and inelastic and that the events of 1893 and message he said:

"National banks should be permitted to issue a specified proportion of their capital in notes of a given kind, the issue to be taxed at so high a rate as to drive the notes back when not wanted in legitimate trade. This plan would not permit the issue of currency to give banks additional profits at times of business stringency presented by times of stringency. I do not say that this is the right system. I only advance it as one embodying my belief that there is need for the adoption of some system which shall be automatic and open to all sound banks, so as to avoid the possibility of discriminations and favoritism. Such a plan would tend to prevent the spasms of high rates from time to time which now exist in the main in the New York market, for at present there is too much currency in certain seasons of the year, and its accumulation at New York tempts bankers to lend it at low rates for speculative purposes; whereas at other times when the crops are being moved there is urgent need for a large but temporary increase in the currency supply. Moreover, it should never be forgotten that this question concerns business men generally quite as much as bankers, especially in the time of stockmen, farmers and business men in the west; for at present at certain seasons of the year the difference in interest rates between the east and west is from six to ten per cent, whereas in Canada the corresponding difference is but two per cent. Any plan must, of course, guard the interests of depositors. The southern banks are careful as it guards the interests of New York or Chicago bankers, and 'must be drawn from the standpoints of the farmer and the merchant no less than from the standpoint of the city banker and the country banker."

Repeats Recommendations.

The president continues:

"I again urge on the congress the need of immediate attention to this matter. We need a greater elasticity in our currency, provided for, of course, that we recognize the even greater need of a safe and secure currency. There must always be the most rigid examination by the national authorities. Provision should be made for an emergency currency. The emergency issue should, of course, be made with an effective guaranty, and upon conditions carefully prescribed by the government. Such emergency issue must be based on adequate securities approved by the government, and must be issued under a heavy tax. This would permit currency being issued when the demand for it was urgent, while securing its withdrawal when the demand fell off. It is worth investigating to determine whether officers and directors of national banks should ever be allowed to loan to themselves. Provision should also be subject to the same supervision as banks; legislation to this effect should be enacted for the District of Columbia and the territories."

Not Time for Tariff Discussion.

On the subject of the tariff the president declares himself in favor of protection and of the maintenance of the protection until after the presidential election. He says:

"This country is definitely committed to the protective system and any effort to upset it could not but cause widespread industrial disaster. In other words, the principle of the present tariff law could not with wisdom be changed now. But in a country of such phenomenal growth as ours it is probably well that every few years or so the tariff laws should be carefully scrutinized so as to see that no excessive duties have grown up, unwarranted by the difference in cost of production here and abroad; that is, the difference in the rate of wages here and abroad, for the well-being of the wage-worker must ever be a cardinal point in the consideration of the subject. Legislation should be so set that the sum total of the benefits conferred by it is as great as good. This means that the subject can not wisely be touched at all with in the year preceding a presidential election, because as a matter of fact experience has conclusively shown that at such a time it is impossible to get men to treat it from the standpoint of the public good. In my judgment the wise time to deal with the matter is immediately after such election."

Income and Inheritance Tax.

There has been no change in the mind of the president concerning the advisability of an income tax and an inheritance tax. In the message he says:

"When our tax laws are revised the question of an income tax and an inheritance tax should receive the careful attention of our legislators. In my judgment both of these taxes should be part of our system of federal taxation. I speak differently about the income tax because one scheme for an income tax has been declared unconstitutional by the supreme court; while in addition it is of difficult rate for a congressman in practical working. Nevertheless, a graduated income tax of the proper type would be a desirable feature of federal taxation, and it is to be hoped that one may be devised which the supreme court will declare constitutional. The inheritance tax is especially to be looked to as better method of taxation, and far more important for the purpose of having the fortunes of the accumulators bear a proportion to their increase in size a proportion which is constantly and rightly the aim of taxation. The government has the absolute right to decree as to the terms upon which a man shall receive the bequest or devise from another, and this right is constantly exercised. Such power is especially appropriate for the imposition of a tax.

Due Enforcement of Law.

On the matter of the impossibility of enforcement of the law the message says:

"A few years ago there was loud complaint that the law could not be invoked against wealthy offenders. There was much complaint of the inefficiency of the department of justice during the last few years. Under the present system it make it evident that no man stands above the law, and that the rich man as well as the poor man must be held to account. Everything that can be done under the existing law will be done, but the limit of effective action in such cases is often reached under existing state of public opinion, which is profoundly influenced both by organization and machinery, which requires a large expenditure of money, and by the delays incident to the present system of criminal procedure. From the great lakes to the mouth of the Mississippi there should be a deep waterway with deep waterways leading from it to the east and west. Such a waterway would practically mean the creation of our coast line into the very heart of our country. It would be of incalculable benefit to our people.

"As an incident to creating the deep waterway down the Mississippi, the government should build along its whole course flanking levees, which, taken together with the control of the headwaters, will at once and forever put a complete stop to all threat of floods in the immensely fertile Delta region. The levees built from adjacent to the Mississippi along its lower course will thereby become tracts of the most prosperous and populous; as it already is one of the most fertile farming regions in all the world."

Irrigation Twice Lauds.

Extension of the work of irrigation and the reclamation of waste lands is advocated, together with a revision of the present land laws in the interest of the actual home-maker. The unwisdom of sale of public lands for private grazing, the president says, must be stopped. Even at the same time the necessity which occasioned it must be provided for. Several plans are recommended.

Conservation of the mineral wealth of the country, and the necessity for the protection of the forests to prevent a timber famine, are dwelt upon. Drastic action by the congress is urged.

World Regard Duty on Wood Pulp.

The president declares in favor of the repeal of the duty on wood pulp, at the same time declaring that it should if possible be accompanied by an agreement with Canada that there should be no export duty on Canadian pulp wood.

Work on the Panama canal is declared to be proceeding in a satisfactory manner, as figure given to substantiate the statement.

Ask Postal Savings Banks.

On the questions of postal savings banks and the establishment of a parcels post system the message says:

"I commend to the favorable consideration of the congress a postal savings bank system as recommended by the postmaster general.

"I further commend to the congress the consideration of the postmaster general's recommendation for an extension of the parcel post, especially on the rural routes. These recommendations have been drawn up to benefit the farmer and the country storekeeper, otherwise, and should not favor them, for I believe that it is good policy for our government to do all that is possible to aid the small town and the country district. It is desirable that the country merchant should not be crushed out."

Home form of local self-government for Alaska is asked of the congress, and that the rights of citizenship be conferred upon the people of Porto Rico.

Campaign Contributions.

The president says: "It is well to provide that corporations shall not contribute to the national campaign funds, and furthermore to provide for the publication by candidates of contributions and expenditures. The need for collecting large campaign funds would vanish if congress provided an appropriation for the proper and legitimate expenses of each of the great national parties, an appropriation ample enough to prevent the necessity for collecting any large amounts, and at the same time sufficiently small to render it entirely proper that it should be met by the government. This would do away with the evil of permitting the use of the money of the big contributors to control primaries and elections, directly or indirectly, and would make it possible to impose and enforce a law requiring the full publication of all expenditures before election."

AOKI CALLED HOME.

Japanese Ambassador Gets a Summons From Tokio.

Viscount Aoki, the ambassador of Japan, talked briefly and reservedly regarding the instructions given him by his government to return home for the purpose of making a report of affairs in which Japan is interested jointly with the United States. The ambassador this afternoon cordially received a representative of the Associated Press and appeared to be in a cheerful mood.

"I am going home," the ambassador said, "for the purpose of making a verbal report to my government. There are many things to report on—things that I have heard and seen in this country. They can be made better verbally than in writing. There is no other significance to the visit. I shall discuss immigration in addition to other questions in which my government is interested. My return cannot be construed in any way as an indication of unfriendliness on the part of the Japanese for the United States. The American government knows very well that Japan is disposed to be one of her best friends and to remain on terms of the greatest amity with her. Any other idea or suggestion is foolish to entertain. The immigration question is not at all a serious one and in my judgment it will be settled satisfactorily. Japan, I repeat, has no bearing on the relations between the United States and Japan. Our relations are friendly, and I hope will continue to be. There is no reason why they should be otherwise, but, on the contrary, every reason why they should continue good."

Woman Who Killed Senator Brown Freed by the Jury.

A verdict of acquittal was returned in the Bradley murder case at Washington. It was with breathless suspense the spectators awaited the decision, together with a revision of the present land laws in the interest of the actual home-maker. The unlawful inclosure of public lands for private grazing, the president says, must be stopped. Even at the same time the necessity which occasioned it must be provided for. Several plans are recommended.

Conservation of the mineral wealth of the country, and the necessity for the protection of the forests to prevent a timber famine, are dwelt upon. Drastic action by the congress is urged.

World Regard Duty on Wood Pulp.

The president declares in favor of the repeal of the duty on wood pulp, at the same time declaring that it should if possible be accompanied by an agreement with Canada that there should be no export duty on Canadian pulp wood.

Work on the Panama canal is declared to be proceeding in a satisfactory manner, as figure given to substantiate the statement.

Ask Postal Savings Banks.

On the questions of postal savings banks and the establishment of a parcels post system the message says:

"I commend to the favorable consideration of the congress a postal savings bank system as recommended by the postmaster general.

"I further commend to the congress the consideration of the postmaster general's recommendation for an extension of the parcel post, especially on the rural routes. These recommendations have been drawn up to benefit the farmer and the country storekeeper, otherwise, and should not favor them, for I believe that it is good policy for our government to do all that is possible to aid the small town and the country district. It is desirable that the country merchant should not be crushed out."

Home form of local self-government for Alaska is asked of the congress, and that the rights of citizenship be conferred upon the people of Porto Rico.

Campaign Contributions.

The president says: "It is well to provide that corporations shall not contribute to the national campaign funds, and furthermore to provide for the publication by candidates of contributions and expenditures. The need for collecting large campaign funds would vanish if congress provided an appropriation for the proper and legitimate expenses of each of the great national parties, an appropriation ample enough to prevent the necessity for collecting any large amounts, and at the same time sufficiently small to render it entirely proper that it should be met by the government. This would do away with the evil of permitting the use of the money of the big contributors to control primaries and elections, directly or indirectly, and would make it possible to impose and enforce a law requiring the full publication of all expenditures before election."

As the emperor is ill Mr. Taft did not see her, but was presented to the other members of the imperial family.

Alfalfa for the Animals.

Raising alfalfa to furnish winter feed for wild animals is proving a great success in the Yellowstone National park. One hundred tons of the hay have been harvested in the government field near the Gardner arch and stacked near the soldiers' quarters. For three years a deer was seen to feed in the vicinity of the Mammoth Hot Springs and, as an experiment a few bales of alfalfa were scattered near the parade ground. The next day a noble blacktail made their appearance, the number steadily increasing and now comprises over a hundred. The animals quickly lost all fear of human beings, and are said to be up to expectations, a degree of tameness following the feeding, although the result of the Hague conference are declared not to have come up to expectations, a degree of good is said to have resulted, notably a provision by which the powers taking part in the conference agreed not to have recourse to armed force for the collection of debts owed to their citizens by foreign countries.

The expectation of the government is declared to be to first over Cuba to a government chosen by the people of the island within the coming year.

German Tariff Agreement.

Concerning the tariff agreement entered into with Germany, its object is declared to have been the prevention of a tariff war between the United States and that country. The work of the commission which made the agreement is praised.

The president asks for authority to remit to China all indemnity in excess of 25 per cent, and interest on 25 per cent.

In conclusion the message congratulates the country on its present peaceful relations with all countries, particularly the sister republics to the south.

ARMY OFFICERS MUST RIDE.

President Proposes to Make Test More Severe.

A revision of President Roosevelt's order of last spring providing for a test of efficiency in horsemanship of officers above the rank of captain is in preparation at the war department. It is said that the provisions are more severe than in the original order with a view to the attainment of the highest degree of proficiency in horsemanship by army officers, and that a contemplated more active participation in practico marches than now obtains. Reports that have reached the department of the recent rides taken by officers at various army posts show a lack of uniformity in the methods of lowed and required, which, while is sought to be remedied by the order about to be issued. It is understood the tests hereafter will be of unusual occurence.

TRY TO KILL THE MARSHALL.

Missouri Bank Robbers Shoot and Beat, But He May Recover.

Robbers thwarted in loot the Salisbury, Mo., Savings bank shot and dangerously injured Ashley Bannister, the city marshal, who slept in a room in the rear of the bank building. The robbers shot Dameron in the mouth and pounded him over the head with revolvers until he was unconscious. He will probably recover. The robbers failed to get into the safe. They escaped.

Confederate Daughters.

The Texas division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy began its twelfth annual convention in the capitol building at Austin, Tex., with every indication that it will be the most successful meeting in the history of the organization. The delegates are numerous and representative of every section of the state. The majority of them are being entertained in private homes.

To Eradicate Plague.

With a view of compelling the owners of buildings to make their premises in a sanitary condition, the board of health of San Francisco proposes to present an ordinance on the subject for passage by supervision. This is one of many steps being taken to exterminate rats from all sections of the city.

Government Investigation.

The federal government is making an investigation of the disaster at the Naniol mine of the United Cost Company near Fayette city, Pa., where a terrific explosion of firedamp occurred, causing the death of a large number of miners.

Will Stay in Wisconsin.

Representatives of the New York Life Insurance company announced at Madison that the company will not withdraw from Wisconsin, but will comply with the state laws.

LIST MAY BE FIVE HUNDRED

Explosion Comes When Full Force Is at Work—Few Details of Accident —Nature of It Not Yet Fully Determined.

Dead bodies recovered	3
Injured rescued	4
Men in mine, probably dead	493

A Monongah, W. Va., December 7 dispatch says: Three charred bodies lying in the impoverished morgue, four deadly injured men and 493 men imprisoned by tons of coal, rock and mine debris in the depth of the hills surrounding this mining town, with the chances all against a single one of them being alive, is the most accurate summary obtainable of a mine explosion which in all probability was attended by greater loss of life than any former disaster in the history of the bituminous coal mining industry of America. The explosion occurred shortly after 10 o'clock after the full force of 500 men had gone to work in the two mines affected. The mines are numbers 6 and 8 of the Consolidated Coal Company, located on the opposite sides of the west fork of the river at this place, but merged in their underground workings for hauling, and the surface by a great steel tipple and bridge.

The mine management declare they are not the cause, but experienced miners declare that it must have been.

The mines are owned and operated by the Consolidated Coal company of Baltimore. General offices are located in Baltimore and the operative offices in Fairmont, W. V. The company is said to be one of the largest operators in the bituminous industry. The company is capitalized at $20,000,000 and has in operation about 100 producing plants. Clarence W. Watson of Baltimore is president.

HOME INDUSTRIES

ECONOMIC LESSONS TAUGHT BY EDITORS OF MANY PAPERS.

COMBATTING A COMMON EVIL

Practices of Sending Dollars from Communities Where Earned Helps Along the Centralization of Business.

Apparently the press is now fully aroused to the importance of combatting the evils of patronizing other than home enterprises. Editorial and local columns of the papers, especially in the western states, are filled with common-sense articles setting before the people such facts as appeal to reason and patriotism. Some editors in their zeal to accomplish good, perhaps go too far in their views of systems that take money from their neighborhoods, and by severe criticisms of patrons of out-of-town concerns "spraybost the mark" and fail to accomplish what is much desired.

None will gainsay that the wage-earner has the inherent right to spend his earnings wherever he desires. If he wishes to buy his clothes in some distant city, he has that privilege. Sometimes he may have cause to do so. His home merchants may not carry in stock what he wishes to secure. Others may charge him what he considers more than it is worth. Quite often he may learn that he makes a mistake by buying goods without a careful examination of them. While the latter may happen frequently is the purchaser becomes a better patron of home institutions than ever before. But there are a few things that cannot be bought at mail order houses. It is that the dollars that they send away means money taken out of local circulation, and the consequent lessening of the ability of the community to that extent. Say that there are 2,000 people in the community. Five dollars a year from each one sent after amounts to $10,000 a year, and in ten years $100,000. Supposing that a fifth or sixth of this represented clothing that might be left in the community. It would be quite enough to establish a business enterprise that would support several families. But from another standpoint the average amounts sent away for goods is from a third to a half and often more than the total paid or needed supplied. Think of what a great loss that is! How many years would it take to home town, would immediately increase its business from a third to a half! How many years would it be? Think that the retail prices adhered to strictly before your town would be more than double in size? It would only require a very few years. Look around in the home town. Well, at any rate, I'll point out its meaning to you with a story.

"A boy looked up from his book one night.

"'Father,' he said, 'what is a mirage?'

"The father answered gibly from behind his paper:

"'The union of a man and woman till death or the law them do part.'

"'But' said the boy, 'that's marriage, ain't it?'

"'Same thing, sonny; it's the same thing,' replied the father. 'A man imagines he sees wonders and delights where there is nothing. Fight shy of 'em both, my boy.'"

One Thing Held Him Back.

"There was a racket of some kind in our house last night," said the man who is to be at his wedding. "Screams came from one of the rear flats and everybody was looking out the window to see what the matter could be. Noises such as smashing and crashing were made by the rubbernecks and good several women were screaming in sympathy. Presently out of the front door I saw a big man vaulting over the iron railing and running down the street. Several ordinances regulating the employment of those within its confines, and if such ordinances are properly framed and lived up to they would prevent the vagrant who perhaps visit the town. It will soon be found that such towns will be avoided and the troublesome visitors to the community will seek fields elsewhere.

Unsound Cooperative Concerns.

"Self-preservation is one of the first laws of nature," and some thinker declares it is the strongest. While it may long ago, and time has failed to prove it untrue. Yet how many commit involuntary suicide by unwisely following the instructions of some self-styled doctor in their efforts to cure themselves of some ailment! And how many more bring to themselves financial ruin from the fraudulent schemes that they know little about, prompted by glittering promises of great returns for little money. Lately numerous alleged co-operative mercantile establishments have sprung up in large cities and are seeking the support of farmers throughout the country. Cases, differ in detail in the manner of their work, but the young man, 'when we were skating on the Wissahickon and came to the dangerous spot and broke through, I saved your life, didn't I?'

"She smiled at him roguishly.

"'That was brave,' she said, 'but it was not clever, was it?'

"'Yes,' said he, 'it was. I led you to the dangerous spot on purpose.'

"She threw her arms about him, murmuring:

"'You dear.'"

SOMETHING OF A CYNIC.

Papa Had Extreme Views on the Subject of Marriage.

Miss Marie Cahill, the actress, chose the chorus girls for her new play, "Marrying Mary," by measurement. The Bertillon system was employed.

By this excellent system of measurement," said Miss Cahill the other day, "one gets, in a chorus girl, the real thing. There is no deception. You know what a mirage is? Quite sure?

LAND! LAND! LAND!

Land that grows 15 to 25 tons of sugar beets to the acre, 200 to 400 bushels of potatoes, 40 to 100 bushels of oats, 25 to 60 bushels of corn to the acre, and all kinds of fruit berries and melons in abundance. Rich, virgin soil, that grows immense crops like magic, when the water that the U. S. government provides at cost is flowed upon it. There is no such thing as crop failure under irrigation. The farmer plants his crop and electricity controls the amount of water his crops need at exactly the proper time, and he can grow more profitable crops than he can grow in any natural rainfall country, such as sugar beets and alfalfa. Government statistics show that irrigated land will produce from one third to one-half more crops than any natural rainfall country. Officials of the U. S. Reclamation Service say that the North Platte project, which will irrigate the land we are selling, is best adapted to irrigation of any land in the country, and the supply of water is unlimited.

Renters, Why rent from $5 to $10 an acre rent for land when crop can get 160 acres of fine irrigated land for about the same money you are paying for one year's rent of an eastern farm?

Come to the New Land and own a fine farm that will grow larger crops than the high-priced land you are renting. Uncle Sam will supply you with water to irrigate 160 acres of the most productive land in the country at cost. I can secure you a fine 160 acre, irrigable farm for from $1 to $5 per acre.

Don't Wait. It won't last long. Thousands of people are flocking to this country, and the sooner you come the better bargain I can get you. Don't waste your life renting somebody else's farm at a high price. Come to the rich and fertile North Platte valley, and make a home and fortune for yourself and family. Don't neglect this splendid opportunity. There's big money in it. This land that you can now secure for practically nothing, will be worth from $100 to $300 per acre as soon as irrigated and improved. It is better land than Colorado land, that is now selling for as much as from $150 to $200 per acre. Owing to the shortage in the sugar beets for 1907 and the enormous tonnage that will be required in 1908, the price of sugar beets will be high, and at the average yield of 16 tons an acre, you can clear $65 an acre and do no work on it yourself.

Farm Owners, Why farm $100 eastern land when you can buy irrigated land here from one-tenth to one-fourth the money, and get land that will produce larger crops and increase rapidly in value? Sell out and come to the rich North Platte valley. We are now pioneering. There are no hardships in this country—towns, railroads, schools and churches are close at hand. The Platte Valley is centrally located and convenient to all markets. Railroad communications are unexcelled to all good shipping points. All kinds of produce, cattle, hogs and sheep command a high price. The Burlington R. R. now runs through the valley and the Union Pacific is rapidly pushing work on a through line to the coast, which line also runs through the valley. Thousands and thousands of tons of hay are cut in the river bottoms every year.

Investors, We can sell you deeded land that is increasing rapidly in value and will continue to increase in value for years to come. Irrigated land is not subject to the depression in land values that always go with a period of crop failures in any natural rainfall country. No matter what the weather you can grow a crop every year under irrigation. I control the sale of thousands of acres of irrigated and dry lands, hay land and ranches. I can secure you any kind of land at a price that will make money quickly for you.

Write today for further information. Local real estate dealers correspond, we can make some money for you.

On Dec 5, 07, A very interesting Suffrage meeting was held at the home of Mrs Norris. President opened the meeting in the usual form with singing and prayer. Following the business transactions we were favored by a splendid address rendered in a like and pleasant way by Miss Laura Gregg, who presented her subject in simple language, yet beautiful and instructive and interesting to the Suffragist and Anti-Suffragist. Our cause in Oklahoma was presented to the club in a scholarly manner and many points of interest brought out. Miss Gregg gave us a good idea of the situation in Oregon during the last campaign, calling our attention to the unlawful or illegitimate powers (the liquor traffic) which has been brought against us by the unregenerates in order to cause our defeat, as Equal Suffrage will be the death blow to the liquor traffic in that state. Touched briefly upon the two foreign elements in the states of Minnesota and South Dakota with the encouraging idea that those foreigners will be a help to the suffrage cause, for as much as they have equal suffrage in their mother countries across the sea: namely Finland, Norway and Sweden. Finishing her address Miss Gregg dwelt upon the suffrage cause in general, in this country giving as one of the greatest obstacles to be overcome, the seeming indifference of women of the wealthy and middle classes toward the suffrage cause and toward the men, women and children who toil and slave in our offices, mines and factories. This ignorance of the wealthy and middle classes of women together with the liquor traffic are our worst enemies of to-day. In regard to the Suffrage cause in our own state, Miss Gregg spoke encouragingly and assured us that we are not weakened, by defeat but strengthened. The fact that so many illegitimate powers are brought against us in order that we may be defeated is certain evidence of our gaining strength. Miss Gregg was interesting and instructive and was well worthy of a large attendance of members. The club ladies expressed their appreciation by a rising vote of thanks. Our hostess served lovely refreshments and a social hour indulged in.

On Friday Dec 13th, under the auspices of the O. Board, Miss Gregg addressed the High school in assembly room. A number of visitors were present and for a half hour the attention of her audience was centered on the speaker. The advancement of man was briefly outlined by Miss Gregg, from the beginning of the Christian Era down to the time present time. Dating back to Rome ago when all the wife do upon husband was to cook, sew, and generally wait on the lord and master, she brought down to the present time, when many of the women are equally and perhaps in some cases more intelligent than the men. She then brought to the attention of the students the fact that there are still many things that they yet had time to accomplish, and with hold the things they believe the multitudes should not know. A time when men had not the right to read the Bible, had no voice in the government of his country, but gradually down the line of the centuries we arrive at a point where men broke away from this rule and declared the right to think and know, and to express these knowledges. These brave pioneers were followed by others, and still others, until the time arrived when men were not only free to read the Bible and scattered it broadcast over the world for others to read. Coming down a few centuries later we find men of broad views advancing the ideas of government by the people, for the people. How these ideas were at first ridiculed by people who had for generations been subject to a few strong men. Following close by on the advancement of man, the world has recognized the advancement of woman also. From the "Slave or Common property" of man in the beginning of Christianity, we must recognize the advancement of women. Slowly but surely she emerges from obscurity and side by side with the man of the nation she has entered the public senate the college and universities, has taken up the profession of teacher, doctor, lawyer and minister. She has taken her college training into her home and applied it to the kitchen and bring up her children. Woman has proven to the world beyond the shadow of a doubt, that the college bred woman of today makes a better home maker better mother, better helpmate to her husband than the uneducated woman of a century or more ago. The advancement of woman then is certainly encouraging. Miss Gregg's address was full of interest to the common interests of man and woman. As she husband and father is the wage earner and is interested in the business affairs of the day, so the wife and mother is the home maker and is interested in the keeping of that home. While the father is the home provider the mother is the home protector. We therefore are not dissatisfied with the laws of our country, but as home protectors, and with the responsibility of the home and the boys and girls given to our care, we believe we should have a voice in the protection of the home for the betterment of the generations which are to come. To the pupils of this school, I have one thought I would like to have you take with you to your homes tonight. That is that while you are in school you will be thinking of, and planning your life work. That whatever vocation you may choose in life, you will always do your best. Always keep in mind the welfare of the future generation. The wife of both boys and girls who may attend this school perhaps twenty or thirty years hence.

SCHOOL NOTES

The attendance Monday morning was considerably affected by the weather, many of those living at a distance being unable to attend.

Ono Mori is still kept at home by illness. We trust she may soon recover and take up her school work.

Do not forget the entertainment at the High School Friday night at 8:15. Admission 20 cents. School Pupils 10 cents.

There will be two weeks holiday vacation from Dec 20 to Jan 6.

Bryan Kime and Julian Walker have been on the sick list this week.

Verda and Velma Myers, attend school the first of the week, because of a visit with friends in Steinauer.

Last Friday afternoon Miss Laura Gregg, national lecturer for the W. S. A. gave a very interesting and inspiring address to the pupils on the growth of suffrage in the United States. Miss Gregg easily held the attention of the young people for thirty minutes.

A number of the ladies visited the High School Friday to hear the address of Miss Gregg.

We ought to be good this week. Besides the address Friday afternoon we had a short address by Rev H. F. Cooley, Tuesday, and on Thursday morning a talk by Rev. C. E. Ruch. Both were much enjoyed by the pupils.

See the pictures. Hear the lecture at the school house Friday night.

We are getting to the point where the morning and noon bell rings we are inclined to come back and finish now. The school house is closed for all day Sunday (!) from twelve until one o'clock. The cold days must necessitate a change in the hours. Some parents should see to it that their children do not get to school too early.

One of the most attractive features of the State Teachers Association this year is the Choral Concert under the direction of Thomas J. Kelly of Omaha. This Christmas Concert will be given in St Paul M. E. church Wednesday evening Dec 25.

A. E. Haywood and wife left last week to spend the remainder of the winter at Julesburg, Col., and Grand Island, Neb.

The company playing "Dora Thorne here last Saturday night, carried some good people, and to mention one would be unfair to all. Among the specialties the jugglers work with battle axes, was new and captured the audience, and all were above the average. The Leonard Stock Co will get a better house on their return.

Rip Van Winkle played here last night, and is one of the best companies on the road. They played here two years ago and to good business, but last night the crowd was not there. This is their last week.

Miss Clara Ogden is teaching school at Abbott on Saturday. Speaking of Rip, she compares well as Rip, and Ed Auger is considered second to Jefferson, in the part. They also gave a good concert, considering with no piano.

Destiny is darkness without a star to light the midnight gloom.

In Berlin they number the houses with illuminated paint. How about the keyholes?

It is pretty difficult to question the orthodoxy of the man who believes and acts as he professes.

How often we imagine that friends and the world have betrayed us when the fault is with ourselves.

The Vanderbilt baby is heir to $60,000,000, in addition to colds, measles, croup, mumps and other things.

The time we spend in fearing and nursing trouble should be used in gayly kicking it out of the house.

Judge Keller gave a divorce to a man who cooked while his wife danced. Anyone would dance at the mere sight of most men cooking.

A Virginia girl found a diamond in the core of an apple. The pearl in the traditional restaurant oyster is getting hopelessly outclassed.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, who bemoans the fate of being rich, can depend upon it that some millions of brave American are willing to leap to her rescue.

Henry Phipps has opened an apartment house whose tenants must not have children. The Pittsburg millionaires are going the limit in freakishness.

Gladys Vanderbilt's share of her father's estate has grown from $7,500,000 to $15,000,000. Perhaps her husband-to-be will see to it that nothing of the sort happens again.

It is not likely, however, that the plan of those New York doctors to alleviate pain by exposure to a strong light will receive any testimonials from the bad trusts.

The trouble in Persia has got to such an extent that they are organizing women's committees. The east will find public matters a very different affair when the feminine finger once gets in the political pie.

Two men and a woman have been arrested in the New York police for carrying on a game of swindling in Wall street. They certainly can plead some extenuation of their offense in the influence of environment.

The Aurora (Ill.) man who is trying an exclusive diet of peanuts for 60 days has two rivals at that place. One is eating nothing but sauer kraut, and the other nothing but beans. Another man who started on green onions has given up the job. His breath got so strong that he could not control it.

Church circles in Washington, D. C., are profoundly stirred over the case of a bride who had the wedding ring placed on her fourth finger because it was too small to go on the third. Owing to an oversight on the part of the early fathers the church now provides no adequate penalty for an offense of this kind.

The New York judge who rebuked a complaining wife and told her that when her husband gave her, as he did, each week, $25 out of his $35 salary, she had no right to suspect him of leading a double life, that the man could not do it, was eminently right. That husband should obviously lead no more than the thirty-fifth part of a life.

An explorer declares that coal is to be found around the north pole. Hitherto all the expeditions to discover this elusive point have been more or less scientific, but now that its discovery is getting down to business the public may expect to see the great trans-arctic expedition to see this black diamond treasure first.

While China is modifying and reforming in every direction, Persia is endeavoring to hedge in the matter of formulating a constitutional government, King Menelik of Abyssinia has issued a decree forming a cabinet and reorganizing the administrative system of his country along the most up-to-date European models. Abyssinia may yet show Russia how to do it.

New York university has opened a night college which offers regular academic courses and is empowered to confer ordinary degrees. At first sight this seems to belong with the night court, the "day-and-night" bank, and other enterprises which keep New York awake 24 hours a day. Yet it is not a startling innovation, after all, for night schools have long been established in American cities, there are institutions giving evening instruction in law, medicine and engineering, and much studying has always been done by the light of midnight oil.

A girl at Boydton, Va., has found a diamond in one of the seed cells of an apple. The theory is suggested that some one climbed into the tree which bore the apple while it was in bloom, accidentally dropping the setting to which the gem, which fell into the heart of the blossom, there to remain until the apple matured and was gathered. When it comes to explaining unnatural phenomena it must be admitted that people of Virginia are ingenious. Even Virgil Eaton must regard them with respect. It is easier to believe the explanation than the phenomenon.

THE PUBLIC DEBT IS BEING LESSENED.

STATE WARRANTS DECREASE

Amount Outstanding Palls $220,915 in Six Months—Statement of Auditor Searles Highly Gratifying—Other News.

Auditor Searles's semi-annual statement filed with the governor shows a decrease of $220,915.20 from June 1 to December 1. The Sheldon law limiting a tax on mill for the levy for the retirement of outstanding state warrants is having its effect on retirement of warrants which comprise the floating debt of the state and by the meeting of the next legislature this debt may be entirely taken up. The auditor's report is an exhaustive document showing the condition of all the state funds. It also includes his office expenses and the collection of fees.

The amount of state warrants outstanding June 1 was $1,695,996.01, in the past six months $1,048,445.18 were issued and $1,249,360 paid leaving a decrease as per above figures up to December 1.

To Sue Phone Company.

Instructions have been given by the railway commission to Attorney General Thompson to bring suit against the Nebraska Telephone company for discriminating between patrons in giving Burlington employes Lincoln a rate 20 per cent lower than is charged other patrons for the same service.

The commission gave this instruction to the attorney general after it had adopted the attorney general's opinion that the Nebraska Telephone company could not refuse to put in common tickets for long distance service for $100 without violating the law regarding discrimination. The Nebraska company desired to discontinue the sale of coupon tickets and had asked the commission whether or not the sale of such tickets is legal. The attorney general, to whom the question was referred, said it was not legal.

Banker Could Leave Pen.

Amos H. Gould, a banker of Bellwood, Butler county, who was serving an eight years' sentence in the penitentiary was released during the month of November, according to a report filed by Warden Beemer with the governor. Gould was convicted with the warden during his imprisonment on account of the charge that he had been selling opium to the prisoners. A convict informed on him, but when called before the warden he denied the charge.

IS ALMOST SELF SUPPORTING.

Penitentiary Makes a Good Showing for Six Months.

The dream of governors to make the Nebraska self sustaining has not been realized, but the semi-annual report of Warden A. D. Beemer to Governor Sheldon indicates that it is possible. If the labor of convicts in making repairs and in raising farm produce that is consumed is taken into account, the institution is now virtually self sustaining. If expenses can be reduced or the convict people are increased by an influx whose labor now brings the state fifty cents a day, and the prisoners can be employed at an increased wage, the thing is done.

There are more ways than one to figure it out. The report of the warden for the six months ending November 30 shows a total expenditure for salaries and maintenance of $27,696.33, or a per capita of $76.32. During the same period prisoners carried by contract labor at 50 cents a day $18,156.99 and if $9,007.54 earned by prisoners in making repairs and improvements be added, the total earnings for the period were $27,164.59, or a per capita of $74.80 as compared with per capita expenditures of $76.32. Neither is there any reckoning taken of the consumption of $3,827.07 worth of produce raised on the penitentiary farm, not counting the increase in livestock.

Warden Beemer reports the various improvements and earnings and says the total per capita cost for the six months was $99.72, per capita earnings for the same period, $65.32, making an actual per capita cost to the state of $34.69.

Of the $18,156.99 earned by the convicts during the six months $9,083.54 was unpaid November 30. Unadjusted claims against the maintenance fund amount to $4,843.10, against the general maintenance fund, $2,217.16 and against the office and contingent expense fund, $89.32.

SHOOTS WIFE AND ENDS LIFE.

V. B. Nethaway of Norfolk Becomes Murderer.

V. B. Nethaway murdered his wife and then committed suicide in the business heart of Norfolk, Neb. He shot his wife on a Union Pacific train and she died in the coach. Running a block, he blew out his own brains. It is rumored he shot one other woman. Nethaway was a hide buyer in that territory. He and his wife had quarreled and were not living together. A divorce suit was to be filed. Mrs. Nethaway had been living in Lincoln.

Gas on at Columbus.

At Columbus gas was turned into the mains for the first time on December 6. The new gas plant will be in operation the first of the week supplying heat and light to a list of nearly three hundred patrons. The buildings of the gas plant are all completed and it is one of the finest small plants in the state. Work was commenced on the gas plant September 16, and has been rushed to completion. About eight miles of gas main have been laid. The estimated cost of the plant is $30,000.

Pioneer Railroad Man Dead.

Harry Gilmore died at his home in Omaha Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Gilmore was a couple of months past sixty-six years of age. He was born in Cayuga county, New York, September 5, 1841. When about 11 years of age he removed with his parents to St. Louis, and while yet of tender years he entered the steamboat service as cabin boy on one of the packet lines between St. Louis and New Orleans. From steamboating he gravitated into railroad work, beginning as a train boy on the Iron Mountain road. He came to Omaha in 1868 and re-engaged in railroad work, continuing therein ever since with the exception of two or three years. Mr. Gilmore rapidly rose from the humbler station of railroad work to that of conductor on both freight and passenger trains, and was for many years employed in that capacity with the Union Pacific. While thus employed he attracted the attention of S. H. H. Clark, then superintendent of the Platte division of the Union Pacific, who promoted him to the position of yardmaster at Omaha. As added, the total earnings were $27,164.59, or a per capita of $74.80 as compared with per capita expenditures of $76.32. Neither is there any reckoning taken of the consumption of $3,827.07 worth of produce raised on the penitentiary farm, not counting the increase in livestock.

Expenses of School for Blind.

The total cost of running the state school for the blind at Nebraska City for the past six months was $7,447.84, or per capita cost of $401.07. Other general repairs, addition to main building and tubular fire escape, $5,934.31 was spent. This is shown by the semi-annual report of Superintendent White recently. An addition to the main building cost $3,701; general repairs $1,438.31, fire escape $800. Of the appropriation for 1905 $7,065 turned into the state treasury. The institution rented two acres of land expended $11 for rent and seed and raised $57.50 worth of vegetables. The engine and shop which machinery and repairs is valued at $580, there was sold $85.52 worth of brooms.

Inspect Missouri Pacific.

What the commission hopes will be its final inspection of the Missouri Pacific tracks in Nebraska will be made this week on a motor car furnished by the company. The trip will be made with a view to rescinding the slow speed order made by the commission when it found the tracks unsafe for fast and heavy trains. The company has been making repairs and betterments as fast as possible since the commission issued its recommendation for improvements.

Court Appoints Receiver.

Insurance Commissioner Pierce, who asked for the appointment of a receiver for the National Mutual Fire Insurance company, has received word that Judge Sedgwick of Douglas county had appointed Arthur C. Wakeley of Omaha, who had given bonds in the sum of $40,000. Mr. Pierce immediately took possession of the assets of the company. The insurance department suggested E. M. Martin of Omaha for receiver but the company objected and the court named Mr. Wakeley, a son of E. Wakeley.

FIVE CHILDREN ASPHYXIATED.

Entire Family at Nebraska City Has Close Call.

Five members of the family of Horace Kuwitzky, a plumber and steamfitter of Nebraska City, were asphyxiated and came near losing their lives. They were Minnie, Ethel and Stenna, Clyde and Harry. Minnie was aroused by feeling sick at the stomach and entered from her bedroom into the sitting room and fell on the floor near the hard coal burner, but in falling screamed for help and thus awoke the other members of the family who slept in adjoining rooms and as they entered the sitting room each fell, being overcome by gas which had escaped from the hard coal stove. The parents, who slept in another part of the house, were aroused by the noise and came to their rescue and as soon as they saw what had occurred carried the forms of their children lying around in the hall and in the sitting room. Here open the house and the fresh air soon restored them to consciousness. None of the victims were quite sick and have since been confined to their beds.

Cost of Educating the Deaf.

The per capita cost for maintaining the institute for the deaf and dumb for the six months ending November 30 was $84.24, according to the report of Superintendent White. Officers' salaries amounted to $30.28 per capita; employe's wages, $9.99 per capita; and maintenance $43.96 per capita. The total amount expended for officer's salaries was $5,420; employe's wages, $2,483.85; for maintenance $7,171.15. For repairs and improvements $1,123.24 was expended. Farm products consumed were valued at $586.85. The total of this is brought by the superintendent for the six months, excluding repairs was $15,079.60.

State School Apportionment.

State Treasurer Brian has certified to the state superintendent that there is $2,654,648.91 in the temporary school fund to be apportioned to the various counties for school districts. Last December the amount was $261,806.84, on which $2.99 per capita was paid for apportionment. The funds will not be paid out until the state superintendent certifies the amount to be paid in each county. He has twenty days in which to do this. Then receipts will be mailed by the auditor to county treasurers before warrants are issued and sent out. This will probably not be done before the first of the year.

"I Have Used Pe-ru-na at Various Times for Several Years."

Recommends Pe-ru-na.

MR. EDWARD M. BURTT, 8 N. Jefferson Ave., St. Louis, Mo., writes:

"It affords me much pleasure to announce that I have used your medicine at various times for several years, and that it has given entire satisfaction, not only in my own family, but also that of my fellowmen. Furthermore I cheerfully fully recommend the use of Peruna, as I certainly do endorse your medicine."

Catarrh of Head, Nose, Throat.

Mr. Charles Levy, 60 Allen St., New York, N. Y., writes:

"I am very glad to tell you of the cures wrought by Peruna in my family.

"My son, aged seven, who had catarrh of the nose, was cured by two bottles of Peruna, and I had catarrh of the head, nose, throat and ears. One bottle of Peruna cured me."

HAD NO DOUBT OF HIS FATE.

Mr. Jerome Evidently Was Aware of His Wife's Culinary Ability.

Some weeks ago the wife of Judge Blank, of Pacific avenue, lost her cook, and since she had no other resource she rolled up her sleeves and for a week provided such meals as the judge had not enjoyed since those happy days when the Blanks did not keep a cook. The judge's delight was so great that by way of appreciative acknowledgment he presented Mrs. Blank With a beautiful ermine cloak. Quite naturally, the luddest was a good deal noised about among the social acquaintances of the Blanks and a spirit of envious emulation was developed in certain quarters. It was in this mood that Mrs. Jerome recited the story to her husband. "What do I get, Jerry?" she asked, "if I will do the cooking for a week?" "Well," said Mr. Jerome, "at the end of a week, my dear, you'

METHODICAL MAN WAS DUE TO THRASH ENEMY.

And His Friend, a Man of Peace, Accompanied Him to the Scene of Combat, Greatly to His Discomfiture.

"I like a methodical man," said an up-town rounder, "but my friend whom I am opposite in this line. I loiter to excessive in this where I loiter is excessive in this line.

"He asked me to dine with him, and I accepted. We went at it leisurely. We got down to the foot of the menu leading all the way. As usual he was placid. We had just finished pie and demitasses when he asked me rather suddenly the day of the month. I had it handy.

"And the day of the week?" he asked. And I handed him that. Then he looked at his watch.

"You won't mind, old man," he said, "if I tell you that I must get home at once? I told him if it was a matter of any moment I would, consent, but with regret. I knew he was absent minded.

"This is the day," he continued, shoving back his glass and using his napkin hurriedly. "When I promised to give Blinks a good thrashing. I had forgotten it when I asked you to dine. You'll excuse me, old man, won't you?"

I told him, his own sake, as well as my own pleasure, I asked him if he couldn't postpone the fatte affair until later.

"It can't be put off," he replied. "I know exactly where he will be within 40 minutes, and I prefer to lick him at that place.

"Then I replied, 'I'll go with you.'

"He got under headway first and was on the sidewalk before I got my top coat buttoned. Then he called a motor car and giving the chauffeur the number he told him to take a back street and to get at top speed. Then on the way he talked about nearly everything except fighting. He even told me of a contemplated trip to the far east. He turned up a box of cigarets before the car halted in front of the place in which he said the enemy had his office.

"I asked that nor better go in with him. He thanked me, but declined the offer.

"It won't take long," he said, 'and it might not be pleasant for a third party. You hold the car till I come out.'

"As he disappeared I felt a clammy sense gathering on my brow, and removed my hat. I looked at my watch every minute. I never know time to drag as it did while I sat in that car. I will never know how long I sat there.

"I remember a figure coming out of the doorway. It had changed some since it had gone in. I leaped out of the car and approached my friend.

"He said he wasn't hurt, but I quickly saw that he had been up against it. If I ever concoct a striking transformation scene for a stage I'll put in a scene like that for a thriller.

"'Would you like to see him—the other fellow?' asked my friend.

"'I don't know what made me say that I would dote on such a sight. Quicker than a wireless message he grabbed me by the arm and rushed me up the stairway to the office of the enemy.

"My friend opened the door, shook my head through the aperture and said: 'Just like that!' The next thing I remembered I was in the car. My friend was holding something under my nose.

"He apologized for the suggestion he had made and which resulted in my emerging from the situation in a worse plight than himself. No more methodical fracas for me, thank you."—N. Y. Sun.

The Oldest Photographer.

Mr. William Hardy Reed, who died the other day in Eastbourne, England, is supposed that the reputation of being the oldest photographer in the world. He died at the age of 88. He was of New England birth, and New Bedford was his home, until about 1846 he learned the art of photography, and in 1848 he opened a small studio in New York, where by the year 1851 he had gained a considerable fortune. He then went over to London, where he opened three photographic studios, one in Oxford street, one in Regent street and another at Kensington bridge. At the time of his death he was still operating a photograph gallery at Eastbourne, and he had similar galleries at the seaside resorts of Brighton and Hastings, at New castle and Harrogate.

All Mapped Out.

"I suppose you are going to make some speeches?"

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum. "I shall deliver a few timely and significant utterances."

"Have you thought out what you will say?"

"Yes. I shall follow my usual formula. To a few extemporaneous remarks about what I have done for the good of the country I will add a humorous anecdote and conclude by assuring my constituents that I rely on the wisdom of the plain people."

NOW MR. BAXTER HAS REFORMED

Is the Future He Will Think More About Appearance.

One reason why Mr. Baxter never likes to go out evenings is because he seldom can find room enough in the street cars to make himself comfortable. There never was a person who liked to spread himself physically as does Mr. Baxter. Mrs. Baxter has frequently been sorely humiliated by that trait. When they are out together Mr. Baxter refuses to squeeze into close quarters just for the sake of being near her, if there is a wide space at the other end of the car. Baxter unsentimentally moves on and drops into it without minding in the least that he has left her alone.

Since last Thursday night, however, Mrs. Baxter has promised to think less of his material sensibilities. That evening the Baxters went to the theater. Going home Baxter, as usual, refused to sit by his wife on the ground that he would be unduly crowded. There was a rift in the row of humanity further along the line, and he went down and rested in there. He sat beside a fat man, who had previously traveled a short distance on the alcoholic route. Baxter's disinclination to share his wife's society, and his thought he understood the cause, impressed with his powers of divination he nudged Baxter good-naturedly.

"That's right," said he. "Don't give her a chance to bullyrag you before folks. It's bad enough when you're folks. It's bad enough when you're alone, but it's worse when there's anybody around to hear. That's why I give the old lady the slip. We'll both catch it when we get home, but we're safe for the rest of the trip, anyway."

The alcoholic man's "old lady," half a dozen steps away, overheard, and, judging by the rapid-fire action of her left arm, it was pretty safe to guess that the fat man would "catch it" even if Baxter didn't.

RACE NEARLY RUN

ABORIGINES OF AUSTRALIA FAST DYING OUT.

Estimate Made That Another Century Will See the Last of Perhaps the Most Ignorant Race on Earth.

The red Indian is this country is rapidly picking up a respectable degree of fighting merit, yet the Indians have seemed rather than diminished in numbers during the last half century. On the other hand, several important races are swiftly passing out of existence and will soon be known to history only.

Of these the most interesting is perhaps the race of aboriginal blacks of Australia and the islands close to the southern end of the world's continental masses of land. Careful estimates put the number of the Australians at 60,000.

As far as religious feelings go the Australian black employs them very little in his ordinary life. The aboriginal tribes as the native term is, have practically no constantly acknowledged theology that is common to any one camp for more than three days is based on the supposition that the devil is always on his trail hunting him. The number of his devices are in the evil brains of these natives.

Thus they stay in each bush camp for three days. They dig three graves for each dead native in order to fool the devil, but this worse when there's anybody around to hear. That's why I give the old lady the slip. We'll both catch it when we get home, but we're safe for the rest of the trip, anyway."

The alcoholic man's "old lady," half a dozen steps away, overheard, and, judging by the rapid-fire action of her left arm, it was pretty safe to guess that the fat man would "catch it" even if Baxter didn't.

Canaanite Burials.

Some important discoveries have lately been made with regard to the burial customs of the Canaanites. The bodies were usually deposited in caves, as Abraham deposited the body of Sarah. The caves were either natural hollows in the rock, such as abound in Palestine, or artificially formed excavations, usually roughly circular. On the floor of these caves the body was laid, in a contracted position. Stones were placed round it and earth strewn over it. For the use of the spirit of the deceased vessels of food and drink were placed near by; not without pathos is the deposit of cooked meat, with a knife to cut it and a saucer inverted over to cover it warm, that was found in one tomb in Gezer. Spears, swords, ornaments or other objects which the deceased might be supposed to require were also deposited. These objects are valuable testimonies to the belief of the Canaanites in the continuance after death of life similar to the earthly existence.

The Spanish Galleon.

Primarily the galleon was but a peaceful merchant ship, but by the irony of fate she became, almost from her inception, a center of the fiercest fighting. Square rigged and high of stem and stern, broad of bow and low of waist, with massive bulwarks and forecastle and poop three and four decks high, she presented a picture of cumbersome superabundance. Little of seaworthy naval architecture. The stem was clumsy, broad and blunt, and smashed heavily through the waves, to the great detriment of speed; this and the towering stern presented such a surface to the wind that the difficulties of steering were quite formidable, and one or other sail at the wheel were not unusual. The method in this apparent madness of marine construction was the traditional one of fighting from the deck of the sea of those days, to reduce all naval maneuvers to the stand-up-and-knock-down tactics of the land fight on a pontoon platform.—Scribner's Magazine.

Short Sleep.

"It takes just about 500 men here a year to keep us going," remarked a year to keep us going," remarked Dave Mills, assistant manager of the Euclid, the other day. "That does not include the keys that are carried away and returned by mail. Then lots of people take the metal tags off keys in order to carry the keys in their pockets, and the tags get lost. Sometimes a guest will return the key that he has carried for a year or so. But the funniest proposition I ever struck was this: We got a letter one day from a man out in Des Moines, Ia., who wrote to apologize for not returning a key he had taken away. He said he found that the key just fitted the front door of his home and that his wife had lost the key to the house a few days before, he felt obliged to keep the key from the Euclid, much as he hated to do it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Balloon Traveled Far.

"How's this? A tiny balloon of rubber sent up by a could from the Chicago garden October 20, at 3:30 o'clock, rose at which 11,000 of these balloons were sent up, has been on the world's record for speed and distance. It went 1,000 miles in 19½ hours, and was caught at Underman land, in the parish of Jesti, Finland, shortly before noon October 21. What a pity somebody wasn't aboard this tiny record-breaker! Only the name and address of the child who liberated it in Paris, with a card asking the finder to send it back, made this extraordinary voyage. But it is a straw showing what we are all coming to one of these mornings."

HARRISON CLARKE IS HANGED FOR MURDER.

DROP FALLS AT 2:39 P. M.

Efforts Made to Secure a Stay of Execution on Plea of Insanity Fail.

—Prisoner Exhibits Nerve.

Harrison Clarke, the Omaha colored man, was hanged at the Nebraska penitentiary Friday, December 13 at 2:39 for the murder of Edward Flurry, a crime that was committed March 8, 1906. Every effort to save the man from the gallows failed. The case went through the courts, an appeal was made to Governor Sheldon and at the last hour an effort was made to induce Judge Cornish of the district court to issue a stay of execution to determine the sanity of the condemned man. The insanity plea was inquired into by the judge, witnesses were examined and at 2:15 the judge announced that he could not entertain the application for a trial, it being shown by the evidence that the man was sane.

TO RAISE VALUE OF STATE LAND

Commissioner Eaton Decides to Recommend a Material Increase.

Land Commissioner Eaton has returned from Perkins county where he spent one week inspecting 31,523 acres of state school lands under lease contract. The state land department is having all school lands reappraised, the work having been commenced in 1903 by Land Commissioner Folmer. The county commissioners of Perkins county reappraised all school lands in that county at 50 cents an acre, rental value, regardless of where the land was near or far from a railroad town. Commissioner Eaton, after driving over the county has decided to recommend to the board of educational lands and fund an increase in the appraised value from $1 to $6 an acre. He found that most of the state land is used by settlers for grazing purposes, but he believes it is all good for agricultural purposes and the value ought to be raised accordingly. The state has a right any time to increase the appraised value. Mr. Eaton said the land leases from $10 to $15 a quarter section and sells for from $7 to $20 an acre. In Keith county, just across the county line from some of the land in question, the appraised price for state land leased is $1.50 an acre and the Keith county land is not as good as the Perkins county land. The state land in other nearby counties is appraised higher than it is in Perkins.

SUSPECTED SUICIDE IN CASS.

Old Settler of Elmwood Is Found Dead in Bed at a Hotel.

George S. Carnehan, of Elmwood, Cass, was found dead in his bed at a Plattsmouth hotel, with indications which may look like suicide. Mr. Carnehan had made Elmwood his home since 1886, coming there from Pennsylvania where he has one brother and one sister. The unfortunate man was about 58 years of age, and had been working as a farm hand around the city, until some eight or ten years ago, since when he was employed in the elevator, formerly owned by Dick Smith, until some two years ago, when he embarked in business for himself, conducting a billiard hall, in which business he was engaged when he took his life.

Mr. Carnehan had been afflicted with a severe and troublesome case of hernia, which has many times made life seem not worth living.

Celebrate Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. William P. Pattison of Table Rock, who have resided there about forty years, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary the other day. Wheeler of Wymore, Mrs. Belle Harlow and son of Bern, Kans., Mr. and Mrs. John Beck of Lincoln, Barney Fitzpatrick of Otoe county, and the Mesdames Lawrence of Elk Creek.

Democratic Dollar Dinner.

William Jennings Bryan will "sound the keynote" at a dollar dinner to be given in Lincoln January 15, under the direction of the democratic state committee. The banquet will be given in the auditorium and it is hoped by the Bryan enthusiasts to bring one thousand people to this banquet. A meeting of the democratic state committee will be held in Lincoln on the same date.

Sterricker, Second regiment, for promotion to first lieutenant, and Sergeant Fred R. Shearer, company G, Second, for promotion to second lieutenant.

LIGHT PLANT FOR COLUMBUS.

Promoter Wants Franchise for New Station and May Get It.

A new electric light and power plant is among the practical certainties for Columbus in the near future. At a citizens' meeting called by the mayor for the purpose of arriving at the sentiment of the business men and residents of the city relative to the granting of a twenty-year franchise to John Burke and others for an electric lighting and power plant, more than one hundred of the representative business men and property owners were in attendance and the sentiment was strongly in favor of granting the franchise. At the close of the meeting the council met in executive session and passed the franchise ordinance to the second reading, referring the matter to the committee in charge for a few minor changes.

RAILWAY MEN TO MEET.

Trainmen's Committee Will Be in Lincoln on January 3.

The general committee of the Order of Railway Conductors and of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen of the entire Burlington system will meet in Lincoln on January 3. These committees have about forty-five members and the meeting will be one of considerable importance. The committeemen have charge of the making of schedules, of taking grievances before officials of the road, and of matters in adjustment of disputes for the entire system.

Foster Is Bound Over.

At his preliminary hearing in Plattsmouth before Justice of the Peace Archer, Homer Foster was bound over to the district court under bonds of $500. Foster is the man who was charged by Lawrence Smith with robbery at South Bend. Smith claimed that Foster held him up for about $5, demanding more, and was going through his pockets for it. At this junction Smith alleges he slashed Foster with his knife, took the money away from Foster and left the latter to care for his wounds the best way he knew how. Smith was allowed to go free by Justice Archer, but is expected to remain in the city to testify at the hearing of the case in the district court.

Poorly Kept State House.

The general condition of the interior of the state house is such that callers often remark that if a private corporation kept a building in such a condition it would be charged with gross negligence. The third floor where there are several offices and storerooms of the state library is in the worst condition. In some of the halls the hemp matting has been worn into strings and persons passing are always in danger of tripping and falling. Yesterday piles of the lumber were on the floors. It is being cut up for shelving in the gallery of the state library to make room for additional books.

Roy Stone, a graduate from the University of Nebraska and a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, who has spent three years in Manila in the employ of the J. G. White Electrical company, stopped in Lincoln last week for a brief visit with friends. He is to visit his former home at Hastings and then go to St. Louis, where his marriage to Miss Marian Hudson will take place Thursday, December 19. Mr. Stone has been very successful in his profession and is under contract to return to Manila for another three years. He and his bride will sail for the Philippines on December 31.

Mail Thief at Nebraska City.

A thief took off the lock on two mail boxes at Nebraska City and abstracted the mail therefrom. Whether the locks were broken off or a key used cannot be told, because no marks were left on the boxes and the fastenings were intact when found on Sunday. A number of letters had been opened and left in the boxes, one of which was in front of the postoffice. All letters having postoffice or express orders were put back in the box and in one box there were seven letters containing express ordres. An effort was made to keep the matter quiet. A postal inspector is looking into the matter.

PLAY DAY ON SHIPS

ALL DETAILS PLANNED FOR SAILING ON LONG TRIP.

WAITING ON THE PRESIDENT

Final Function Before Start Was Inspection—Brilliant Naval and Military Ball Among the Social Affairs.

A brilliant naval and military ball was given at the Hotel Chamberlain, Old Point Comfort, Va., Friday night in honor of Admiral Evans and the other officers of the sixteen battleships which sailed Monday on their notable cruise to the Pacific ocean. The reception and dance in the gaily-decorated ball room closed a day given over almost entirely to social functions. The ships had reported "ready" and there was little or no work to do. Enlisted men came ashore in large numbers while on board the ship the gunners and ward room officers kept open house. Afternoon tea was served on every vessel and impromptu musicals were a feature of the day's entertainment. Bobbing launches, filled with gay parties from shore, made frequent trips during the visiting hours. Friday event, the most formal of the week, called out the special evening dress uniforms of the naval officers, who were all a-glitter with gold lace and trappings. Army officers from Fortress Monroe added a bright touch of artillery red to the color scheme. Flags of all nations draped the ball room.

The social sets of Norfolk, Richmond, Baltimore, Washington and other eastern cities were largely represented in the spectacular gathering.

DENVER GETS THE CONVENTION.

Democrats Select Western City for 1908 Meeting.

A Washington, December 12, dispatch says: After deciding to hold the next democratic convention at Denver, Colo., and fixing the date of the meeting for July 7, 1908, the democratic national committee late today entered upon a spirited debate on the propriety of accepting more of the $100,000 offered by Denver for the convention than actually needed to pay the convention expenses in that city. The opposition to the acceptance of the contribution took the form of a resolution by Representative Clayton of Alabama, declining money not actually needed for convention purposes, but after a long debate the resolution was laid on the table by a vote of 31 to 14. Mr. Clayton, Representative John Sharpe Williams of Mississippi and Governor Hoke Smith of Georgia spoke in favor of the passing of the resolution.

SEEMS LIKE A NEW WORLD.

Forty-seven Year Convict to Be Released from Sing Sing.

Forty-seven years a convict and now a free man, Franz Hoffman, in years of service the oldest prisoner in New York state, is afraid to leave Sing Sing prison and go to New York city where he fears he may be run over or lost. Hoffman has heard of the elevated roads and subways and of the strange things to be found in New York, and the thought of it all frightened him so that he begged to be allowed to remain in the prison until a keeper can accompany him. Hoffman was convicted of murder in the second degree forty-seven years ago. "I have heard of the trains that run up in the air," said he, "and of those running underground, but I can't quite understand it. I am safe on a horse and wagon. Yes, I am scared. I never was so nervous and frightened as I have been today since I learned that I can go free."

TIMBER GOING TO WASTE.

Millions Lost to Indians Every Year on Reservations.

The commissioner of Indian affairs, in his annual report, says that the Indians lose millions of dollars every year through dead timber on the reservations, especially in the southwest and the bureau of Indian affairs will urge at this session of congress legislation applicable to all Indian reservations, whether allotted or unallotted, authorizing the sale of timber on the Indian reservations. The Indian bureau proposes to try the experiment of giving to progressive Indians their freedom on an agreement of their allotments, so that while their lands are being held in trust they may qualify themselves to transact their own business and thus be prepared to take full charge of their affairs at the expiration of the trust period.

INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM.

State of Oklahoma Would Engraft It Upon Constitution.

The state of Oklahoma offered Monday in the national house, through Representative Fulton, to engraft the principles of the initiative, the referendum and the recall upon the constitution of the United States. One of several bills introduced by Mr. Fulton provided that "at all general elections for representative or delegate in congress the electors shall have the right to have printed on the ballot and to exercise their judgment upon any political questions."

Requests for the submission of questions must be by petition to the president and must be signed by the national chairman or secretary of some political party or by one-half of 1 per cent of the voters of any ten states. To the president the bill gives "the sole and final authority to pass on" any question prayed for. Mr. Fulton's proposal took the form of a joint resolution for an amendment to the constitution of the United States as follows:

"Eight per cent of the voters of not less than fifteen of the states shall have the power to propose by petition any legislation, and 10 per cent of not less than fifteen of the states shall have the power to propose amendments to the constitution, and 5 per cent of not less than fifteen of the states shall have the power to exercise the referendum by means of petitions to the president."

Another measure proposed by Representative Fulton provides for the recall of public officials at an election to be held in obedience to a petition signed by one-third of the voters of any congressional district; the governor of the state in which the petition originates must then call an election within five days to determine whether the officials complained of shall relinquish office and to choose his successor in the event of dismissal.

BREWER BUSCH IS ALARMED.

Says Prohibition in Oklahoma Cost Him a Million.

Adolphus Busch, the millionaire brewer of St. Louis, was quoted in an interview at Kansas City as saying he favored local option and partial Sunday closing. Mr. Busch, with his wife and a party of friends, passed through Kansas City in his special car on their way to Pasadena, Cal., where the brewer has a winter home.

"I am in favor of local option," said Mr. Busch in reply to the question of a local newspaper man. "If a saloon is obnoxious to a community, let it be voted out." He continued:

"As to Sunday closing, I have a plan that should meet with universal approval. It is this: Close the saloon from midnight Saturday until 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, and then let them open. That would give everyone an opportunity to go to church in the morning."

The widespread prohibition movement was viewed with some alarm by Mr. Busch. "It is spreading all over the south," he said, "and even Oklahoma went prohibition. That cost a million dollars."

SUSPECTS SHOT TO DEATH.

Posse Near Winlock, Wash., Avenges Wounding of Constable.

The postoffice at Winlock, Wash., was entered by burglars, but they were scared away by the burglar alarm before securing any plunder. Marshal J. P. Castalor and Constable T. F. Suddenly the men turned and began shooting, McFadden being seriously wounded. The fugitives then took to the woods. A posse soon surrounded the robbers and shot them to death. They are believed to be professional yeggmen.

THE FINAL WORD

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT NOT TO BE A CANDIDATE.

MEANS JUST WHAT HE SAID

Repeats the Statement Made Three Years Ago—Has Not Changed His Mind—Believer in the Unwritten Law of Two Terms.

President Roosevelt will not be a candidate for a third term. An doubt on this point was dispelled Wednesday night by the authoritative statement from the White House that President Rosevelt still adheres to the declaration of renunciation made on the night of the election three years ago. In the statement just issued President Roosevelt says he has not changed and shall no change the decision communicated to the American people in 1904.

It appears that President Roosevelt had been awaiting the call for the republican national convention to afford the proper opportunity for making his position clear and unmistakable, thus leaving the field clear for Fairbanks, Taft, Cannon, Knox, Foraker and other declared or receptive candidates for the republican nomination.

The president's statement follows:

"On the night after election I made the following announcement:

"'I am deeply sensible of the honor done me by the American people by thus expressing their confidence in what I have done and have tried to do. I appreciate to the full the solemn responsibility this confidence imposes upon me, and I shall do all that in my power lies not to forfeit it. On the fourth of March next I shall have served three and a half years, and this three and a half years constitutes my first term. The wise custom which limits the president to two terms regards the substance and not the form, and under no circumstances will I be a candidate for or accept another nomination.'

"I have not changed and shall not change the decision thus announced."

The announcement that the president would not accept the republican nomination came at too late an hour to become generally known in political circles, but among those who learned of it, democrats and republicans alike, a feeling was general that it left no element of doubt in the presidential situation so far as relates to the third term talk and that it definitel eliminates Mr. Roosevelt from the contest now being waged.

BABIES AT WINDOW CRYING.

Police Enter and Find Father and Mother Dead.

While his two little children slept in an adjoining bed, George Simpson, 2949 Girard avenue, Minneapolis, Minn., shot his wife to death as she lay in her bed and then fired a bullet into his own brain. The tragdey occurred some time December 9, night, but was not discovered until late in the afternoon of the 11th, whn th police broke into the room to discover why the two children were standing at the window crying.

MRS. LONGWORTH VERY ILL.

Daughter of President Suffering From Appendicitis.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, wife of Representative Longworth of Ohio, a daughter of President Roosevelt, is ill at the white house, suffering from appendicitis. It was stated by Dr. Finney of Johns Hopkins hospital that he will perform an operation soon.

Wants Good Relations.

M. Shipoff, former minister of finance of Russia, who has spent several days in Japan promoting Russian trade relations, was received in audience by the emperor. The emperor expressed a desire for the most friendly relations between Japan and Russia. Later M. Shipoff left for China. In an interview with the Associated press M. Shipoff said that there was absolutely no foundation for the report that he is to be the future Russian ambassador at Tokio. In all probability Minister Bakhmeteff would continue to act as Russian representative when the legation is raised.

Winter Wheat Area.

The crop-reporting board of the bureau of stastics of the department of agriculture has issued the following bulletin:

The newly seeded area of winter wheat is estimated as being 1.9 per cent less than the area sown in the fall of 1906—equivalent to a decrease of 596,000 acres and a total acreage of 31,069,000. The condition of winter wheat on December 1 was 91.1 as compared with 94.1 on December 1, 1906, 94.1 at the corresponding date in 1905, and a ten-year average of 93.0.

The News in Brief.

The condition of Dowager Queen Sophia of Sweden is occasioning anxiety.

The budget committee of the Swedish reichsrath approved the bill reducing the duty on sugar by 8 kronen.

The threatened attack of night riders on the big tobacco house in Lexington, Ky., did not materialize.

The Detroit city council adopted resolutions to be sent to Rear Admiral Evans, wishing him godspeed.

Emperor William left London on his return home. On his way he will stop to visit Queen Wilhelmina of Holland.

VOTES FOR CHANGE.

Boston Elects a Republican to Be Her Mayor.

A Boston, December 10, dispatch says: nI the closest and hardest fought election contest which Boston has known for many years the city went republican today by 2,000 votes. Postmaster George A. Hibbard, (rep.) defeated Mayor John A. Fitzgerald, (dem.) who was a candidate for re-election. The revised returns show the following vote cast for the mayorally candidates: John A. Coulthourst (ind. league), 15,851; Fitzgerald (dem.), 36,054; Hibbard, (rep.), 38,067.

The city voted to license the sale of liquor by a large majority, somewhat smaller than in previous years, however, due to a hard campaign on the part of the clergy and others in an endeavor to keep saloons out of the suburbs.

Two features contributed notably to the return of a republican mayor after six years of democratic administration, one being the heavy vote given the independence league candidate by democrats, and the other the thorough investigation made by a finance committee into the affairs of the city hall, which in evidence has been brought forth, alleging irregularities in the purchasing department and in the granting of contracts, through which it was claimed the city had lost hundreds of thousands of dollars.

JAPANESE SYSTEM IS BEST.

Army Medical Service Is Superior to That of United States.

Dr. Fredrick R. Green of Chicago, secretary of the committees on medical legislation of the American medical association, declared at a meeting of the committee that the American army medical service is far inferior to that of Japan, and that in case of war with that country many of the American soldiers would be in hospitals while nearly all of the Japanese would be available for active duty. The reason, he said, is that the army surgeons have not sufficient authority over the hospitals.

The legislation advocated by the committee is recognition and increased efficiency in the army hospital corps; the appointment of dental surgeons in the navy; establishment of a corps of trained women nurses in the navy; equalization of pay for medical officers in the government service.

BRIDGE GOES DOWN.

Collapse at Mifflinville, Pa., Causes Seven Deaths.

High water caused the collapse of a new bridge in course of erection over the west branch of the Susquehanna river at Mifflinville, Pa., and resulted in the death of seven men and the injury of nearly a score of others, two perhaps fatally. Forty men were at work on the traveler in the middle span of the structure when it collapsed. They were all thrown into the swollen river.

Failure Means Big Penalty.

A penalty of $500 a minute—the heaviest ever proposed by New York—is imposed in a contract just signed with the New York Edison company. The company must pay this if it fails within three minutes after a fire alarm is given, to furnish adequate power to operate pumps from the city's new high pressure water mains betwen Chambers and Twenty-third streets. The new high presure fire service will be completed soon and John O'Brien, water commissioner, has made a contract with the Edison company to supply the necessary power to operate the pumps. The new system has been installed at a cost of about $2,500,000.

Abolishes the Stripes.

Blackwell's Island penitentiary, where minor offenders of New York city's laws serve their sentences, will know the striped suit and the lockstep no more. John V. Coggey, commissioner of correction, announced that he had decided to put an end to stripes and lock-step in the penitentiary, as he believed that they did much to kill any smouldering spar of decency that may remain in the prisoner when he is brought to the city prison.

Illinois State Grange.

All arrangements have been completed for the annual meeting of the Illinois state grange, which is to begin its sessions in Joliet, Ill. Advices received by the local committee in charge of arrangements indicate that the meeting will bring representatives from all parts of the state and it is anticipated that fully 300 delegates will participate in the three days' meeting.

OLD SERVICE AT BUNKER HILL

Maine Man Owns Musket That Was Used in Historic Conflict.

Alonzo Smith of Skowhegan, Me., has an old gun, which was used in the battle of Bunker Hill, 132 years ago. Many who fought on the American side on the 17th of June afterward went to Maine to settle, among them Billy Smith, a private in the Second New Hampshire regiment. Mr. Smith is the great-grandfather of Alonzo Smith of Skowhegan, settled in Cornville in 1790, and his grave is in the orchard on a farm near where his grandson, Clark E. Smith, now lives. The musket which Billy Smith carried at Bunker Hill was among his effects brought to Cornville, and on his death passed into the hands of his son, David, and was by him bequeathed to his grandson, Sylvester Smith. A few years ago when Sylvester left for the west, he gave the famous old musket to Sylvester Smith of Skohegan, who now treasures it as a family heirloom. One remark made by Billy Smith in relating his experiences at Bunker Hill has been handed down to his descendants, to the effect that he felt some repugnance at first in shooting at the redcoats as they came up the slope, but after the first few shots he could easily take aim at a British officer as he could at a partridge. The gun itself is in working order, barring the loss of the flint, and could be easily re-equipped for actual use.

One Symptom.

"Aw, I tell you, Pottsville gits more and more metropolitan every day!" contemptuously declared the landlord of the tavern, who was swollen with local pride.

Airships and War.

Eighty years ago Tennyson wrote of "the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue," and even the poet, in a prophecy of aerial battleships, placed the time of their building in "the future, far as human eye could see." No such battleships have yet been constructed, but the art of building directable balloons has made such progress that they do not seem so fantastically impossible as a few years ago. Vice-Admiral Sir Charles Campbell of the British navy remarked in the spring of 1906 that air fleets might eventually displace water fleets, and Alexander Graham Bell said in the spring of this year that "only very few know how near America is right now to . . . the construction of a practical aerial battleship. Count Zeppelin, a German aeronaut, successfully sailed about the Lake of Constance in September, and remained in the air four hours. His balloon has been bought by the German government. Early in October the British war department made a public test of a new steerable balloon, keeping it afloat and under control for two hours. On October 21 there was an international balloon race, starting from St. Louis. The controllability of balloons, properly equipped with motors, is now so evident that war experts are suggesting new methods in warfare, says the Youth's Companion. It will be no longer possible to surprise an enemy by forced marches. The balloonist, reconnoitering in the sky, can keep his general informed of the whereabouts of an attacking force on sea or on land. A French balloonist a few weeks ago discovered a Moorish army encamped in the hills several miles from Casablanca, and enabled the Europeans to surprise and rout the semi-civilized tribesmen so completely as to lead them to sue for peace.

Up in the Air.

With the increase in ballooning there looms up a danger that will have to be guarded against as fully as any other that comes up with a new method of transportation. The owner of a building has a right to the air above and the earth beneath his possession, and if an aerial ship lingers over his habitation or his business block it is apparently guilty of trespass, and this may bring its navigator into the courts to pay the penalty for his invasion. If he throws out ballast and injures property there is just as much reason why he should be sued for damages as if he had committed the act on terra firma. He might topple over a chimney and cause loss of life, and he might do many other things that would cause serious damage during his flight through the air. Unfortunately, says Boston Budget, it would not always be easy to identify the reckless navigator of the windy way. He would be a good deal like the unprincipled automobilist who, after causing a fatal or other accident, seeks safety from prosecution in flight. Fresh inventions are seldom an unmixed blessing, and we cannot even rise heavenward without being reminded that there are people below us that need to be protected.

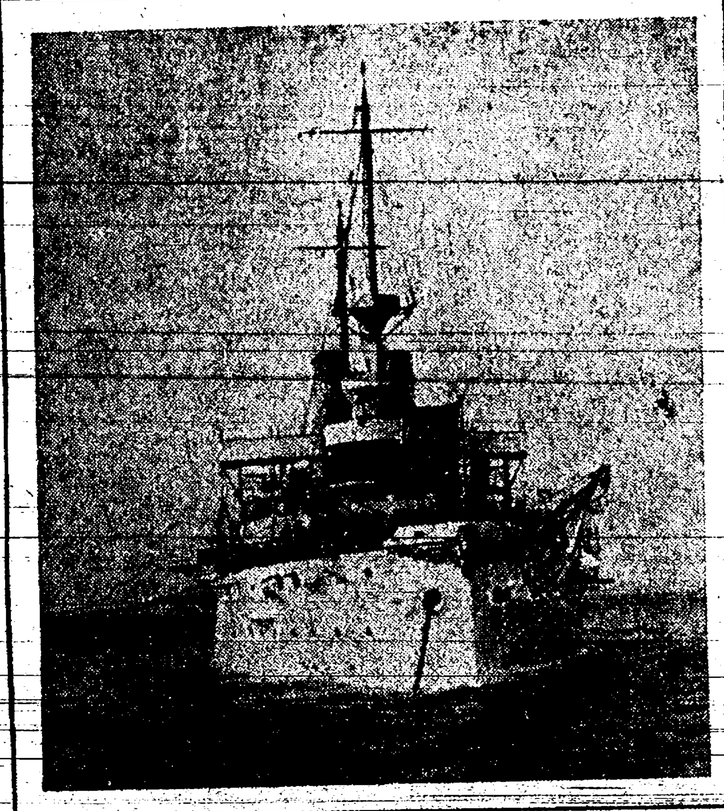
A learned Daniel come to judgment in Newark has given two decisions in mighty important cases of domestic peace which should be historic. In a case before him where a wife complained of her husband the New Jersey Solomon decided that, while it may be the duty of the husband to wash the family dishes under certain circumstances, he is relieved from that duty when, with sinister design, the dishes are piled up from meal to meal upon him. He also decided that when a husband kept only one dollar a week out of his wages for spending money his wife is not justified, either morally or financially, in suspecting him of leading a double life. Even our dignified judiciary thus contrives to get a little fun out of daily life.

The German emperor made a pleasant little speech to London newspaper men who presented him with an address. He alluded to the fact that the press has great influence and can do much to promote the peace of nations. There was nothing especially original in that statement, but it is of interest as a recognition on the part of one of the foremost of the crowned heads of Europe of the place which journalism holds in the modern world. It shows the emperor to be a progressive and tactful monarch.

The more commonly accepted signs of the quality of the coming winter are conflicting. The squirrels were never busier gathering in food for a long and severe siege. The goose-bone seems to confirm this prophecy, while the beavers are not fixing up their nests as if they anticipated any discomfort from their improvidence. In view of these contradictory tokens of what is ahead perhaps it may be well to consult the money market. This betokens a rather severe spell ahead.

GREAT FLEET SAILS

Admiral Evans Leads Atlantic Squadron from Its Anchorage at Hampton Roads---Will Meet the Vessels of the Pacific Coast at San Francisco.



THE BATTLESHIP "CONNECTICUT"

REAR-ADMIRAL ROBLEY D. EVANS

REAR-ADMIRAL WILLARD H. BROWNSON

Hampton Roads, Va., Dec. 16.—The departure to-day of the great Atlantic squadron for the Pacific is only another of the many great proofs of the nation's marvelous growth and development. The iron clad warship is only 45 years old, yet, passing through a process of swift evolution to its present perfection, this American discovery has revolutionized the science of naval warfare throughout the whole world. There are now 270 vessels in commission in the United States navy where at one time, in Washington's administration, there was not one. Of these there are 13 battleships of the first and second class, carrying guns into whose mouth this country's first and only "commander-in-chief of the navy," Esek Hopkins, might easily have hidden his disgraced head when an outraged continental congress summarily dismissed him.

It was in Hampton Roads that the first chapter in the world's history of iron clads was written. It was in Hampton Roads that the nation gathered 16 of her finest sea fighters ready for a trip of nearly 20,000 miles. Where the Merrimac swung clumsily across the channel long ago and drove terror to the hearts of seamen who had never yet seen such a monster, iron clads as graceful and as swift as greyhounds have come and gone all summer until they have become a familiar sight. Among these is the Minnesota, the largest of Uncle Sam's big battleships, and next only in size to the Dreadnaught, which King Edward of England launched with such ceremony a year or so ago, and to the Satsuma, Japan's new monster of the deep.

History of American Navy.

The first appropriation made for a navy for this country was that of the continental congress in 1775, and the sum of $100,000 was expected to purchase, equip and generally outfit 13 ships. For the present year, ending July, 1908, the navy will have needed $125,041,399, an increase of $5,000,000 over last year. Nine million alone go for ordnance stores. The last appropriation of congress for the building of ships was $20,000,000 to be expended on two big ships, each of which is to measure 510 feet in length, 85 feet beam, and make 21 knots an hour. Three million dollars was appropriated for submarines of the Holland type, and in September five torpedo boat destroyers were contracted for. Think of this in comparison with the $100,000 that cost the continental congress so much thought, and which was furnished by the people of the colonies after so much privation.

"If we are to have a commerce we much have a navy to defend it," wrote Col. Humphreys from the Barbary States in 1793 after he had been sent to see if there were means of stopping the piracy of Algiers and Tripoli on American trading vessels. For years the nation had endured the humiliation of paying tribute to these countries, and after Washington had incorporated this sentiment in his message of 1794 the United States still paid tribute, because there was no navy to prove her independence. However, that congress appropriated $700,000 with which to build six frigates. Among these were the Constitution, now the oldest ship afloat under any flag, and a training ship for apprentices at Portsmouth. With this fleet and its later auxiliaries Decatur taught the rulers of Algiers and Tripoli a stern lesson, and America soon took her place among the naval powers of the world, a place which none disputed after her victories over Great Britain in 1812-1815.

Quick Work of Preparation.

The president issued the orders for the sailing of this fleet on August 23, and since then coal mines, railways, provision dealers, and manufacturers of heavy ordnance and ammunition have known the busiest season they have had since the Spanish-American war. Altogether 35 vessels go to San Francisco, and when all have assembled in the waters off the coast of California, "Fighting Bob" Evans will have under his command the largest, most invincible, the most perfectly equipped fleet that has ever mobilized in one place since the history of the world began.

The aggregate displacement of the vessels sailing is nearly 42,000 tons, and the aggregate power is 664 guns of four inch calibre and over. The four divisions of this fleet will carry 581 officers and 11,500 enlisted men, as fine an array of jackies as any navy has ever known, and an earnest and eager set, too, for as soon as the news of the cruise was noised abroad enlistments increased rapidly throughout the navy and desertions became practically unknown.

The modern wife who puzzles for days over the packing of her husband's grips and lunch basket when he is off for a week's hunting trip, can never begin to appreciate the enormity of Columbia's task in fitting out her 11,500 sons for an outing of 115 days, in which they are not expected to set foot on land at all. Besides all the stores that each ship can carry when her capacity is taxed to its fullest, there will be two ships that carry supplies alone, the Glacier and Culgoa, and they will carry many novel foodstuffs that have never yet been carried by any navy of the world.

Immense Supply of Coal.

The item of coal alone is not inconsiderable. On October 12, contracts were let for 183,000 tons to be delivered at the six seaport towns where the fleet will stop, Trinidad, Rio Janerio, Punta Arenas, Callao, Magdalena bay and San Francisco. It is mined in West Virginia, shipped by rail to four tide water cities of the Atlantic, and whom there is handled by five American companies in 30 foreign steamers to the ports named, where it is piled on the piers ready for the battleships. Fifteen of these steamers go all the way to San Francisco with their cargoes. The cost of the coal will be about $3 a ton, and the cost of transportation will come to over $765,000.

Eight colliers accompany the fleet. The Marcellus, Hannibal, Leonidas and possibly the Sterling accompany the fleet to Trinidad, and then return for more coal. Others will go as far as Rio and return to join the fleet again at Magdalena bay, and all that have free space 'tween decks will carry general supplies for the Mare Island navy yard. The Connecticut carries 150 tons of briquettes made of slack coal and pitch to test them as a suitable fuel for use in the navy. The cost of coaling, exclusive of the amount of coal carried by the ships from Norfolk to Trinidad, will be $1,229,280, a sum more than equal to the bonded debt of the state of Idaho or the state of Washington.

Provisions in Plenty.

As to provisions, Columbia must pack enough in the giant hampers to feed her sons for the long 115 days, and have enough extra goodies for Christmas, New Year's and Washington birthday dinners, and the list shows she has not been niggardly in her selection. Five million pounds of provisions are carried on board the 16 battleships and the supply ships, the supplies from the attending vessels being transferred to the battleships when they stop at the ports for coal. There are 10,000 to 15,000 pounds of fresh meat in the refrigerators of each ship, and for the first time there will be a widely varied bill of fare where the meats are concerned.

There are a variety of foodstuffs, including tons of cereals, salt meats, dried fruits and canned goods, and 593,300 pounds of flour for making fresh bread in lieu of long anathematized hard tack. There are tons of dessicated foodstuffs that have already been tested and found good, and the more recent additions—dried eggs and dehydrated vegetables. There are 9,000 pounds of dried eggs, an equivalent of 36,000 dozen fresh eggs, and when the Christmas baking is on and the 30,000 fresh eggs also carried are not available, the mixer of cakes will find that the dried product when mixed with water will froth as easily as the fresh.

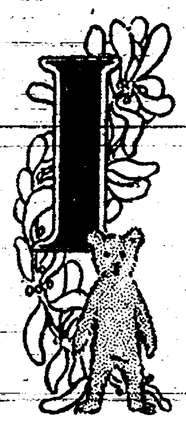
New methods of communication between the ships have been installed, and new methods of controlling the fire from the guns. So new is this system of fire control that a retired naval officer was heard to remark when the news came to him: "That is a good idea, a good idea. I am glad to hear it, indeed, for fire is a most dangerous thing aboard a ship!" The Colorado was first in this experiment. Wireless telegraphy has been a part of a battleship's equipment for so many years now that it is quite an old story, but the fleet decided it must have wireless telephony, too, so the past few weeks have witnessed a busy scene in Hampton Roads, and in New York and Brooklyn harbors, where experts have been busy putting in the appliances.

Connecticut Is Flagship.

Admiral Evans chose the Connecticut as his flagship. Capt. Ingersoll is her commander and chief of staff of the Atlantic fleet. Upon the shoulders of Rear-Admiral Brownlow at Washington, much of the work of preparation fell. The splendid condition of the fleet when it left its anchorage here to-day shows how well he has done it.

Little Vida's Gray Muff

By KENDRICK FERRIS.



IT HAD begun way back in November—the Sunday after Thanksgiving, when Sallie Carter came in late to church with a gray astrakhan muff. The sermon was too "deep" for Vida, who had her hand on her face and was almost asleep, when a flash of gray in the next pew caused her to turn her head ever so slightly and peep through her chubby fingers. There it stood on the velvet cushion beside Sallie, trim, warm and lined with pearly gray satin, exactly like Mrs. Carter's own beautiful big one, but smaller by half. A great longing began to grow in Vida's heart.

But from that day on till the 17th of December Vida thought of nothing but a gray muff—how she would look carrying it, how it would feel and how every Sunday afternoon she would let poor Dorothy Haines carry it for a whole block.

The 25th fell on Sunday that year, and Saturday morning dawned bright and clear. Vida and her mother were standing together at the nursery window, as with a jingle of merry bells the Carters' sleigh drove by. Vida sighed contentedly.

"To-morrow," she said, "I shall be carrying a gray astrakhan muff."

Her mother laughed merrily. "Why, Vida, dear," she said. "You asked Santa Claus for seven other things—you said so only this morning. You couldn't expect him to remember them all, and he's as likely to forget the muff as the French doll, or the tea set. It's foolish to count on any one thing when you made so long a list. I told you to be moderate." And her busy mother hurried off in answer to a call from Aunt Jane.

Not count on it! Why, she had done nothing but count on it ever since Santa Claus had found her note, says St. Nicholas. Not count on it. Why, Christmas would be nothing without it!

At last twilight came, and the darkness fell. And in the corner of the great hall sofa, facing the clock on the stairs, Vida, a disconsolate little body, fell asleep.

Her mother wakened her when it was time to hang up her stocking, and then, in spite of her warning, and in spite of her long hours of worry, hope was born again, and when Vida kissed her mother good night visions of gray astrakhan muffs danced in her head.

"Merry Christmas! Merry Christmas!"

It seemed to Vida she had but closed her eyes, and there stood mother and Aunt Jane beside her bed, one with her worsted shoes and the other with her red elderdown wrapper to hurry her over to the nursery, where her father stood awaiting at the door.

"Merry Christmas! Merry Christmas! Oh, papa, I said it first!" she cried, laughingly, as her father caught her in his arms.

Vida drew a quiet breath, and gave a little happy exclamation. Then she flew straight to the fireplace—the muff should be there.

Of the seven presents six were not forgotten, and there were others she had not asked for.

But Vida's lips were quivering, and a great lump swelled in her throat. The muff—the beautiful gray astrakhan muff was not there. Santa Claus had forgotten it.

But Vida was brave. And she would not let those who loved her see her cry, or suspect her disappointment. She turned away from them and went to the north window, fighting with her tears.

"Oh, papa, papa," she cried excitedly. "Come here, come here right away. See, there is something out on the roof!"

Her father opened the window quickly, and climbed out. Vida's heart beat so wildly she could scarcely speak. Her father was picking up a box—it was about the size of Aunt Jane's cooky jar, and it was round.

"Well," her father said, as he climbed back into the nursery. "Here is something old St. Nick dropped, and from its size I guess it's meant for you."

Vida's hands trembled so she could scarcely tug off the round top of the box. Just as it was about to yield, a sudden fear fell upon her heart.

"Papa, perhaps—perhaps he didn't mean it for me. Perhaps he dropped it, and it belongs to some other little girl."

Her father's eyes twinkled.

"Look at the bottom of the box, little one," he said.

Vida turned the box upside down. There was her name—Vida Sumner Lane, as plain as plain could be, and while she was staring at it open mouthed, out dropped—not a little gray astrakhan muff, but a beautiful soft chinchilla one and a little collar to match! And Sallie Carter peeped through her fingers that Christmas morning at the happiest little girl in all Christendom.

A man who figures has sent to the national bureau of statistics some facts of speech. He asserts that the woman who is a great talker is invariably robust and full chested.

LAND LAND LAND

Land that grows 1,000 to 1,500 pounds of sugar beets to the acre, 200 to 400 bushels of potatoes, 60 to 100 bushels of oats, 25 to 60 bushels of corn to the acre, and all kinds of fruit berries and melons in abundance. Rich, virgin soil, that grows luxurious crops like magic, when the water that the U. S. government provides at cost is flowed upon it. There is no such thing as a crop failure under irrigation. The farmer plants his crop and absolutely controls the amount of water his crops need at exactly the proper time, and can grow more profitable crops than he can grow in any natural rainfall country, such as sugar beets and alfalfa. Government statistics show that irrigated land will produce from two third to one-half more crops than any natural rainfall country. Officials of the U. S. Reclamation Service say that the North Platte project, which will irrigate the land we are selling, is the best adapted to irrigation of any land in the country, and the supply of water is unlimited.

College Men and the Army.

The apparent inability of the government to induce college graduates to compete for the many vacant second lieutenancies in the artillery corps is attributed by a contemporary to the pay ($1,400 per annum) of that rank. It says that this is too small as compared with the opportunities of civil employments to attract college men. We doubt the sufficiency of the explanation, since it is difficult to imagine a graduating class the majority of whose members would not jump at the offer of employment at $1,400 a year, with such additional allowances in kind as make the compensation equivalent to perhaps $1,700 in value. A second lieutenant's pay is far above that of the average, not the exceptional, clergyman or school teacher, while the young professional man has a weary apprenticeship to go through before he can demonstrate his earning power as equal to his abilities. The disinclination of college men to compete for commissions must be attributed, declares Boston Transcript, to an indisposition to follow the profession of arms as a career, rather than to inadequacy of military pay. It has the attractions of permanency, regularity and assured increase. Every five years the pay of each grade up to a certain limit undergoes an automatic advance. From the second lieutenant, unmounted, who begins service at the rate of $116.67 monthly, draws $128.33 after five years, $140 after ten years, $157.67 after 15 years, and $168.33 thereafter, in the same grade. Only when general rank is attained does the progressive increase for each five-year period in a grade cease. When we reckon the various allowances and commutations to officers it will be seen that while their pay may not be munificent, it is not such as to freeze the martial ardor of a young man with predilections for the career.

Capacity of Naturalization.

It has been frequently said that, under the new naturalization law, aliens must be able to show some understanding of our institutions and system of government. It is certain that the new law makes great advance in the safeguards it furnishes against naturalizing unfit applicants. But what it says with respect to the alien's knowledge is very slight. In a recent application for naturalization before Justice Pound, of the supreme court of New York, at Lockport, a special assistant United States attorney is quoted as saying that the applicant shall have read the constitution of the United States, have a knowledge of the state, county and municipal governments and know about taxes and schools. The judge, however, declined to accept this statement, and quoted the requirement of the statute, which is merely that the applicant shall be "attached to the principles of the constitution of the United States." This, remarks Case and Comment, leaves much to the discretion of the court. But there is quite certainly a tendency on the part of the courts to demand more proof of the fitness of the applicants for naturalization.

A man possessed of a single talent, backed by great self-confidence, will achieve more than a man who has ten talents, and yet lacks belief in his ability. The mind cannot act with vigor in the presence of doubt. A wavering mind makes a wavering execution. There must be certainty, confidence and assurance, declares the New York Weekly, or there can be little efficiency. An uneducated man who believes in himself, and who has faith that he can do the thing he undertakes, often puts to shame the average college-bred man, whose overculture and wider outlook have sometimes bred increased sensitiveness and a lessening of self-confidence, whose decision has been weakened by constant weighing of conflicting theories and whose prejudices are always open to conviction.

A college girl in the west, while attempting to escape from hazers, fell, receiving injuries from which she will probably die. This phase of the higher education for women is not going to lessen the prejudice against it to any extent. At a time when hazing among men's colleges is being denounced as brutal, its introduction among feminine institutions will prove a serious handicap to the advocates of equal intellectual advantages.

A "hero" medal has been refused to a policeman in Connecticut who, at the risk of his own life, saved a drowning baby. The refusal is based on the fact that he only did his duty. But very often that is the highest kind of heroism, for heroic things are not always done simply because they happen to be one's duty.

The kaiser is reported to have expressed eagerness for the friendship of England. Emperor William is one of the politest men in Christendom.

THE COST OF LIVING

19 BILLIONS OF DOLLARS SPENT ANNUALLY IN UNITED STATES.

THE CITY VS. THE COUNTRY

Unequal Distribution of Business Works a Hardship Upon Many, and Retards Growth of Agricultural Towns.

Statistics as to the cost of living are ever interesting to the economist. It is estimated that only 29 per cent. of the people of the United States reside in large cities. It is claimed about $19,000,000,000 are spent each year by the 86,000,000 people in the union for clothing, food and luxuries. If 71 per cent. reside in rural towns and farming sections, it stands to reason that the percentage of money paid for necessaries of life is 71 per cent. of the vast sum of nearly $19,000,000,000 annually expended. These figures open up a wide field for study of economic conditions.

For sake of illustration, let it be estimated that in the large cities the cost of living is 50 per cent. more than in the country towns and farming districts, which would still leave approximately 60 per cent. of all spent for food and clothes credited to the people living outside the larger cities. Then it is found that the amount rural residents spend annually is $11,800,000,000. But do the profits on this vast amount of business remain in the rural districts? Do the merchants in those 65,000 country towns receive the patronage of the people who are residents of the districts? A conservative estimate is that one-third of all this vast trade goes to the 415 large cities, wherein reside only 20 per cent. of the population. Were the profits on the trade that belongs properly to the country towns kept within them and within their districts, in the course of a dozen years their wealth would be increased nearly 100 per cent. But the drifting of the business to the large cities not alone makes the country towns poorer and retards their advancement, but necessitates alike drifting of the population of the country toward the thickly populated cities on account of the lack of industries to afford employment. Herein is found the cause of the complaints of students in economic conditions of the tendency of the country-bred youths to drift toward the large cities, and explains the cause. The country residents are the ones to be blamed for such conditions. It is a lack of appreciation of home enterprise, and the desire to trade in the large towns that is the cause.

The sending away of dollars assists the great combinations to control manufacturing, financial affairs, and all lines of industry, and even the trusts are tightening their grips on the farms, controlling the prices of commodities that the farmers must have, and dictating the prices at which he shall sell all his products, as with the destruction of the business of the rural towns, the home market is made poorer, and in fact even before the small town merchant can supply the people living within the town with products that are produced in the immediate neighborhood, the trusts must have their "profit" out of the transaction. Reader, do you know a remedy that can be applied that will give a more equitable distribution of business and of the earnings of the people? Do you not think that the home trade and the building up of home industries plan might bring about the desired results?

D. M. CARR.

Need of Good Schools.

Intelligence is the distinguishing mark between the savage and civilized man. Education is one of the greatest of God's blessings, and ignorance a curse. In America there exists no valid reason why every man, woman and child of normal brain should not have an education. There is no phase of life where knowledge is not necessary. In the most progressive communities is where the superior schools are found. Help along your town and help along education in general. By affording your children a chance for a good education, you offer them riches that cannot be measured by dollars. Because education is capital that cannot be destroyed; it is ready cash in hand, assets that one cannot be robbed of only by an act of Providence.

Is There Not Danger?

Is it poor policy for the farmers and the laborers of the land to help build up less than a dozen large stores situated in great cities to do business of thousands of dollars in country towns. One Chicago concern does a business through the mails of $60,000,000 a year. Twenty thousand dollars in business is about the average for the country town store. Here we have an example of one concern doing the business of 3,000 small stores. Is there not danger that should these great concerns through their immense business drive the local dealers out of trade that they would become like other great combines, oppressors of the people?

Abuse of Credit.

It is the abuse of the credit system that frequently causes trade to drift from the home town to some distant concern. Merchants extend credits to their customers, and when the bill reaches a large figure, the customer avoids the store of his benefactor, and when goods are needed sends the cash to some distant place. This is unfair, yet it is too often the case.

FACTORS IN TOWN PROGRESS.

Some Comment Affording Thoughtful Folk Food for Reflection.

It is the duty of every merchant to give support to his home paper. When he pays the editor dollars for judicious advertising he is helping himself, helps the editor get out a better paper, and helps the community in general.

* * *

Public schools are one of the great props of national government. The more prosperous is a community the higher will be the educational facilities. Good schools are a help to any town and bring into it the most desirable classes, who seek to educate their children. He who assists in building up the business of a town also assists in bettering the schools.

* * *

Commercial clubs have been potent factors in the advancement of many towns. To the farmer the commercial clubs are as important as to the man of business. There is no reason why the farmers of the community should not cooperate with the business men in every undertaking that has for its object the benefit of the home town.

* * *

The young man starting in life should have a certain object in view. The seeking of a vocation is an important thing. Too many seek lines of work that they are not naturally qualified for. The greatest success is made by the men who follow that business or profession for which they have natural inclination and talent.

* * *

Thousands of people are still on earth who can remember the dismal failure of the Ruskin cooperative colony in the south, the failing to pieces of the Belamy community in California, the disintegration of the "Agricultural Wheel" and the hundreds of thousands of dollars lost a day-dreamer in Missouri and Kansas in efforts to demonstrate the practical work of theoretical cooperation. Still people will bite at baits thrown out by the alleged cooperative commercial concerns, who have headquarters in large cities and do business through the mails.

BUILD UP LOCAL ENTERPRISES.

Individual Effort a Factor in the Progress of Cities and Towns.

A well known eastern financier, who for some time was the president of a large trust company, recently resigned, giving as his reason that a man, according to his belief, can do better working for himself, and that no man can really earn a salary equal to what he can make in business for himself. One of the conservative financial papers in commenting upon the move of the financier here referred to says that in these days, when all kinds of business are being converged into stock companies, the number of trades in which a man may engage in business for himself have become so few that for a great bulk of men, even those having the mental equipment which in other years would have been sufficient to make them their own masters, there is now no other opening than that of service for some corporation. For the bulk of the people, outside of those in agricultural pursuits, it is service for the corporation or no work at all. This truth is becoming more evident day by day. Even the farmers are feeling the grasp of corporate methods. It is true that millions must have the products of his lands and his hands, but the corporations are the mediums he must work through, and from him they exact their tithings. It is to the interest of the farmer as well as the laborer in every walk and sphere to prevent as far as possible further encroachment of organized capital, and this can be done by as far as possible keeping the dollars that you earn in circulation in the community where earned and thus prevent the further concentration of money and of business in the great cities.

Fools and Wise Men.

Some one said that "fools, women and children need be protected." The author of the phrase seemed to not take into consideration that it is sometimes hard to distinguish between the fool and the wise man. He is wise indeed who does not nibble at the baits on the hooks held out to catch him. How many people, time and time again, find themselves caught on some contract deal, find that some sleek agent has sold them a lot of inferior groceries for twice the amount that they could buy the same quantity of goods from a local dealer, and get a far better quality? Be careful when dealing with strangers. Remember the biggest frauds present the most plausable appearance. Don't sign any kind of a contract or order without the most careful investigation.

Favors Soon Forgotten.

Not many years ago the majority of farmers in newly settled sections were dependent upon the business men and the merchants of the towns to carry them through between crops. There are farmers who can look back a few years ago and see where they were favored when in want of supplies and had not the money to pay for the same. Prosperity changes many, and this may be the cause why those who a dozen years ago were so anxious to see the country develop, now send much of their money to outside places for goods needed, instead of keeping their dollars at home to further enrich their community; and how soon are favors forgotten. The merchants who assisted in making success possible for many by quite a few are passed by. Is this Christian gratitude?

WORK OF "SPESHES"

DETECTIVES ARE IMPORTANT PART OF RAILROAD SYSTEM.

Organized for the Protection of Shippers and the Traveling Public—Have Put a Stop to Dishonest Practices.

"I don't know what the railroads would do without the speshes nowadays," said a railroad official, using that cryptic contraction "speshes" as if everybody ought to understand what it meant.

He was referring to the members of the Association of Railway Special Agents. Compactly, they're the railroad detectives, the railroad secret police; and "railroad special agent" has been contracted by railroad folk to "spesh."

"There were railroad detectives of a sort; men with no particular training and summoned for special purposes, before we organized," said one of the speshes. "But speaking generally, before we got together and began to branch out in our work the railroads, the shippers and the traveling public were virtually at the mercy of all sorts of thieves and swindlers.

"For one thing, the railroads had no reliable method of discovering and stopping peculations or outright robberies on the part of their own employes. The tracing system, so-called, in the course of which the railroads sent supposedly honest employes on the trail of suspected employes, never worked out in practice. The men chosen to do the tracing work generally showed themselves to be incompetent, or they were easily led into believing anything they were told by the employes under suspicion, or for a rakeoff of the swag they swung along with the crooks, so that the railroads were all but helpless in running down plunderers.

"But it took the railroads, all the same, a good many years to acknowledge their helplessness in this respect. A group of powerful railroad men finally came to the front with the suggestion that the railroads would have to be secret policed. The railroad secret service was regularly organized not long after that. The fine work accomplished by the secret service of the American Bankers' association and the American Jewelers' association was an argument in favor of the organization of a railroad service.

"At first it was intended that the work of the railroad corps should be confined exclusively to the protection of the railroads from dishonesty on the part of their own employes and to runnning down robbers of freight in transit. Fact is, the service did operate exclusively along those lines for a while, and with whooping success. It is now pretty generally understood by railroad employes tempted to engage in dishonest practices that they have about the same eventual chance of being grabbed with the goods as counterfeiters have of being corralled with the merchandise by the United States secret service, and I needn't enlarge upon the dimensions of that chance.

"Our work for the railroads, in a way, is comparable with that of the postoffice inspectors. When it is understood how inevitably the postoffice inspectors get the postoffice employes who yield to temptation, this comparison will be the better understood."

Railroads in Spain.

The doors of the third-class cars are narrow, writes Thornton Oakley in Harper's Weekly. I remember at one of the mountain towns how a fat man kept the train waiting with his efforts to get out. He was huge and round, with a red face full of wrinkles and shining shaven head. A Maltese cross shone white upon his brown expanse of cassock. He got wedged tightly in the door and could move neither in nor out. His face grew apoplectic. Perspiration streamed down his forehead. His hat rolled beneath the train. He dropped his bag upon the platform, and as it fell, it burst open. Glass crashed; cigars were scattered all about. As the bell sounded he began to shout. The guard came running. The station idlers crowded up. They tugged at him, pulling at his hands, his robe, his fat striped legs. Over his shoulder within the car, you could see men pushing from behind. Suddenly he came through with a rush, his cassock torn and flying, his little eyes wide with fright.

I looked back as the train moved off. He was lying back panting on a bench, his feet spread wide, while a woman was pouring something down his throat."

Elephant and Engine Meet.

An elephant was crossing a railway line when a down ballast train in motion tried to whistle him off the line, says the Madras Pioneer. He obeyed the whistle, but instantly was on the line again and pushed the engine back with all the strength he could muster, causing the derailment of the engine and one of the trucks. The driver fell off and received some injuries, and the mahout, who had apparently lost all hold over the animal, and had perhaps anticipated the accident, jumped down, but was unhurt. The elephant was only bruised.

Veteran Baggagemaster Retires.

James M. Vibberts, of Wethersfield, Conn., the oldest baggagemaster in America, has resigned because of rheumatism. He is 87 years old, and has been baggagemaster on the Valley division of the New Haven line since it started, running the first train in 1871. He gets a pension and a free pass.

PORTLAND'S ELECTRIC ENGINES.

Four Locomotives Run by Electricity Will Be Devoted to Freight Service.

Two electric locomotives were delivered for the O. W. P. company Saturday afternoon at the East Side yards, which when fitted up will be put on the freight run on the Cazadero division. These two engines were made by the General Electric company of Schenectady, N. Y., and came west on their own wheels.

The company has under construction at its shops on the East side two additional engines of the same type nearing completion. These four will take care of the freight business for the present on the Cazadero division. Passenger trains and individual cars will continue on the line equipped with automotors as heretofore, the locomotives being intended for freight service entirely, having displaced the steam engines previously used on the run.

The new electric locomotives are of 40 tons' weight, and are of the latest model. These engines are in use on most of the eastern trolley lines that have suburban freight service and are found to be adapted for the purpose better than anything yet constructed.—Portland Oregonian.

GETTING A RAILROAD JOB.

Unfortunately, Novice Made Bad Bungle of His Application.

His name doesn't matter, but he resides near Forest Park. He was 20 when this happened (which is only a few short weeks ago), and just out of school. He wanted a job—something good, of course, for he had conquered in his struggle with the class valedictory, and everybody, including his relatives, had said that he was destined to become a great man. He thought he'd like the railroad business, and he told his desire to a friend.

"The main thing," advised the friend, "is to convey the impression that you know something about the business when you ask for a job. And the more they think you know the better the job you'll get. When you tackle the big noise who sits at the mahogany desk try and talk like a railroad man."

The future great man spent two or three days practicing what he thought was railroad "lingo," and then went down to the office of one of the big railroads.

Entering the employment department, he repeated to himself the little speech he had prepared, and he handed his card to the secretary with the assurance of a time-tried business man. But when he was escorted into the presence of the superintendent he lost his nerve and his memory deserted him. However, he clung to his hat bravely, and blurted out: "Is there any danger of getting a job around here?"

There wasn't.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Didn't Mind Showing Her Ankle.

"Conductor John Gaudam was very sensitive about his name, and always insisted that friends addressing him hastily should call him 'John,'" says a correspondent. "He was one of the best fellows I ever worked with, but he was continually getting into hot water.

"On one of our trips Gaudam was passing through a coach when he noticed a woman asleep in a seat. Her head was on the window-sill, and her feet extended to the aisle. Her dress was so badly disarranged that her ankle, and a good portion of an exquisitely fashioned calf were plainly visible. A number of men a few seats farther down were contemplating the scene with keen enjoyment.

"Now, Gaudam was always very strict, and kept things straight on his train, and he noticed this. He touched the woman on the shoulder and woke her up.

"'Madam,' he said, politely; 'excuse me for disturbing you, but your dress is so disarranged that your ankle is exposed.'

"'Oh, that makes no difference,' replied the woman, smiling sweetly. 'It's nothing but cork.'

"In three seconds Gaudam was in the baggage car, where he promptly lost his religion."

Engineer's Heroism.

The locomotive engineer in Arizona who ran a burning powder train half a mile to save a town and was blown to bits in the expected and inevitable explosion, was a hero of the most pronounced type. But a striking feature of his heroism was that he did not think of it in that light, but sacrificed his life as a matter of course and plain detail of duty, knowing there was no reward for him this side of the grave. That is the sort of heroism which tells in the bettering of the human race and in the raising of its standards.

Missouri's First Railroad.

The first railroad in Missouri was a track five miles in length, laid from Richmond to a point on the Missouri river opposite Lexington, some time between 1849 and 1851. It was made of timber, the rails being of sawed oak and the ties of hewed oak, and was operated by horse power.

Nitrogen in Animal Charcoal.

Why animal charcoal removes the color from colored liquids, while wood charcoal has no effect, has not been understood. A European chemist now finds that the action of the former is due to the presence of five to seven per cent of nitrogen.

New Government Monopoly.

Germany's government has decided to monopolize the manufacture of brandy throughout the empire. It will guarantee the manufacturers market prices for their spirit, but the price of brandy to consumers will be raised. The net profit to the government will, it is estimated, be about $17,500,000 in the first year.

Pension for Mothers.

The pensioning of mothers by the state is advocated by a University of Chicago lecturer. The professor thinks the pension should increase in amount up to the third child, and then decrease until the advent of the sixth, when it should cease. This seems to be a sort of compromise between anti-race suicide and socialism.

WAYS TO OVERCOME INSOMNIA.

Practical and Perhaps Practical Methods of Inducing Sleep.

"What lulls me to sleep after everything else has been tried," said the first sufferer from insomnia, "is to think of a sunset, the sun just gone down like a dull red ball, the skies mellow, half golden, half lavender, soon to turn all lavender, which will soon be purple, getting slowly by and by darker and darker until it is the purple of night and the evening star has come out. By the time it begins to shine like a soft glow-worm in the dark soft rich purple I am asleep."

"I think of a deep, soft, velvety curtains that has come down over everything that has worried me, come down between all the world and me," said the second sufferer. "I say to myself: 'Now there is nothing before me but this beautiful thick, soft, dark curtain, and it is getting darker and darker. It is grayish purple now, it is deeper purple. See how soft it is. See how velvety it is. It is a deep, rich purple now. Now it is black, so black, so rich and heavy and velvety, so velvety—.' And when it is quite black, so soft and deep and velvety that it rests the mind of my eye entirely, I fall asleep."

EXPLAINED THE WHOLE THING.

Note Was at Once Brief and Beautifully Comprehensive.

J. Ulrich, trade manager of the Keystone Telephone company of Philadelphia, has deleted the word "please" from the vocabulary of his exchange girls. They will hereafter say "ring off" instead of "please ring off," "call again" instead of "please call again," and so on.

"The word 'please,' Mr. Ulrich explained to a reporter, 'was used in our telephone business 500,000 times a day. Allowing half a second for its utterance, that meant a daily waste of 125 hours. Why shouldn't all those hours be saved, saved for some better use?

"You know, Mr. Ulrich went on, I believe in few words. Wasted, superfluous words mean spoiled effects. What, for instance, could have been more telling, more effective, than the note, containing not a single superfluous or wasted word, that a man once wrote to his physician?

"This note ran:

"'Dear Doctor: I had a few words with my wife last evening. Please send me a bottle of lotion.'"

Carrying Commercialism to the Grave.

The visitor from abroad arriving from the Jamestown exposition went about seeing New York, after which he declared that no one need leave that city to visit any exposition, for there was more to be seen there than anywhere else for the needs, comfort and entertainment of man from the cradle to the grave, albeit the cradle is now a mere figure of speech, being followed by modern science in the bringing up of the infant. According to the curious fashion of New York, the visitor was then taken to visit the cemeteries in the vicinity. Near the entrance to one of them a florist does a thriving trade. Entering here the visitor and his escort were conducted through a wilderness of blooms by a polite salesman to a department in the rear, where, to the visitor's astonishment, was a row of miniature graves decorated in different styles according to the customer's desire. "This," said the polite salesman, "is myrtle; this, you said this is the plain moss bed. The visitor stood in wonder while the florist clerk had been truly said America carried commercialism even to the grave.—N. Y. Times.

LAND LAND LAND

Land that grows 15 to 25 tons of sugar beets to the acre, 200 to 400 bushels of potatoes, 40 to 100 bushels of corn to the acre, and all kinds of fruit berries and melons in abundance. Rich, virgin soil, that grows immense crops like magic, when the water that the U. S. government provides at cost is flowed upon it. There is no such thing as crop failure under irrigation. The farmer plants his crop and absolutely controls the amount of water his crops need at exactly the proper time, and he can grow more profitable crops than he can grow in any natural rainfall country, such as sugar beets and alfalfa. Government statistics show that irrigated land will produce from one third to one-half more crops than any natural rainfall country. Officials of the U. S. Reclamation Service say that the North Platte project, which will irrigate the land we are selling, is best adapted to irrigation of any land in the country, and the supply of water is unlimited.

Renters, Why pay from $3 to $10 an acre rent for land when you can get 160 acres of fine irrigated land for about the same money you are paying for one year's rent. I an eastern farm.

Come to the New Land and own a fine farm that will grow larger crops than the high-priced land you are renting. Uncle Sam will supply you with water to irrigate 160 acres of the most productive land in the country at cost. I can secure you a fine 160-acre, irrigable farm for from $1 to $5 per acre.

Don't Wait! It won't last long. Thousands of people are flocking to this country, and the sooner you come the better bargain I can get you. Don't waste your life renting somebody else's farm at a high price. Come to the rich and fertile North Platte Valley, and make a home and fortune for yourself and family. Don't neglect this splendid opportunity. There's big money in it. This land that you can now secure for practically nothing, will be worth from $100 to $300 per acre as soon as irrigated and improved. It is better land than Colorado land, that is now selling for as much. You can hire all the work done on sugar beets for $45 an acre, and at the average yield of 20 tons an acre, you can clear $55 an acre and do no work on it yourself.

Farm Owners, Why farm $465 eastern land when you can buy irrigated land here from one-tenth to one-fourth the money, and get that will produce larger crops and increase rapidly in value? Sell out and come to the rich North Platte valley. We are not pioneering. There are no hardships in this country—towns, railroads, schools and churches are close at hand. The Platte Valley is centrally located and convenient as to all markets. Railroad communications are unexcelled to all good shipping points. All kinds of produce, cattle, hogs and sheep command a high price. The Burlington & R. R. now runs through the valley and the Union Pacific is rapidly pushing work on it through into the coast, which line also runs through the valley. Thousands and thousands of tons of hay are cut in the river bott ms every year.

Investors: We can sell you deeded land that is increasing rapidly in value and will continue to increase in value for years to come. Irrigated land is not subject to the depression in land values that always go with a period of crop failures in any natural rainfall country. No matter what the weather you can grow a crop every year under irrigation. I control the sale of about 60,000 acres of irrigated and dry lands, but land and ranches, I can secure you any kind of land at a price that will make money quickly for you.

Write today for further information. Local real estate dealers cooperate; we can make some money for you.

"Street Singers of the Sunny South."

Manager Phillips of the Opera House is planning a dramatic treat for Elgin theatre-goers in the shape of "At Valley Forge," which rounded Christmas week. This play is a veritable wonderland. At Mound City, in the home of Mrs E. D. Clapp, a little girl suffering from a severe case of hooping cough has taken two bottles of Revolutionary Tonic. It occurred. Her son seemed near death. The scenes are loyed near Elgin by those with lung and throat trouble. Mrs Clapp is pleased to tell about it. Exhausting coughing spells frequently result in vomiting, and cause pain. Revolutionary Tonic relieves the cough and heals the lungs. Sold by Elgin druggists. Trial bottle free. Large bottle 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle and booklet free.

A Real Wonderland.

South Dakota with its rich silver mines, bonanza farms, wide ranges and strange natural formation, is a veritable wonderland. At Mound City, S. D., the Chicago & North Western Railway has established a summer resort which is becoming very popular. Here are to be found the famous Bad Lands, the Indian Mounds, the Petrified Forest, the Mammoth Cave, the Natural Bridge, the Devil's Tower, the Old Indian Battle Ground, the Custer Trail, the Old Stage Coach Trail, the Old Pony Express Trail, the Old Wagon Trail, the Old Indian Trail, the Old Buffalo Trail, the Old Deer Trail, the Old Elk Trail, the Old Bear Trail, the Old Wolf Trail, the Old Fox Trail, the Old Rabbit Trail, the Old Squirrel Trail, the Old Bird Trail, the Old Fish Trail, the Old Frog Trail, the Old Snake Trail, the Old Lizard Trail, the Old Turtle Trail, the Old Alligator Trail, the Old Crocodile Trail, the Old Elephant Trail, the Old Rhinoceros Trail, the Old Hippopotamus Trail, the Old Giraffe Trail, the Old Zebra Trail, the Old Antelope Trail, the Old Deer Trail, the Old Elk Trail, the Old Bear Trail, the Old Wolf Trail, the Old Fox Trail, the Old Rabbit Trail, the Old Squirrel Trail, the Old Bird Trail, the Old Fish Trail, the Old Frog Trail, the Old Snake Trail, the Old Lizard Trail, the Old Turtle Trail, the Old Alligator Trail, the Old Crocodile Trail, the Old Elephant Trail, the Old Rhinoceros Trail, the Old Hippopotamus Trail, the Old Giraffe Trail, the Old Zebra Trail, the Old Antelope Trail.

Wonders.

A writer who is not even ordinarily clever can make wonderfully interesting stories out of surgery and astronomy, because those subjects are "caviare to the general." We love to revel in mysteries. The astronomer tells us that there is no science so exact as astronomy; and as I assume that every one believes the weird statement that the sun has just coughed up a streak of flame that traveled 10,000 miles a minute and attained an elevation of nearly 350,000 miles. You could almost light your cigarette on the tip of that. Another statement: "A giant negro, working in a cut, had a chunk of earth fall upon him weighing eight tons. The impact flattened him and squashed his heart out with such force that it flew through the air a distance of 97½ feet. When we picked it up it was beating at the rate of 63 to the minute and its pulsations continued for thirteen minutes." I guess we all believe that, too!

Seal Killing in Boston Harbor.

Under the law the city pays a bonus of three dollars for each seal killed in the harbor. Late in August two Indians, Dana and Sapiel, camped out on Peddock's island, and among other things, began looking for seals to kill. Recently the results of their labors were shown when the two Indians brought into the office of City Clerk Donovan the tails of 62 seals, entitling the men to $186. After counting the tails Assistant City Clerk Priest gave the men an order on the city treasurer, and the Indians went to the office on the first floor and collected their money.—Boston Transcript.

Evident.

With hisses and groans an audience greeted the great scene of a new drama. All hope of success was at an end.

"It's hard to tell what the public murmured the heartbroken

A Pioneer Orchard Maker.

"Johnny Appleseed," who was John Chapman of Ohio, while the middle states were still the far west sought out the best way in which he could help his fellows. Believing that the meager dietary of the pioneer, frustrated against health and economy, he fixed upon a plan which, put into execution, would bring joy and help to the settlers. He spent many years in traversing all the region about the Ohio valley, in sowing wild and fertile land with the seeds of fruit, especially of apples. The trees grew and soon their fruit formed the new world treats upon the table of the pioneer. Many an orchard today growing upon the rich land of the prairies is the result of the large-hearted, humanitarian. His native state is about to erect a monument in his memory.

Soviet Assists Keeping.

Besides the bloodless, possessed a quiet and quiet humor. Mme. M. S. Van de Vyne gives an instance of it in "Random Recollections." Mr. Preston was Minister's foreign visitor for a walk in Boston Common one Sunday.

The special object of the stroll was to see the fountain in the frog pond. When the two arrived at the spot they found the water shut off.

"Oh," said Prescott, disconsolately, by way of apology, "I knew those boys were not allowed to play on the Sabbath, but I did not know that fountains were not permitted to do so."

Love's Language.

Again he crushed her to him.

"Darling," he breathed, "this kiss tells you all that I would say."

"Paso, Pico!" she whispered. "Did you understand my dear?" he whispered.

Blushing faintly, she responded:

"Yes." meaned the disbelief backer of the show, "my case is dough."

"Exactly," returned the star of the play, "and the public is the guy who has to make it rise."

One of the most remarkable feats of husking corn which has been recorded by the writer took place in one of the farms of Fred Smith on Saturday, December 15th, when Charles Story, son of J M Story, of Miles Precinct husked thirty-nine bushels of corn in one hour and forty-five minutes. Had this rate been kept up for ten hours the lad would have gathered almost 225 bushels, and that's more than the writer of this item would guarantee to husk for the first day at least. Mr Story made this splendid showing in nice, ripish ears about sixty bushels per acre.—Pawnee Chief.

The State Journal of last Sunday published a photo of Archer King and his automobile and gave the following description of the young inventor and his machine.

Archer King, a young and prosperous farmer living some five miles northeast of Table Rock, has constructed for himself an automobile, No. 1906, making all the necessary wheels, chains, spring and sprockets, which were ordered. The machine was built according to his own ideas, and he says that it contains parts from 20 different kinds of machinery now in domestic service, from threshing machine, self binder and steam log machine, to the baby carriage and sewing machine. It is an 8 horse power machine. Its speed limit under favorable conditions is 15 miles an hour. The machine weighs 1,200 pounds, and it is said, will not scare any people as can climb on it. It is not unlikely to climb over a log or two if undertaken. The body of the auto was performed on the home farm, with a few additions to the tools in ordinary use by the average well-to-do farmer, to accomplish the work.

The Burlington Exhibit Car to Visit Table Rock

To show in a practicable way the heavy and fine crops of grain, vegetables, grasses, fruits and miscellaneous that are raised by irrigation in the North Platte Valley and the Big Horn Basin, also the excellent crops produced by the dry farming methods the Burlington road has inaugurated, it fitted up an exhibit car of these products and has begun its moving tour, going through Iowa, Illinois and Missouri over nine (9) lines of road.

This interesting car has already exhibited at scores of towns at many state and county fairs and over 5,000 visitors have passed through the car, admiring the wealth and possibilities of the crops of western Nebraska and the Big Horn Basin.

Complying with the law, the Burlington cancelled the free transportation to land agents, but the passenger department quickly sought a way to continue the good work of settling the desert. The road turned out a special car from the shops, fitted it with exhibits, placed skilled men in charge of the car and started it east to bring Nebraska and the northwest closely among the farmers of the east. It is thought that the leisure time of Nebraska farmers during the winter will permit them to visit the car while it is on the side track at Pawnee, between the dates of March 5th to March 7th. There is no admission, visitors are the guests of the railroad.

HAIL INSURANCE CO. READY TO QUIT BUSINESS.

APPLIES FOR A RECEIVER

State Insurance Deputy Pierce Intervenes and Insists That State Should Have a Voice in the Appointment of Same.

President G. F. Johnson of the Mutual Hail Insurance company of Nebraska beat the state insurance department to the district court with a request for the appointment of a receiver. He has made application to the district court of Lancaster county. Insurance Deputy John L. Pierce has notified the court that he and attorneys for claimants against the company desire to be heard before a receiver is appointed. They believe they should have something to say who shall be named for receiver. The company has been doing business principally among Swede farmers and most of the losses occurred in Phelps county.

Examiner H. S. Wiggins for the state insurance department examined the company's accounts and reported September 23 that a 20 per cent assessment had been called and that this might be sufficient to pay losses. Five thousand dollars had been paid on the assessment September 25, but he did not believe much more would be collected. He recommended the appointment of a receiver. The report of the examiner dated December 7 showed nominal resources amounting to $15,650. This was made up of $12,875 of unpaid assessments and $2,800 cash. The liabilities included losses for 1907 amounting to $13,230, leaving a nominal surplus of $2,442. President G. F. Johnson has made his home in Lincoln while Secretary O. P. Almort lives in Des Moines, Iowa.

EGG THROWING STUDENTS.

Supt. McBrien Holds Teachers May Punish for Action.

The teachers in the Fremont high school may legally punish students who threw eggs at Dan V. Stevens, a member of the board of education, who had voted as a member to abolish basket ball and other athletics from the schools. Although the boys were not going to nor coming from school when the assault was committed, and it was outside of the school hours, the culprits may be punished by a teacher. The boys have not been whipped yet, and the question before the state superintendent is whether or not the teachers may administer punishment in such a case. It is the opinion of the state superintendent that the throwing of eggs at a member of the school board, even though the casting of eggs be outside of school hours, interferes with the discipline of a school and punishment can be meted out when the offenders come slinking back across the sacred portals of the halls of learning.

The state superintendent's ruling closes:

"In the event that the home fails to administer the proper punishment on a pupil or pupils guilty of such unbecoming conduct as that implied in your question, the only recourse left for the proper discipline of the school is to give the teacher the unquestioned right to administer punishment commensurate with the offense."

School Teachers Needed.

State Superintendent McBrien is not a member of any employment bureau and does not charge a fee of $2 for obtaining employment for a teacher, but he is sometimes requested by school officers to find teachers for them. He has been asked to get teachers for schools in Cheyenne county. He has written presidents of state and private normals if they have any worthy young men or women who will accept schools in that county to write the following persons: S. H. Babb, Dalton, three months' school at $40; Busaker, Weyerts, four months' school at $40; Earl Dye, four months' school at $45; Adam Shinka, Sidney, four months' school at $45; F. D. Wacker, Sidney, four months school at $45.

Train Jumped the Track.

A Missouri Pacific northbound freight train jumped the track on Freeling hill near Falls City. No one was injured and the damage to the rolling stock was small. At this point the track has not been renewed and the ties were too rotten to hold the rails from spreading. New rails and ties have been distributed along the grade north from this place but have not been put in place. This work is being pushed as fast, however, as the weather will permit.

OMAHA CHILD SAVING INSTITUTE

What It is Doing and Its Urgent Needs Financially.

Among the children received into this institution the present month are three little ones, ages, 2, 5 and 6 years, whose father is dying at one of the city hospitals and whose mother is an invalid and compelled to surrender the children for adoption, there being no relatives or friends to help take care of them. Another child brought to the Institute one week ago was suffering from neglect, the eyes being so inflamed that the oculist on our medical staff, who made examination and gave treatment stated that three days more of neglect the child would have been totally blind for life. Now the child is on the way to complete recovery. Another child requires a surgical operation which will be attended to immediately after Christmas.

These and many others are deserving cases of charity requiring the expenditures of considerable sums of money, and the institute is without resources to meet the demands. Since the work is supported altogether by voluntary gifts we appeal to the readers of this paper for a Christmas donation. The average number on hand daily is from forty to sixty. Please make postoffice orders and checks payable to C. W. Lyman, treasurer. We trust you will help make these homeless and friendless little ones happy until permanent homes can be found for them. A. W. CLARK,
Superintendent.

He was 55 years old and had but one child, a daughter living in Denver. He was an old resident of Clay county.

E. B. Fairfield, State Accountant.

Ernest B. Fairfield, for many years bookkeeper at the state penitentiary, has been appointed state accountant. Auditor E. M. Searle made the appointment and it was approved by Governor Sheldon, whose approval is required by statute. It is to take effect about the first of the year. The auditor and governor will determine the amount of salary to be paid. It is understood it will be not less than $1,800 and not more than $2,000 a year and traveling expenses. The legislature created the office of state accountant and while no fixed salary is mentioned in the bill, an appropriation of $6,000 for salary and traveling expenses was made for a period of two years.

The supreme court has affirmed the sixteen year sentence of Fred Clements convicted in Sarpy county of the killing of Luke Goldie. MAKE BANKS GOOD CHANGES SUGGESTED IN THE LAW OF NEW YORK.

COMMITTEE MAKES REPORT

Aim to Prevent Development of Panics, and a Strong Presentment Made Against Promoters.

The committee of bankers appointed by Governor Hughes during the monetary panic to recommend modifications of the New York banking laws has reported to the governor measures which will tend to prevent the development of such panics. The report in general expressed the view that in New York City state banks should maintain the same cash reserves as national banks, namely 25 per cent, and that trust companies should maintain also a 25 per cent reserve, not necessarily all in cash, but in their own vaults. Strong presentment is made against the practice of promoters obtaining control of banks to further their own financial schemes. The report says that as New York City is teh financial and commercial center of the continent, cash bank reserves must not be permitted to become impaired.

The committee recommends that the state superintendent of banks be empowered to veto the establishment of a bank or trust company or a branch thereof or the purchase of the control of one banking institution by another.

The committee believes that banks in New York City "should not hereafter be permitted to have branches until they possess a capital of $500,000; and we think that both banks and trust companies should be required to furnish an additional $100,000 capital for each branch opened."

In general the committee would increase and make more direct and intimate the supervisory contract of the state superintendent over all money in state institutions.

SHAW'S MIND NOT MADE UP.

Former Secretary Tenders Presidency of Suspended Bank.

Leslie M. Shaw, former secretary of the treasury, who is now president of the Carnegie Trust company, said that he had been approached by friends from Kansas City with the suggestion that he assume the presidency of the Kansas City National Bank of Commerce, which recently suspended and is now being reorganized. Mr. Shaw said that no formal offer had been made and that he had not indicated to his friends whether he would accept the position. He would not commit himself on the matter at this time, he said.

Action Threatened in Kansas Against Missouri Pacific.

BANKING LAW OF OKLAHOMA.

Guarantee Fund For Those Under State Jurisdiction.

The new banking law for Oklahoma, wherein is provided a guaranty fund for the protection of depositors in insolvent banks, will become operative February 17, 1908. Its makers believe it will make impossible a run on an individual bank or permit a money panic in the state. Each state bank is required to pay to the state banking board a sum equal to 1 per cent of its daily average deposits. Whenever this sum is depleted it shall be increased by further assessments.

When a bank fails, the state bank examiner steps in and forthwith pays the depositors from the guaranty funds held by the banking board. These payments become a first lien on the assets of the defunct bank. National banks that wish to avail themselves of the benefits of the law may do so upon a plan agreed upon by the banking board, the bank commissioner and the comptroller of the currency of the United States.

WRITING UPON MAIL MATTER.

Certain Words Permitted on Gifts For Christmas.

A statement recently published has caused the postoffice department to call attention to the law governing writing upon mail matter of the third and fourth classes.

It appears that the department has been accredited with a statement to the effect that holiday greetings written upon mail matter of the classes mentioned might subject the offender to a fine of $10. As a matter of fact, the law governing this subject reads as follows:

"Such inscriptions as 'Merry Christmas,' 'Happy New Year,' 'With best wishes,' etc., together with the name and address of the addressee and of the sender may be written upon mail matter of the third and fourth classes, or upon a card enclosed therewith, without affecting its classification."

BROKER WAS SHOT

WEALTHY NEW YORKER PROBABLY FATALLY HURT.

IS ASSAILED IN HIS OFFICE

Customer Who Had Lost Money Makes Attack—Would-Be Slayer Ends His Own Life by Putting Two Bullets In Head.

A New York, December 21, dispatch says that James H. Oliphant, senior member of the stock exchange firm of James H. Oliphant & Co., died from a bullet wound inflicted at his office by Charles A. Geiger, a customer from Beaufort, S. C., who, after firing upon Oliphant, killed himself.

The men were closeted in Oliphant's private office at the time and all that is known of what immediately proceeded the shooting was learned from the lips of the dying broker. Oliphant said that his refusal to extend further credit to Geiger caused the tragedy. There is reason to believe that Geiger had become mentally irresponsible. A note book found on his person contained computations by which the writer apparently had figured that he would be worth $3,000,000 by January 1, 1908. He actually possessed, so far as his personal effects showed, less than $11.

Geiger owed the Oliphants $5,000 and had been asked for a settlement. He called at their office Friday, and after explaining that he could not meet his obligation, asked that the firm advance him sufficient credit to carry 5,000 shares of a certain stock until a rise in the price could yield him a profit. His proposition was refused and the shooting followed.

PRESIDENT WITHDRAWS TROOPS.

Says It Is the Duty of the State to Preserve Order.

News of the president's order removing the federal troops from Goldfield on December 30 has caused a sensation among the mine-owners and the residents of the city generally. The news was received at noon December 20 and during the afternoon conferences were held between Captain Cox, through Governor Sparks in Goldfield and Colonel Reynolds, commanding the troops there, and between the mine-owners and members of President Roosevelt's commission. President MacKinnon and other officials of the miners' union said that the possibility of disorder or violence of any sort will be no greater after the removal of the troops than now, and that they will use every endeavor to maintain peace and quiet.

Attorney O. M. Hilton, sent by President Moyer of the western federation, to assist in effecting, if possible, a compromise for the western federation of miners, with the mine-owners' association, after a conference with President MacKinnon, said that he was assured that violence would not be attempted. He said also that the position of the miners of the western federation is unchanged.

Captain Cox said that the governor would at once issue instructions to Sheriff Ingalls of the county to the effect that he shall expect the sheriff to adopt vigorous measures to insure the safety and peace of every resident of Esmeralda county, and he would be expected at the first sign of trouble to declare martial law.

A MILLION FOR THE SCHOOLS.

First Bill Passed By the Philippine Assembly.

The first bill has been passed by the Philippine assembly. The bill appropriates $1,000,000 for the construction of schools throughout the provinces. The bill was passed unanimously.

The assembly has without a dissenting speech or vote instructed those who are about to proceed to Washington on five principal heads. The instructions are practically all directed against the tariff laws and the coastwise shipping laws. They ask for the repeal of the shipping laws on the ground that they destroy the chances for increased transportation, even if tariff reform is adopted.

It is also asked that there be given free entry to the states 400,000 tons of sugar, 300,000 pounds of wrapping tobacco and 300,000 pounds of filler, an unlimited amount of manufacture tobacco, Philippine hats, woven goods and manufactured hemp. In return for this privilege the Philippines will admit free of duty agricultural machinery and maintain other tariffs of the existing laws.

The power to conclude commercial treaties is depending on the repeal of the Frye shipping law.

CARRIED ON COWCATCHER.

Two Men in Automobile Run Down at Minneapolis.

A Minneapolis, December 14, dispatch says: Sitting in their automobile and carried for fifty yards on the cowcatcher of a passenger engine, every instant expecting to be ground beneath the wheels of the train, was the harrowing experience of S. J. Hewson, president of the Menominee Hydraulic Press Brick company, and Frank Peck, superintendent of the Menominee branch of the company, in Minnealopis. They escaped, however, without a bruise.

The two were returning from St. Paul. When they approached the Oak street crossing of the Great Northern, Mr. Hewson, who was driving, saw no signals indicating the approach of a train, and after slowing up a moment and neither seeing or hearing anything started across the track at full speed. When the track was reached he saw the passenger train almost upon him. Instead of trying to pass directly in front of the engine he, with remarkable presence of mind, circled the machine.

The automobile was caught upon the fender and carried some distance with the two men in it.

As the train was running at the rate of ten or fifteen miles an hour it was brought to a stop quickly. The automobile was partially wrecked.

BALLOON FOR THE ARMY.

Specifications Given Out by Chief Signal Officer.

Specifications for the construction of a dirigible baloon for the use of the army, and for which the signal office of the war department asked proposals has been issued by General Allen, the chief signal officer. The specifications are quite elaborate and are framed with the view of securing the best possible balloon which the latest developments in aerial navigation can produce. The balloon is to be of silk, inflated with hydrogen, capable of carrying two people weighing 350 pounds with 100 pounds of ballast, must be capable of making a speed of 20 miles per hour in still air, though a lower speed may be proposed at reduced cost, down to 16 miles, or a higher speed up to 24 miles at an enhanced cost. It must make an endurance flight of two hours at an average speed of 70 per cent of the trial requirements and must maintain its equilibrium without change of position by the aeronauts. Trial tests will be made at Fort Mayer, Va.

ELEPHANTS ON RAID

HUMAN BEINGS TAKE HUMAN LIFE IN RHODESIA.

Herds of Wayward Warrior Bands Pillaging and Pressing Against Pretensions Accorded the Animals in South Africa.

Rev. Mr. Grantham, in charge of the Wesleyan mission at Lomagundi, Rhodesia, horticulture of a raid made by a herd of elephants, which resulted in the loss of life.

He says: "I shall be glad if you will make known through the medium of your paper the following incident and my comments on it in the hope that public sentiment may be aroused against a condition of things in which sickly suffer by the sake of a few or a few, who share some of the misery that their hobby inflicts upon others. It MAY lest the natives on the farm suffered serious damage from the depredations of a troop of elephants that raided on seven nights in succession. In their respect we are not the only sufferers, for I am constantly hearing of the same kind of thing throughout the neighborhood. We have no terrible means of protecting our crops, and application for damages are ill-timed.

"On Friday morning two old natives and a picanin, who had been sleeping in a storm erected in the garden, awoke to find that one grown native and three cattle were within a few yards of where they lay. The natives fled in terror, pursued by one of the beasts, which was apparently aroused at the sight of human beings in such close proximity to the crops. The picanin was not on the point of being flailed, but saved himself by rushing on hands and knees through the branches of a fallen tree. The elephant tossed these aside, and continued its pursuit of the old man, who upturned, but the other was overtaken in about 100 yards, and his victim beaks transfixed him through the back, the protruding tusk piercing deep into the soil.

"The furious animal then proceeded to rip its victim to pieces, splitting one leg from buttock to calf and one arm from shoulder to wrist. He had tired long enough to urge his friend to fly to the kraal, or no one would be left to tell the tale.

"We are told that in strict self-defense their may be fired upon. Are we then to wait until one of the brutes is in the act of charging upon us ere we pull a hasty trigger, which is to be likely then not to be our last? And what is the use of firing at one angry elephant when several others are standing by ready to take up the cudgels of their companion if it does fall?

"It is popularly supposed that elephants will not attack a human being unless molested by him, but they will invariably do so if the herd contains any calves. A price is set upon the head of lions—beasts that rarely initiate an attack upon human beings, and whose depredations are generally confined to cattle kraals and spans of donkeys. Why, then, should elephants, which in this district are a much greater scourge than lions, be protected, and the killing of one be a criminal offense?"—Rhodesia Herald.

Can Such Things Be?

A new custom is being introduced this summer at some of the summer hotel dances. It seems to trace its origin back to practices common at the old country barn dances. A young man attending a dance at a nearby resort was surprised when his fair partner at the close of a dance said: "Come over to the end of the veranda. I hid my bottle on the window sill."

"Your what?" gasped the young man.

"My bottle. Why, where have you been? We girls are all taking cocktails to the dances this summer." She produced a good-sized bottle from the window ledge as she spoke and invited her companion to partake. This experience was overcome by the interposition of a glass. Near by another young woman was passing her bottle around among a little group of friends.—N. Y. Tribune.

What It Was.

Said she: "I love no other man, so will be yours for life!"

Then gently round her taper waist his arm in rapture went, and on those ruby lips so chaste the first long kisses spent.

"What is it?" cried Ann Boy, "that draws this heart to mix? What makes those cheeks so bright and coy, those eyes like stars to shine? What is it improves the world so fair when thy sweet form is nigh—that permeates the ambient air, the trees, the flowers, the sky? Oh, say, what is it that constitute the kiss I hold so dear?"

She gently on his bosom fell. "It's asthma, Boy, I fear!"—Answers.

"There's a great idea," said the amateur philosopher.

"What is it?" asked the civilian.

SLOT NOT ALWAYS SILENT

Prof. Garner's Discovery for Ascertaining The Wild Animals' Concerns.

The chatter of monkeys is a real theme and conversation, some folks say. Prof. R. L. Garner, who has spent the greater part of several years in the forests of Africa studying the languages of monkeys and other animals says silence is not the absolute element in the safety of wild animal life. Wild animals are often victims through domestic animals, as also are the wild tribes of human beings. This he attributes to lack of social fastidiousness and nomadic habits. The carnivora, the only natural enemies which other animals have any cause to fear through the sound of their voices, depend almost entirely upon the sense of smell in pursuing their game, every species having its peculiar odor. Also the carnivora generally hunt at night, seizing their prey while asleep. The animals which have the fewest enemies to fear betrayal by their voices are by nature the most silent. During Prof. Garner's three years' residence in the jungle he found that the chimpanzee, frequently breaks the silence of the forest by answering the cries of the various other animals. The gorilla is less loquacious, but there are times when he ignores all danger of betrayal by his native vent to a deluge of speech. Other monkey species are consistent talkers, and can be heard at almost any hour. The trumpeting of the elephant is common at night, and the bellowing of the hippopotamus by day or night. The cat-people cry at night when the leopard goes in search for their dinner and grunting.

INFLUENCE OF DIET ON SLEEP.

Kinds of Certain Foods Largely Imaginary, Says Physician.

That has little influence on sleep, except in so far as it may produce disturbances of digestion and thereby cause one to lose the usual balance of health. The hypnotic effects of certain foods such as onions, lettuce, milk, etc., are chiefly imaginary. Even the time of the last meal of the day is of relatively little importance, except that it is well to let this be at least two or three hours before retiring. But even this rule has many exceptions as many healthy laboring men habitually fall asleep over their plates directly after supper, and children, after bolting the spoon into their ice cream and over the tea
